Structural Steel—Despite the keen competition among local contractors, the price for fabricated structural steel is steadily advancing. A few weeks ago it was possible to make contracts for tonnages upward of 1,000 tons at about $60 to $65 per ton erected, but at the present time $75 per ton is the ruling figure and there are not many contractors who will be willing to undertake contracts at that price. The coal strike has greatly effected the production of steel and has been responsible for several advances by the mills. Although there is considerable new business being awarded, and a large amount of proposed construction is now in the hands of contractors for estimates, the feeling is general throughout the local building industry that a considerable proportion of the proposed work will be held in abeyance unless prices are rapidly stabilized.

Lumber—Trade in both wholesale and retail departments of the local lumber market is extremely active and there are strong indications that the demand is still below the maximum which will no doubt come within the next month or six weeks. Dealers are preparing for a sustained buying movement resulting from the rapidly increasing building program. The residential construction boom, now under way in Brooklyn, Queens and Bronx, and in the nearby suburban districts, is making heavy demands upon the local lumber reserves, and as a consequence prices are very firm, with a slight tendency toward higher levels. Although there is little likelihood of a radical upward price trend, the market is sure to be firm throughout the coming months, and if a shortage develops in any of the more popular lines there might be an advance in prices. At present local dealers have adequate stocks, but reports from manufacturing centers indicate orders in excess of production, and unless this situation is changed there might be some scarcity before the end of the current building season.

Builders' Hardware—Demand is rapidly improving and jobbers and retailers are making active preparations for one of the busiest seasons on record in this line. The building program increases daily and within the next five or six weeks activity in the construction industry should reach its maximum intensity. There are rumors of developing labor disturbances, but the speculative builders, who at present represent the major portion of the active operations in this district, are not particularly worried over the outlook. Hardware prices are firm and likely to hold to their present levels throughout the summer.

Cast Iron Pipe—The demand for this commodity continues strong and producers anticipate excellent business throughout the remainder of the year. Municipal business is lighter than it was a few weeks ago, but there is considerable in prospect and private buying is steadily gaining in volume.

Linseed Oil—Some improvement in the demand for this commodity has been noted during the past week and in general the market is stronger than it has been for quite some time. Although business has been largely confined to small orders for immediate delivery there is increased inquiry on car load lot business. Local dealers are of the opinion that business will materially change for the better as the spring building season matures.

Nails—The situation in the local nail market is practically unchanged with demand light but fair indications of a considerable improvement in trade during the next month or six weeks. Both manufacturers and jobbers are looking forward to a vast amount of business from the apartment house building program now getting ready to start and the promise of a large volume of suburban building of one kind or another. Nail quotations are unchanged, with New York prices for cut nails $4 to $4.25 base, per keg, and wire nails $3.25 base, per keg.

Window Glass—The speculative building boom now under way in practically all boroughs of New York City is creating a very active demand for both plate and window glass. Local jobbers anticipate steadily increasing business throughout the balance of the year.

Your Expenses Are Less

People are inclined to think that money is money and that it makes little difference where you borrow it.

If it costs you less to borrow on mortgage from us than it does elsewhere, this is one good reason for borrowing from us.

On ordinary loans of medium size our charge is one per cent. plus the charges for papers, stamps and surveys. For building loans or unusual loans the fees are higher.

We stand ready to quote in advance to you the exact cost of securing the loan and if you want to borrow money on any of your properties we shall be very glad to have you talk it over with our Mortgage

Tenants Preferred and Tenants Common

A new term has crept into the nomenclature of those New Yorkers interested either as holders or occupants of rentable housing space within the city limits. By the decision handed down in the Appellate Division, First Department, in the case of the Farnham Realty Corporation against William M. Posner, a tenant, which was printed in THE RECORD AND GUIDE last week, the "preferred tenant" is given legal status.

Tenants Preferred are those lucky individuals holding leases of apartments or houses in effect prior to October 1, 1920. It was for their special benefit, and for their protection only, the court holds, that the Emergency Rent Laws were enacted. With respect to them the landlords were by these laws deprived until November 1, 1922, since extended to February 15, 1924, of the right to begin "all proceedings to dispossess them, except for the reasons hereinafter stated, so long as they paid a 'reasonable rent,' which is the term used for a statutory charge for use and occupation, to be ascertained judicially through a method provided by the statutes." The line between Tenants Preferred and Tenants Common is more clearly defined in the further finding of the court which declares that "one class of landlords is selected for regulation because one class conspicuously offends; one class of tenants has protection because all who seek homes cannot be provided with places to sleep and eat. Those who are out of possession, willing to pay exorbitant rentals, or unable to pay any rental whatever, have been left to shift for themselves."

This summing up of the effect of the Emergency Rent Laws upon the aggregate body of residents of this city is not the hasty dictum of police-court magistrates, not the biased assumption of owners or dealers in real estate, not the agonized cry of homeless ones or those forced to double up in cramped and unsanitary quarters to escape walking the pavements, but is the matured judgment of next to the highest court in the state, and, because of the unanimous decision, one which is unlikely to be reversed if carried up to the Court of Appeals. According to the judgment of this high tribunal the Emergency Rent Laws, as originally enacted, mark as conspicuous offenders, in the sense of being notorious profiteers, all those landlords who had signed leases with tenants in force prior to October 1, 1920.

It is neither just nor right that practically every owner and agent of housing realty in the city should be branded by the Emergency Rent Laws as a profiteer whether he was merely advancing rentals in line with the general advance in prices of every other commodity or was coercing tenants in ways only resorted to by unscrupulous outsiders who had rushed into the real estate field to exploit the harassed and overcrowded people of this city for personal gain. The Emergency Rent Laws, this decision says, protected those who had homes because all who needed homes could not get them, instead of attempting to provide homes for those who had none. The emergency laws, this opinion holds, left Tenants Common, those who had no homes and could not get them, "to shift for themselves."

Having thus definitely characterized the Emergency Rent Laws as enacted for the benefit of those who had, instead of for the assistance of those who had not, the court takes up the considerations operating in the cases of those less fortunate than the favored Tenants Preferred. As between persons seeking homes and landlords there was an equality. If the landlord demanded more than the prospective tenant could pay the lease was not made. "If rentals were so high," the court holds, "by reason of scarcity of housing facilities, as to make an unusually large return on the investment, capital would be attracted, building of dwellings, apartments and tenements would be stimulated, and the level of rents would be lowered to that of the reasonable return on the investment."

Thus profoundly does the court reaffirm the efficacy of the great law of supply and demand. Without the Emergency Rent Laws there would have been no Tenants Preferred, and the suffering which has been endured patiently by the Tenants Common would have been distributed more evenly over the aggregate mass of the people. With rentals taking the general upward trend of unrestricted prices for other commodities a building boom which was delayed by the agitation resulting in the enactment of the Emergency Rent Laws might have started two years ago instead of being now in its initial stages, and the housing shortage by now might have been measurably relieved. Had the Legislature taken into consideration the facts which the Appellate Division now so aptly sets forth (instead of being actuated by demagogic motives), and had courageously refused to enact laws abrogating property rights, the inconveniences of a short period of readjustment of the housing situation on economic lines unquestionably would have been more than offset by the effect higher rentals would have had in diminishing "emergency" conditions by stimulating apartment-house construction.

Elements of Danger in Building Boom

Commitments for building operations during the month of April totaled $353,192,000 in the twenty-seven Northeastern States. This is a record figure, and is approximately $35,500,000 greater than the previous high total of July, 1919. Construction statistics as tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company show that various sections of the United States are experiencing a building movement of unprecedented proportions and there is every present indication that the volume of active construction will steadily increase rather than diminish as the year progresses.

Reports from the New York district and also from the New England territory show significant gains in active building during the past month and in both of these sections new high records have been established. The total of April commitments for New York City projects is extremely high and it substantiates the general feeling that the local building industry will have all of the work it is capable of handling with efficiency during the coming six or eight months at least.

In April contracts were awarded for 639 building and engineering operations, all of which are scheduled for locations in Greater New York. This work represents an outlay of approximately $80,000,000, a very high figure when compared with the totals for the previous months. The best evidence of the situation which has been created by the rush to get this abnormal amount of new construction started is the effect upon the market for building materials and the supply of skilled labor required to do the work.

A resultant of the keen competition for men and materials necessary for the great program of projected construction is a serious shortage of certain basic building materials, with notably advancing price trends for these commodities, and a decide scarcity of skilled mechanics to do the work in hand. Bricklayers and carpenters are unusually scarce, with practically none of the active operations in New York City more than sixty per cent. manned with bricklayers, and then only upon the payment of substantial bonuses over the recognized union wage scale. Speculative builders are suffering particularly in this regard. Not only the shortage of men and materials but the high prices for essential labor and commodities have increased their construction costs far above their original estimates.

With the great volume of new construction being released for an immediate start, plus the growing shortage of men and supplies, there is the likelihood that the local building industry will be forced into the position of contracting for more work than it will be able to absorb without difficulty. Undoubtedly there is now more construction actually under contract or planned for early release than the industry is able to handle without extending its facilities beyond the danger point. There is certain to be a slowing down all along the line during the next few months on operations that should proceed with all possible haste if mounting costs are not to eliminate all profit margins.

While everyone concerned with the welfare and progress of the local building industry hesitates to argue for a curtailment of activity in general, there is no doubt in the minds of those best informed about prevailing conditions as to the wisdom of going slow with the release of additional jobs until the industry has completed existing commitments.

New York Building Congress Inaugurates Luncheon Meetings

THE Committee on Surveys of the New York Building Congress has arranged for the first of a series of luncheon meetings to be held at the Engineers' Club, 32 West Fortieth street, Tuesday, May 9, at 12:45 p. m., sharp. The speaker will be Dr. Benjamin M. Anderson, Jr., economist of the Chase National Bank, who will deliver an address on "Price Trend in Trade." This address will be followed by an opportunity for an open discussion if the time permits. The meeting will start promptly and will terminate at 2:15 p. m. The entire membership of the New York Building Congress has been invited to attend and brings guests who might be interested in the Congress idea.

Burt L. Fenner, of McKim, Mead & White, architects, chairman of the Committee on Apprenticeship for the New York Building Congress, made the following statement as to the progress of the work of developing building trade apprentices in New York City:

"In response to the increasing need for skilled and properly trained mechanics in the building trades of the Metropolitan District the Executive Board of the New York Building Congress at its meeting January 10, 1922, established a committee to investigate the conditions and submit recommendations. The personnel of this committee included investors, architects, engineers, contractors, labor representatives and others less directly related to the building industry.

"After a careful investigation of the source of labor supply and the conditions which generally affect it the committee determined that the only possible way in which the demand for properly trained mechanics could be met is in the development of the system of training in the building trades which would not only be productive of results in increased proficiency but also make the building industry attractive to the American youth who constitutes such excellent material. Recommendations to this effect were submitted to the executive board and a definite program of development was determined upon to meet this basic need.

"An executive office was opened at 347 Madison avenue and Mr. Frank L. Glynn, a specialist on apprenticeship, employed to serve with the committee subject to development in the judgment of the executive board of the congress.

"The first work of the committee found expression in Bulletin No. 1 on an apprenticeship system for the building trades in the Metropolitan District issued in March and sent to each member of the Congress.

"The main purpose of this bulletin was to work out a plan of sound educational merit which would be acceptable to employers and to labor with the result that it has been endorsed officially by the New York Building Trades Employers' Association, the New York Building Trades Council, and the New York State Department of Education.

This plan covers the administration, management, operation, and control of the apprenticeship system proposed and includes several important principles that are vital to its success.

"The purpose of the Congress is to foster, encourage and stimulate. The administration and management is to be vested in a General Joint Apprenticeship Committee consisting of five employers to be selected by the associations of building employers, five labor men to be selected by the building trades' unions and three members of the New York Building Congress, none of whom are to be identified directly with either contractors or labor.

"This Committee will have full power to administer and direct, being financed equally and jointly by the employers' associations and the labor unions. It will also have the necessary authority to employ for full time service such assistants as may be necessary to develop the program.

"The standards and policies to be established for each trade division of the industry are to be determined by the Joint Trade Board for each such division and approved by the association and unions so represented.

"The operation of the service will consist of having the apprentice learn the trade through his regular employment and receive his instruction covering the related technical studies of applied mathematics, science, trade information and citizenship in the continuation and evening schools under the City Board of Education.

"Since the adoption of the general plan the committee has developed an apprenticeship system definitely applied to the carpentry trade as involved in building, cabinet making, parquet floor work, cement form work and metal covered door and window work.

"This plan has been endorsed by the Carpenters' Joint Committee on Trade Agreement, the Master Carpenters' Association and the Carpenters District Trades' Council.

"The preliminary work is now being done for the tile laying apprenticeship and others, in their order of importance, as the general needs of the industry may require.

"In conclusion it may be stated that we have not only met with the heartiest co-operation from all sides locally but a widespread interest has also been aroused throughout the country in response to the universal need for such a development."

Tenant Ownership Movement Spreading Throughout City

Principally Confined at First to Co-operative Apartments, High-Stoop and American Basement Houses, It Now Includes Many Business Properties

THE buying by tenants of private residences and business properties which has been going on steadily during the last eighteen months and with seemingly increasing volume is considered by leaders in the real estate market as an auspicious omen for increasing investment interest in real property. The main cause of this strong movement is an aftermath of the World War, when a shortage of residential and business space was everywhere evident throughout the city and when the keenness of demand caused great increases in rentals on new leases.

For those who had the money available to buy the home or place of business occupied by them, instead of paying high rentals, it was a wise thing to do, because it not only assured them of permanency in a desirable neighborhood, but it also assured them against further rental increases due to competition with others for the same quarters. In the long run ownership proves an economy to an owner provided he occupies the property. He obtains a big return on his investment in more ways than one.

So far as shortage of living space is concerned the housing crisis did one good thing; it made popular again the private dwelling with high stoop or American basement, both of which types had lost caste through the increasing popularity of the apartment house. Many persons who were driven to rent old dwellings have bought them and will never return to apartment houses, especially families with children. The high prices of first-class apartments since the war has had another favorable effect on private dwellings of the old type. It has caused many younger couples of well-to-do families to buy and live in three and four-story dwellings in neighborhoods which have been going back in recent years. This in turn has had a beneficial effect on adjacent values. Especially has there been a toning up of residential values in the blocks from Fiftieth to Seventieth streets, between Park and Third avenues, where old dwellings of the character described abound.

Medium-sized business properties especially have been in strong demand for ownership by the tenants. The lower parts of Pearl, Front and Water streets have witnessed many such purchases, and only a few days ago an old and well-known firm on South street bought a large warehouse there running through to Front street which it had long occupied under lease. The lower West side has been just as active in tenant buying. In West street, Greenwich street, White street, Lispenard street, West Broadway, Franklin street, Canal street, Hudson street, and throughout Greenwich Village and contiguous areas tenants have bought the properties they occupy for business purposes and have leased the parts of the building not needed for their own use, while in other instances they have bought for the purpose of occupying the entire building. Even though fee values are higher than in the past these tenants have found it wise to buy.

The economy of business-building ownership for many is demonstrated in a recent sale on the Lower West Side. The buyer was a firm that had for more than twenty years occupied leased quarters in the lower Wall-street region. Because of big rental increase they moved to the Beekman-street district, where a rental increase again drove them out. As a matter of fact they had been enjoying very low rent on an old lease in the first place. Finally they changed their view on the situation which led to the purchase in the lower West Side. Brokers who dealt with them know that it would have been economically wiser if they had bought in the neighborhood they were originally forced out of.

It is felt that general buying by business tenants of the properties they occupy has given stronger basis to real estate throughout the city because money so invested would otherwise have gone into Wall Street. The circumstances has aroused new confidence in real property and made it a stronger commodity than it has been for many years.

Distinguished during the last eighteen months for buying properties previously leased is the wholesale produce business, especially the butter-and-egg branch of it. The vehicular tunnel under the North River will have a Manhattan entrance and exit adjacent to this district, and produce merchants saw the advantage of owning and holding fast to the quarters they were occupying. The purpose of buyers here is true of tenant buyers throughout town, to hold fast to that which is good for them commercially and economically.

The Second and Third avenue sections of Yorkville and Harlem form another part of the city where tenants of stores have bought the old tenement houses with stores in the ground floors for the purpose of retaining the desired business location. Sales in that section to tenants are still being made. The General Cigar Company, which had leased a 7-story building at the southeast corner of Second avenue and Fifty-fourth street, recently bought the property. In the lower East Side tenants recently bought six 3 and 4-story buildings forming the southwest corner of Bleecker and Elizabeth streets. A druggist at 223 Grand street, after being a tenant for thirty-five years, has bought the 5-story loft building at that address. Wing Woh Chong & Co., wholesale Chinese merchants, recently bought 30-32 Pell street, which they had leased for a long time previously. The tenants of the 5-story loft building at 57 Beekman street bought it. In order to assure itself of a permanent strategic corner on Union Square the Corn Exchange Bank recently acquired the 6-story building at the south corner of the Square and East Sixteenth street, which it had previously leased. Not long ago a tenant bought the apartment house with stores at 43 East Fifty-ninth street. Tenant merchants occupying the 12-story mercantile building at the northwest corner of Fourth avenue and Twenty-first street have bought it after having leased it for a term.

There is no part of town that the tenant buying movement has not reached. The Bronx and Brooklyn each has such a movement, although it is not so extensive nor so strong as in Manhattan. The West Side, the upper West Side and Harlem in recent months have been the most active in tenant buying. The Clef Club a few days ago bought the property it leased as a clubhouse at 132-134 West Fifty-third street. The Childs restaurant corporation bought the 4-story building at 221 Sixth avenue, which it had previously occupied under a long lease. Chain stores consider it good business to buy their locations instead of depending on leases of from 21 years upward to protect them in the great expense of fitting up their establishments. Tenants not long ago bought the 12-story building at the northeast corner of Seventh avenue and Twenty-fourth street. Eight years ago the tenants of the 12-story loft building at 20-26 West Thirty-sixth street leased it at an aggregate rental

May 1 Moving Below Normal Proportions of Pre-War Days

Principal Changes Took City Renters to Homes Bought in Suburbs, But Queens Profited Somewhat at Expense of Other Boroughs

THE volume of moving on May 1 from point to point within the city was less than normal when compared with conditions previous to the housing shortage that began three years ago. It was predicted last week, by those who do the bulk of the carting, that this would be the situation on the first day of the month. The total amount of moving was greater, however, than on May 1, 1920, or last year, but most of this was to residential points beyond the city limits, to and within Queens Borough, and the moving of tenants from one office or mercantile building to another. There was a modicum of moving to the Bronx, and some moving to and from points in Brooklyn. It looks as if May 1 as a date for general moving will not be so popular as formerly for years to come. A change in the amount of vacant living space in the future may restore May 1 to favor as a usual time of the year for changing residence. No one, neither the real estate men nor the moving-van owners, is willing to prophesy as to future activity at the ancient moving period. The housing situation has everything to do with it.

About one-half of the vans in the greater city were busy on the first of the month, whereas in the heyday of spring moving every van, truck and wagon was recruited for service, as well as many freight cars to suburban points. Tenants just now are quite prone to remain where they are, and this applies to the suburbs as well as to the city. Tenants in houses in suburban towns of New York and New Jersey renewed their leases on May 1, if they could, for another year. Most of them succeeded in doing so. The housing shortage is almost as acute in many suburbs as it has been in this city, for those who rent living space. While the bulk of the moving in New York City was to suburban places those who moved in most cases took possession of homes they had bought.

The outlying sections of Queens Borough received a large influx of home owners from the labor element of Manhattan's population, who utilized their savings for paying substantial amounts down on one-family houses. The rapid transit routes in Queens have brought much of its area within the five-cent fare zone. There has been much buying of this kind in the outlying sections of Jamaica, in Corona, in Ozone Park, in Rosedale and other comparatively open parts of the borough. Many two-family houses have been sold to the same kind of buyers, who rent the upper part to a tenant at a rental that helps materially to pay their carrying charge and instalments on the mortgage.

It is a question, in the opinion of many observers, whether the heavy exodus to the suburbs this spring will tend to reduce apartment rentals in the Bronx and Brooklyn or whether the steady demand for living space in town will offset the movement. The fact is that rents are very high even thirty miles from New York to which must be added the expense of commutation. The difference is that in the suburbs the tenant obtains a house instead of an apartment or he obtains an apartment in a good two-family house with suburban surroundings.

of $600,000; they recently purchased it. The tenant of the 3-story business building at 539 West Fifty-third street, after leasing it continuously for thirty-five years, recently took title to it. A furniture firm that had long had quarters at the northwest corner of Sixth avenue and Thirty-seventh street bought the group of old buildings situated there for $600,000. An antique dealer who for some time had leased the former fine residence of the late John F. Carroll at 40 West Fifty-seventh street, recently bought it. A well-known restaurateur who long occupied the 3-story brick building, 224-226 West Forty-seventh street, near Times Square, has taken title to it so as to be assured of permanent location near the Square. Another restaurateur not long ago purchased 185 West Forty-ninth street, near Seventh avenue, which he occupied under a lease.

Eighth avenue has witnessed a strong tenant buying campaign. A tenant bought the buildings comprising 355-357 Eighth avenue with an L to 30 West Twenty-eighth street. A 4-story apartment house with store at 147 Eighth avenue was bought by the store tenant. Other tenant purchases have been made there and still others are understood to be in course of negotiation. The West Side Club, after leasing the dwelling, 270 West Eighty-fourth street, for a number of years, recently bought it. The most notable farthest north buying in Manhattan was that of six store tenants who bought the 2-story brick apartment and store building, 110-120 Dyckman street. Each bought the particular part of the building he uses.

One of the big deals uptown was the purchase by the Gotham National Bank of the leasehold comprising part of the site of its new building at the northwest corner of Broadway and Fifty-ninth street, from the estate of Amos R. Eno. A few weeks ago a firm of tenant warehousemen bought the 12-story warehouse at Park avenue and 125th street and another large warehouse in the western part of 125th street which they had leased. The large boarding garage at 310-312 West 144th street was recently bought by the lessee. A florist who for thirty-two years had leased from the estate of William Waldorf Astor the vacant plot, 99.1 x 191.8, at the northeast corner of Lenox avenue and 129th street, bought the property in order to insure the permanency of his hothouse there. Because of its growing strength as a traffic center, the southwest corner of Broadway and Cathedral Parkway, containing a 2-story business building, was sold a few days ago to the tenant, the Du Barry Pastry Shop. At a price said to be $400,000 the 5-story business building, 213-217 West 125th street, was recently bought by the principal tenant.

Emulating some of its taxpayers, the City of New York recently became the owner of the 9-story concrete building covering a Concord-street block, from Duffield street to Flatbush avenue extension, in Brooklyn. And the lessee of the Ostend Hotel, at Far Rockaway, bought that property in preference to signing a new lease for it.

Aluminum Shingles the Latest Type of Roofing

A NEW type of roofing has recently appeared on the market in the form of aluminum shingles. This metal has been made available by the recent reduction of production cost and as it is a metal that will not corrode, rust, dry out, crack, peel, curl or otherwise deteriorate it makes a good roofing material.

Special features of the new shingle obviate the use of solder, yet afford absolutely water-tight joints. Another feature of interest to contractors is that this design makes it possible to work from the ridge down, eliminating all scaffolding, and damage to the laid shingles from the weight of the workmen. The shingle is secured to the sheathing by aluminum nails, which are completely covered by the tile below. Each shingle is designed to be securely locked in place at both sides and ends and have ample corrugations to allow the circulation of air.

The exposed surface of each shingle is 12 by 14 inches, 86 to the 100 square feet. The weight is about 40 pounds to the 100 square feet, being 4 per cent. that of tile and 7 per cent. that of slate. This will allow lighter roof construction and a corresponding saving in cost. The shingles cost about the same as tile

Modern Bank and Office Building on Grand Union Hotel Site

S. W. Straus & Co. Underwrote $6,000,000 Serial Bond Issue on Pershing Square
Project From Designs by York & Sawyer and John Sloan

FOUNDATION work is now under way for the twenty-four story bank and office building being erected at the southeast corner of Park Avenue and Forty-second Street, directly opposite the Grand Central Terminal. This structure is being built by the Charles T. Wills Company, Inc. under a general contract, and it is planned for completion by March 1, 1923.

The construction of this project was made possible by S. W. Straus & Co., investment bankers, who recently underwrote a first mortgage serial bond issue of $6,000,000 on the land and building. The plans for the structure were prepared by York & Sawyer and John Sloan, associate architects, and the structural steel frame will be erected by Post & McCord.

The Pershing Square Building, as this structure will be known, will occupy the site made famous by the old Grand Union Hotel, and it will be unique among the recent office structures in New York City, being designed without setbacks as required in the Zoning Law for new buildings over definite heights. It was possible to proceed in this case without the usual setbacks because the foundation footings were laid prior to the enactment of the law.

The site comprises a Park-Avenue frontage of 197.6 feet, between Forty-first and Forty-second Streets, with a depth on each of these streets of 125 1/2 feet. The plans call for a large restaurant in the basement, with a T arcade and shops on the first floor. A monumental banking room, 190 x 120 feet, with a ceiling height of 29 feet, will occupy the second third floors, above which there will be twenty-one office floors. There will be a direct entrance through the basement to the Grand Central Terminal and three stairways from the street level will lead to the subway.

The Forty-second Street crosstown subway will have its new station in the sub-basement of this building. The plans call for the installation of fifteen high-speed electric elevators of the traction type, arranged in two banks, for local and express service.

The facade will be constructed of granite face brick and polychrome terra cotta, after the pre-Renaissance period of Northern Italy. The Bowery Savings Bank's Grand Central Branch, now under construction, adjoins the Pershing Square building on the east.

The financing for the Pershing Square Building was arranged by the Mandel-Ehrich Corporation. Seward N. Ehrich is secretary and treasurer of the Pershing Square Corporation, owner of the new building. Although the structure will not be ready for occupancy for nearly a year several leases for office space already have been signed, including one by the Royal Indemnity Company, who have taken the fourth, fifth and sixth floors. The Royal Baking Powder Company also has leased an entire floor, and several important leases are now under negotiation with corporations for portions of the 400,000 square feet of space in the building available as high class offices.

Cement Output Is Steady

STATISTICS prepared by the United States Geological Survey show cement production for the first quarter of 1922 at 15,254,000 bbl., as against 15,240,000 bbl. for the same period in 1921. Shipments totaled 13,218,000 bbl., as compared with 12,091,000 bbl. for the first three months of 1921. Although the production rate for the first three months of 1922 is practically the same as that for the first quarter of last year, increased shipments over last year indicate growing demand. Stocks on hand at the end of March, 1922, aggregated 13,824,000 bbl., as compared with 12,000,000 bbl. inventoried on March 31, 1921.

Department of Commerce reports show imports of hydraulic cement in March amounting to 1,597 bbl., valued at $4,308. The total for 1921 was 122,317 bbl., worth $388,828. March imports were from Mexico, 902 bbl.; France, 322 bbl.; Japan, 253 bbl.; other countries, 120 bbl. Total exports of hydraulic cement in 1921 amounted to 1,181,014 bbl., which were valued at $4,276,986.

WATER HEATING & HOUSE HEATING DIVISION

at No. 130 East Fifteenth Street

OUR experts will give prompt attention to those who are considering the use of Gas either for Heating Water or the Heating of a House, Apartment, Loft or Large Building.

Architects and Builders, with advantage to themselves and their clients, should ask for the services of one of our highly qualified Experts. His services are gratis.

As to Gas Water Heating: There are Gas Water Heaters for use in the Home, Office or Factory. Then again we install a Gas Water Heating System that will furnish a large building with an instantaneous, uninterrupted, Summer or all-year-round supply of hot water. The Gas Boiler installed requires no attention. It regulates itself automatically.

Many private houses are using this System, as well as many large buildings. One of the latter requires nearly 40,000 gallons of hot water every week. Another large building requires nearly 6,000 gallons a day, every drop of which is Gas heated.

Every person interested in a newly constructed building, or one under construction or contemplated, or in a building being or about to be remodeled, should consider the advantages of Gas Water Heating.

Review of Real Estate Market for the Current Week

Fifth Avenue Sales and Large Apartment Houses Throughout City as Well as Big Leases Were the Strongest Features

FIFTH AVENUE led the real estate market this week, while some of the blocks adjacent to it contributed interesting transactions. The tall and modern Connick building at 244 Fifth avenue, which was acquired some time ago by well known operators, was turned over at a good profit to them. The late Andrew J. Connick, who laid the foundations of his fortune as a first-class tailor on the avenue and who augmented it largely in operations on Washington Heights and elsewhere during the boom days, built the Fifth avenue structure just sold and had his tailoring business there. While customers were being measured for new suits by his assistants, Mr. Connick would sit near a big front window of the second floor and negotiate sales and purchases of property. He died only a few years ago. A large vacant corner at Fifth avenue and 109th street was sold by operators to builders who will improve it with fine apartment houses. Fifth avenue and the Murray Hill section of Madison avenue were long bones of contention between private house owners and apartment house builders. It looks now as if the latter are to have their own way except as to the height of apartment buildings. The large and costly residence of J. Henry Dick, at 20 East 53d street and near Fifth avenue, was leased for a term of 21 years for business purposes.

Max Natanson bought a good parcel near Fifth avenue.

Large apartment houses in the upper West and upper East sides, the aggregate values of which runs into several millions of dollars, changed hands during the week. There were some large apartment houses in the Bronx sold as well. In both boroughs corner apartment houses formed a notable feature of the dealing. In the Bronx, too, there were good sales of river front parcels for mercantile uses. Throughout the city there was an abundance of dealing in all kinds of multi-family houses, taxpayers, private dwellings and mercantile buildings. There was some buying of properties by tenants who had long occupied them. Brooklyn contributed some important sales. In the Bronx one investor bought five apartment houses on Webster avenue, while a taxpayer containing 14 stores at Jerome avenue and Fordham road passed to new hands.

Large leases formed a strong phase of the week's business. The Wendel estate leased a Lexington avenue corner for 42 years; a market property on a Madison avenue corner was leased, net, for 21 years; the Samuel J. Tilden estate leased a building on West 38th street, net, for 21 years; and there were other leases that show increment of New York real estate as well as those cited.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

THE total number of sales reported, but not recorded in Manhattan this week was 89, as against 85 last week and 90 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th st was 40, as compared with 30 last week and 31 a year ago.

The number of sales north of 59th st was 49, as compared with 55 last week and 59 a year ago.

From the Bronx 52 sales at private contract were reported, as against 48 last week and 27 a year ago.

Statistical tables, including the number of recorded instruments, will be found on page 562.

Sale on Rockefeller Block

M. & L. Hess sold for Mrs. Frances N. Wulff to the Life Holding Corporation, N. J. Hess, president, 31 West 54th st, a 4-sty and basement stone dwelling, on a lot 20x100.5. It is two doors west of the residence of Chauncey M. Depew and on the same block with John D. Rockefeller's town house and other Rockefeller holdings. For some years the block has been under the special protection of John D. Rockefeller and his son, who now control the majority of the houses in the vicinity of their mansions, it having been their aim to protect the block against invasion by business interests.

However, 31 West 54th st is one of the few houses in the block now available for business purposes, owing to the fact of its having been used for business occupation before the Zoning Law went into effect. The premises will be extensively altered for occupancy by the fine arts exclusively.

Sell Judge Scott's Home

The 4-sty and basement stone residence of the late Justice Francis M. Scott at 42 Park av, adjoining the northwest corner of 36th st, has been sold. It is on a lot 24x105. It was held at $100,000. It is separated from the library garden of the J. P. Morgan family by the home of Louise P. Satterlee at 37 East 36th st.

Old Tenant Buys Park Pl. Parcel

Horace S. Ely & Co. sold 34 Park pl, an altered 5-sty stone and brick loft building, on lot 25.9x75, for the de Rham estate. The purchaser is Max Brook, who has been a tenant in the building for 30 years. The property has been under one ownership since 1849.

L. I. City Site for Motion Picture Firm

Film Storage and Forwarding Corporation sold the northeast corner of Harris and Van Alst avs, Long Island City, a plot containing 14,000 square feet and located close to the Queensboro Bridge Plaza, which property was assembled from Emeline B. Lott, T. M. Galbreath and others. The purchasers will improve the property with a 2-sty and basement building of the highest type of modern construction, the larger part of which will be occupied by film storage vaults, film projection and development rooms, and the balance to be used as a laboratory. Plans and specifications have already been approved, and the construction work will be done by the Wharton-Green Co. of Manhattan. Long Island City is already the home of the Famous Players studio and laboratory, the G. M. laboratory and the contemplated Selznick studios, which, with the above enterprise, is a long stride towards centralizing the location of the moving picture industry in the East.

Resale of a Penn Zone Site

Another deal for the site at 255-265 West 33d st, originally bought by the "Evening Post" for a new home and sold by it a couple of months ago, is forecast by the recent formation at Albany of the 255 West 33d Street Corporation. The company was formed by Davis, Wagner, Heater & Holton, attorneys, who refused any information concerning the transaction. The property measures 125x98.9. It is located just east of Eighth av, opposite the Pennsylvania Station. Title was taken in February by Arthur H. Springer.

Connick Building Bought

F. R. Wood & Co. sold for Mandelbaum & Lewine to John Markel, a coal operator, 244 Fifth av, an 11-sty stone building, on a plot 31.4 x100, adjoining the southwest corner of 28th st. It was held at $475,000. It is rented under an old lease at $55,000 a year.

The late Andrew J. Connick, merchant tailor and real estate operator, built the building for his own occupancy. It is known as the Connick Building.

New Operator in New York Realty

Haggstrom-Callen Co. sold for Adolph Weiss to Nathan Polak, president of the Pull Worth 5 and 10 Cent Stores, the 5-sty triple apartment house 157 West 66th st, on a plot 30.93x100.5. The property was held at $60,000. This is the first purchase by Mr. Polak in New York. He intends to operate in high class realty in this city.

Good Deal in Fourth Ave.

The 7-sty Aldine Hotel at 429 and 431 Fourth av, which was purchased last month by the 126th Street Holding Co., has been resold to Jerome C. and Mortimer G. Mayer, who have leased it to the newly formed 431 Fourth Avenue Holding Co., which will continue to operate it as a hotel.

The structure stands on a site 31.4x100, between 29th and 30th sts, and has been leased for 42 years at an annual rental of about $18,000. A. A. and S. Levine and A. Pelkes are the directors of the leasing company, which is represented by Jacob L. Holtzmann as attorney. The 12th Street Holding Co. acquired the property from the Harry C. Hallenbeck estate, which held it at $155,000.

Big Sale in East 52d Street

Combined Real Estate Interests, Inc., sold through George V. McNulty and Paul D. Saxe to the 114 East 52d Street Corporation 114-122 East 52d st, five 4-sty stone flats, each on a lot 18x100.5, between Park and Lexington avs. It adjoins an annex to Public School 18 and abuts the main school building.

On the site the new owner will build a 15-sty fireproof apartment hotel containing suites of from 1 to 3 rooms each. The heads of the purchasing company are William L. O'Connell, vice-president of the Gurney Elevator Co. and J. Axelrod & Son.

The operation is being financed by the Columbia Mortgage Co., who have arranged a first mortgage serial bond issue of $925,000.

Estate Sells West Side Corner

The William K. Thorne estate sold the four 5-sty tenement houses with stores and one dwelling, at the northeast corner of Eighth av and 20th st, which had been in the selling family for a number of years. The property is known as 198 to 204 Eighth av and 263 and 265 West 20th st, and has a frontage of 83.10 feet on the avenue and 95.9 feet on the street. It was held at about $175,000.

Fifth Ave. Parcel in New Hands

The Oceanic Investing Co. bought from Van Horne Norrie the 4-sty and basement stone dwelling, on a lot 19x100, at 585 Fifth av. The buying company is a large owner of realty in that section. The sale is recorded.

"Murray's" Goes for Office Purposes

Dunmore Realty Co., Victor M. Earle, president, sold 228-233 West 42d st, a 6-sty brick and stone building, on a plot 75x98.9, between Seventh and Eighth avs. It is occupied by Murray's Restaurant. The assessed valuation is $450,000. The buyers will remodel the structure into an office building.

Natanson Buys Near Fifth Ave.

Max N. Natanson purchased from the United States Trust Co. of New York, executor of the estate of the late Edmund Randolph, 6 East 48th st, a 4-sty and basement stone dwelling, on a lot 25x100.5, 150 feet east of Fifth av. The property was held at $175,000 and was purchased for all cash. Brown, Wheelock Co. was the broker.

Fine Dwelling Sold

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. sold for E. Dimon Bird, of Tiffany & Co., to a buyer, for occupancy, 22 East 63d st, a 5-sty brick American basement dwelling, on a lot 18.9x100.5, adjoining the southwest corner of Madison av. It was held at $90,000.

Woman Buys Fifth Ave. Plot

The former Peter Cooper Hewitt property at the northeast corner of Fifth av and 109th st, adjoining the property purchased by the city for a "Circle" at Fifth av and 110th st, has been purchased by a woman who, it is said, plans to bring about an improvement which will aid materially in improving that particular section of Fifth av, which at present, being unrestricted, is dotted with low buildings used principally for automobile service stations.

December from the Hewitt heirs, are the sellers. The new owner is a client of J. Wallace Page of Marston & Co., who were the brokers in the sale to Sobel Bros. The land, which at present is used for an automobile service station, measures 100x100 feet. It was held at $175,000.

Big Deal in Heights Apartments

Golding Bros., builders, sold the two 6-sty and basement elevator apartment houses covering the block front on the east side of Fort Washington av, between 170th and 171st sts, to the 331 Central Park West Corporation. The plot is 195.2x133.10x195x125. G. & E. Blum are the architects of the buildings, which were completed last August, and were all rented before completion and show a gross rental of about $150,000 a year. They were held at $900,000.

Sells Dyckman Tract Block

Fine Apartment Houses Sold

The Admaston and the Evanston apartment houses, both 12-sty structures, on the upper West Side, have been purchased by the Winter Realities, Inc., Benjamin Winter, president, from the Morewood Realty Holding Co., which has been holding them at about $3,000,000. The Admaston, at the northwest corner of Broadway and 89th st, covers a plot 150x100.8. The Evanston, at the southwest corner of West End av and 90th st, covers a plot 162.6x100.8. The Admaston contains 70 suites and 7 stores on Broadway. The Evanston contains 50 suites, 22 of which are of the duplex type.

The houses were purchased by the sellers when completed by the late George F. Johnson and his associates on ground purchased from Robert E. Dowling, who had secured the block from the Evans estate. Dr. Evans bought the block in 1873, title coming to him through some of the oldest families in New York, including the De Lanceys, Apthorps, Howlands, &c, while William B. Astor bought several blocks in this immediate vicinity at about the same period.

The Evans estate was founded by Thomas W. Evans, the American dentist, who built up a large practice in Paris, and who purchased properties in this city and Philadelphia, which he left to establish the "Thomas W. Evans Museum and Institute Society of Philadelphia."

The corner adjoining the Admaston was purchased by Robert Goetel from Mr. Dowling. Upon it was erected a low theatre building, which favors the abutting houses with excellent light. James C. Ewing, vice-president of the Morewood Realty Holding Co., represented the sellers in the negotiations.

Investor Buys Sixth Ave. Corner

The 1-sty building at the northeast corner of Sixth av and 9th st, on a plot 40.4x93, in which is a station of the Hudson tube line, has been sold through Joseph P. Day to Enrico Fasani, an investor, who conducts a restaurant on West 11th st. The seller was represented by A. N. Gitterman, as broker, who sold the property to him 4 years ago.

Tenant Buys from George J. Gould

George J. Gould, as executor, sold the 3-sty and basement stone dwelling, on a lot 16x100.3, at 177 East 64th st, to May Wilson Preston, the present occupant. The recorded purchase price is $35,000.

A Water-Front Street Deal

Charles F. Noyes Co. sold for Lurie & Feinberg to James S. Reardon and Daniel L. Reardon the 5-sty loft building 271 Water st through to 250 Front st, containing 20,000 square feet of space and with frontages of 21.7 feet on Water st and 19.3 feet on Front st. In part payment Lurie & Feinberg took the vacant plot at the northeast corner of 169th st and Gerard av. 64x101x126. The deal involved about $75,000. Keep A Bank Balance

ONE of Wall Street's greatest financiers, in talking to some young men, recently said:

"Start a bank account and maintain a decent balance. I base my success on the fact that I have always looked to my bank balances.

"With a bank balance, which incidentally draws regular interest, you are always in a position to take advantage of an opportunity to make a good investment. Your money is always ready when you need it."

Start small—if you have to—but start.

The plot has a valuable water frontage of 90 feet and depth of 228 feet to 129th st. The Austin, Nichols & Co. building adjoins the plot. It is understood that the tenant will build a garage upon part of the plot, while the water front will be used by a building material concern. The owner is the Payne estate.

Long Lease of Fine Dwelling

Alice Hoffman leased to Emil Fraad for a term of 21 years from July 1, 1922, the 5-story stone American basement dwelling 17 East 54th st, on a lot 20.10x100.5.

Net Lease by Tilden Estate

The Samuel J. Tilden estate leased the antique dwelling at 38 West 38th st for use as a restaurant. It had been in possession of the Tilden family for several generations and was leased through Judge Charles F. MacLean to a realty corporation in a 21 year net ground lease at $10,000 per annum.

JOSEPH T. MULLIGAN, broker and appraiser, has moved his offices from 30 Broad st to 165 Broadway.

ADOLPH and AARON WEISS, real estate operators, have removed their offices from 154 Nassau st to the Canadian Pacific Building, 344 Madison av.

FROMAN & TAUBERT were the brokers in the recent sale of the northwest corner of Lexington av and 87th st for the Markwin Realty Co. to Emanuel Ornstein. The purchase comprises flats and dwellings.

NEW YORK TITLE & MORTGAGE CO. stockholders, at a special meeting on April 20, authorized an additional issue of $1,000,000 capital stock, par value $100 per share. This raises the capitalization of the company from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000. The new shares are offered for subscription to the stockholders pro rata, one share for each three shares of their holdings on April 20, at a price of $100 per share.

April Construction Totals Break All Previous Records

Monthly Statistics Tabulated by F. W. Dodge Company Indicative of Predicted Building Boom in Twenty-Seven Northeastern States

ALL previous records for the number and value of new building and engineering operations started were broken during the month of April and the period now stands out in construction history as an era of steady progress toward the long predicted building revival. According to statistics tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company it is shown that contracts awarded in the twenty-seven Northeastern States during the past month amounted to $353,192,000. The previous high record was established during the month of July, 1919, the total for that period having been $317,698,000.

The April, 1922 total represents an increase of 20 per cent. over the previous month and of 60 per cent. over April, 1921. The first four months of the current year have rolled up a total figure that is just under a billion dollars and is 65 per cent. greater than the total of commitments for the first four months of last year.

There was a decided increase in the showing of every important classification of building projects during April, even in the industrial work, which has been the last group to respond to the noticeable trend toward renewed activity. Residential building continues to maintain its lead over all other types of construction and in April this work amounted to $132,478,000 or 37 per cent. of the total for the month. Public works and utilities represented a total expenditure of $75,251,000 or 21 per cent. of the total commitment; business buildings, $58,711,000, or 17 per cent., a notable increase over the total for the previous month; educational projects, $36,718,000 or 10 per cent. and industrial construction, including factories, warehouses, etc., $24,312,000 or 7 per cent.

April building contracts in New England amounted to $44,510,000, which is five millions greater than the previous high record for the district, reached in March, 1920. The April total was 60 per cent. ahead of the previous month and two and a half times the figure for April, 1921.

The total amount of contracts awarded in this district during the first four months of this year has been two and a quarter times the amount for the corresponding period of 1921.

Last month's total included: $14,485,000, or 32 per cent., for residential buildings; $14,379,000, or 32 per cent., for business buildings; $4,606,000, or 10 per cent., for educational buildings; and $4,204,000, or 9 per cent., for industrial buildings.

Contemplated new work reported in April amounted to $51,873,000.

Contracts awarded during April in New York State and Northern New Jersey exceed the previous high record for the district by nearly 27 million dollars. The April total was $115,502,000, which was 30 per cent. greater than the March figure, and two and a quarter times the figure for April, 1921.

Study of the recent work released shows an important gain in commercial and industrial construction but residential building still maintains a healthy lead over all other classifications. There is no indication of a recession of activity in the Metropolitan district despite the fact that labor is not plentiful and there is a developing scarcity of certain basic materials.

Construction started in this district in the first four months of this year was two and a half times as great as in the first four months of 1921.

Last month's total included: $52,717,000, or 46 per cent., for residential buildings; $28,307,000, or 24 per cent., for public works and utilities; $17,113,000, or 15 per cent., for business buildings; and $8,572,000, or 7 per cent., for educational buildings.

Contemplated new work reported during the month amounted to $135,932,000.

April building contracts in the Middle Atlantic States (Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and the Carolinas) amounted to $48,663,000, which was an increase of 9 per cent. over the preceding month and of 78 per cent. over April, 1921.

On the volume of construction started from January 1 to April 1, this district is 72 per cent. ahead of last year.

Last month's total included: $20,299,000, or 42 per cent., for residential buildings; $9,598,000, or 20 per cent., for public works and utilities; $6,980,000, or 15 per cent., for business buildings; and $6,409,000, or 13 per cent. for educational buildings.

Contemplated new work reported during the month amounted to $79,902,000.

April building contracts in Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee amounted to $46,478,000. This figure was 23 per cent. greater than that for the previous month and 10 per cent. greater than the total for April, 1921.

Total construction contracts let during the first four months of this year have amounted to 6 per cent. more than in the first four months of last year.

The April, 1922, total included: $18,220,000, or 39 per cent., for residential buildings; $7,367,000, or 16 per cent., for business buildings; $6,891,000, or 15 per cent., for public works and utilities; and $4,885,000, or 10 per cent., for industrial buildings.

Contemplated new work reported during the month amounted to $65,758,000.

Contracts awarded during April in the Central West (comprising Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri and portions of Eastern Kansas and Nebraska) amounted to $90,023,000, the largest monthly total for this district since April, 1920. Last month's total was 6 per cent. ahead of the previous month and 20 per cent. ahead of the corresponding month of last year.

During the first four months of this year the amount of contracts awarded in this district was 37 per cent. greater than for the first four months of 1921.

The April, 1922 total included: $25,828,000, or 29 per cent., for public works and utilities; $23,081,000, or 25 per cent., for residential buildings; $12,767,000, or 14 per cent., for educational buildings; and $12,143,000, or 13 per cent., for business buildings.

Contemplated new work reported during the month amounted to $147,975,000.

April building contracts in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Northern Michigan amounted to $7,986,000. This total was 20 per cent. under that of the preceding month and 4 per cent. over that of April, 1921.

From January 1 to April 1 the total amount of contracts awarded in this district was 14 per cent. greater than in the corresponding period of last year.

Last month's total included: $3,675,000, or 46 per cent., for residential buildings; $1,547,000, or 19 per cent., for public works and utilities; $955,000, or 12 per cent., for educational buildings, and $729,000, or 9 per cent., for business buildings.

Contemplated new work reported during the month amounted to $10,586,000.

Local Building Retarded by Chaotic Material Situation

Coal Strike Causes Scarcity and High Prices for Certain Basic Commodities, While Curtailed Demand Lowers Levels on Other Products

CONTRACTING interests in the Metropolitan District are somewhat concerned over a developing situation which threatens to retard building operations in this territory during the next few months. The shortage of bricklayers and carpenters is already affecting the production of needed buildings and the residential construction boom, which is now well under way, in all probability will be restricted because of the lack of skilled labor to complete the work in time for the autumn renting season.

There is another and even more important retardant, however, now confronting general contractors and speculative builders alike. The scarcity of certain basic building materials is already being felt throughout this city, and, although both dealers and manufacturers are confident that the work now under way will be supplied, they are definite in their statements that the sources of supply, as now operating, will be unable to fill the requirements of the local industry if much additional work is undertaken.

The growing shortage of materials has affected prices and during the past week or ten days there has been a well-defined trend toward higher prices on some materials, while others, for which the demand has not been so keen, are holding their former positions in the price scales or are softening to some extent. The price situation is very uncertain at present and as a consequence contractors are experiencing considerable difficulty in preparing their estimates, as they have to guess largely about future material and labor costs.

Last week a very decided shortage developed in the supply of common brick. There was none available in the wholesale market and the yards of the dealers were absolutely cleaned out. The demand was intense, as the speculative work in this territory is now at the season's height, and builders were competing keenly for common brick to keep their jobs going. The dealers, who had contracted to deliver in the aggregate many millions of brick, were scouring the market for available brick, and the dealers in second-hand brick were very popular with the building community when they had anything for sale and were able to get almost any prices they asked.

During the past week the demand for common brick has been even more insistent. There has been considerable brick sent down from the up-river plants, however, which has been allocated to the jobs and made to go as far as possible so that practically no work has been actually held up, although progress on the brickwork has been slowed down to a considerable extent. The manufacturers are co-operating to the limit of their abilities, are sending brick into the local market with all possible speed, and there is little doubt that within the next three weeks at most the supply will be regular and sufficient to meet all requirements. The majority of the Hudson River brick plants will have new brick ready for shipment before the end of this month, and just as soon as this product can be taken out of the kilns the building industry will be relieved of its worries about the common-brick supply.

As a result of the scarcity of brick the price has strengthened and the market is very firm today at $18.00 a thousand, wholesale, to dealers in cargo lots. There are some who believe that common-brick prices will advance during the coming months to the $20-a-thousand level or even higher. According to the best information THE RECORD AND GUIDE has been able to obtain this hardly seems likely. Prices may advance somewhat above the level ruling at present and undoubtedly the price will be very firm throughout the summer, but there is no necessity for anticipating that brick prices will advance to a prohibitive level.

Brick manufacturers feel that they will be in a position to supply all demands for their product. The only factors that will operate against an adequate supply will be a fuel famine, brought about by the coal strike, or a strike of labor in their plants for higher wages than are being paid at present. The fuel situation is causing the producers some worry at this time, not because they have no coal at present but on account of the likelihood of their being unable to get more as the season progresses. The majority of the manufacturers along the Hudson River have sufficient fuel for burning at least two kilns of brick each. This will be used up within the next few weeks, however, and after that the production will depend largely upon the settlement of the coal strike.

Brick manufacturers state that although the remaining brick in their yards is limited in quantity they are of the opinion that it will be sufficient to supply the now active jobs until the time new brick can be taken from the kilns and shipped to the city. There is some doubt, however, as to the future supply, and this will only be dispelled by a steady supply of fuel, at reasonable prices, and labor, satisfied with its wages, in adequate volume to maintain the operation of the plants at full capacity.

The coal situation is also affecting the production of Portland cement, lime and terra cotta. Manufacturers of these materials are confronted with the possibility of greatly curtailing production or shutting down their plants entirely if the fuel question grows more aggravating. The demand for these commodities is steadily growing, along with that for brick and other basic commodities, and as a result prices are firm and indicating tendencies toward advances. Last week the price of Portland cement was increased 20 cents per barrel by local dealers, and there is not much available at any price at present. A persistent trade rumor exists to the effect that some of the important cement manufacturers have practically determined to use their present supplies of coal in the production of cement and then close down their plants until the fuel supply is assured by the settlement of the strike.

Structural steel is another material which has been affected considerably both by the increasing demand and the scarcity of fuel for manufacturing purposes. Steel prices, fabricated and erected, have advanced strongly during the past two weeks. Only about two weeks ago contracts were being made for the supply and erection of structural steel at prices averaging $65 per ton. Today the average is from $5 to $7 per ton higher, and a prominent steel engineer and contractor stated openly that it is unsafe today to take contracts for the supply and erection of structural steel at any figure that is much under $75 per ton.

Because of the slowing down of active building projects in the Metropolitan District on account of the difficulties experienced by builders in getting adequate supplies of common brick, there has been a softening in the prices of several materials the production of which is not dependent upon coal in large quantities. The lumber market is in an easier position than it has been for some time past, with stocks in excellent shape and prices slightly lower on the average than they were only a week or so ago. Building stone is another material for which prices are softer, and, although the demand is good, dealers are in a position to handle considerably more business than they have on their books at present at prices attractive to the most careful buyers.

Plaster blocks and plaster boards are also among the commodities for which prices have been lowered recently, and there is an easier price trend all along the line in the commodities not affected by fuel scarcity and prohibitive prices. This condition, however, is largely only a temporary matter, and if the building situation is soon able to proceed without further hindrance by labor troubles or material shortages there is little doubt that the prevailing slack in the prices for certain materials will rapidly be taken up and the market get back to a sound and firm basis.

Many New Building Projects Reported in New York City

Weekly Construction Figures, Tabulated by F. W. Dodge Company, Show Consistent Gains in Practically All Types of Operation

ACCORDING to the volume of new building and engineering work now being planned the construction industry of New York State and New Jersey, north of Trenton, will be rushed to full capacity throughout the remainder of the current year. Construction statistics, tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company, show that during the seventeenth week of this year there were 837 new building and engineering operations announced in this territory which will require a total expenditure of $42,272,900. During the same period there were 505 contracts awarded, at a total valuation of $21,736,200, of which nearly fifty per cent. was for residential building of one type or another.

During the past week there has been a decided jump in the volume of active construction within the boundaries of New York City. All boroughs have been effected by the increased amount of work to be accomplished before the autumn season and contractors, sub-contractors and material manufacturers and dealers are rushed with orders.

The new construction reported by architects and engineers for Greater New York is well diversified but naturally residential work predominates. The report for the week of April 22 to 28, inclusive, shows plans under way for 64 business projects of various types, $1,858,000; 7 educational buildings, $150,000; 5 hospitals and institutions, $173,000; 16 industrial projects, $835,500; 6 public works and public utilities, $653,800; 2 religious edifices, $70,000; 231 residential operations such as apartments, flats and tenements and one and two-family dwellings, $12,917,000 and 6 social and recreational buildings, $2,868,000.

Among the operations for which contracts were awarded during the seventeenth week of 1922, scheduled for locations in Greater New York, were 42 business projects of various types, $1,905,500; 4 educational buildings, $510,000; 4 hospitals and institutions, $434,900; 10 factories and industrial plants, $839,000; 2 public works and public utilities, $200,000; 2 religious and memorial buildings, $65,000; 96 residential operations, $7,561,000 and 4 social and recreational projects, $90,000.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

ALTHOUGH there is a developing shortage in the supply of certain basic building materials no construction is being actually held up because of the lack of essential commodities. Both manufacturers and dealers are doing their utmost to increase the supply so that all active work will be taken care of without undue delay. The common brick situation, while serious in certain aspects, is not causing any delay in building as yet and there is every likelihood that all requirements will be met by the manufacturers who are speeding work in their plants.

The rush of active construction in this territory has also caused some concern about the supplies of lime and Portland cement, and while the local dealers are not carrying large stocks of these commodities, there is said to be adequate reserves at production points. The coal strike is the most important factor in the building material supply situation today and just as soon as this is settled the material markets will be easier, both as to supply and prices.

Common Brick—Demand is extremely active and manufacturers report that their incoming barges are being disposed of immediately upon arrival. The price for Hudson River common brick was strengthened and the low figure is now $18.00 a thousand. Manufacturers are generally of the opinion that there is sufficient brick in reserve in their up-river plants to supply all demands that may arise before the newly burned brick is ready for the market. Production is under way at present in particularly all of the Hudson River plants and brick of this season's make will probably be ready to ship within the next two weeks. After the arrival of the first shipments of new brick the manufacturers state the supply will be regular and adequate.

Summary—Transactions in the North River common brick market for the week ending Thursday, May 4, 1922. Condition of market: Demand good; prices are sharply advancing. Quotations: Hudson Rivers, $18.00 to $20.00 a thousand to dealers in cargo lots alongside dock. Number of cargoes arrived, 40; sales, 41. Distribution: Manhattan, 15; Bronx, 1; Brooklyn, 18; New Jersey points, 6; Astoria, 1.

Structural Steel—Business in this line has dropped off to some extent in the local market during the past week, but there are indications of a quick recovery very soon as there is a large amount of new construction work in prospect. Recent inquiries are indicative of an early release of a large percentage of the projected building. Shape prices are firm and slightly higher than they were a week or so ago, and structural steel, fabricated and erected, is now ranging from $68 to $75 per ton erected with the higher quotations more frequent.

Lumber—Both wholesale and retail dealers in lumber are fairly well satisfied with current market conditions. The demand is quite keen and shows marked signs of increasing steadily. Supplies are adequate and no work is being held up on account of failure of lumber deliveries.

Retail yards are carrying heavy stocks, but are moving them rapidly, and as a result the wholesale demand is greatly improved. Prices are very firm and show a slight tendency to stiffen an advance.

Window Glass—Demand is steadily increasing for both plate and window glass and with the volume of new construction that has recently been started there is every likelihood that local jobbers will be far busier throughout the next few months than they have been for many seasons past. At present local stocks are plentiful and there is little delay in job deliveries, but there is likely to be a much tighter market situation along towards fall when the mass of construction now starting is nearing the final stages and owners are rushing work so as to get occupancy before the winter sets in. Prices are firm and unchanged.

Cast Iron Pipe—A decided increase in demand has been noticeable during the past week or so and activity is about evenly divided between private and municipal business. Plans now in progress indicate a large volume of new business to be released within a few weeks, and according to all accounts the manufacturers will all have their plants in operation at full capacity before long in order to keep abreast of orders. Cast iron prices are exceedingly firm and there is no immediate prospect of a break. New York quotations are as follows: 6 in. and larger, $48.80 per net ton; 5 in. and 4 in., $53.80; 3 in., $63.80, with Class A and gas pipe $4 extra per ton.

Roofing Papers—The vast amount of small house construction in the outlying districts of this city and in the suburban sections has created an excellent demand for roofing and building papers. Dealers report a steadily increasing interest in this line and prices are firm and unchanged.

Builders' Hardware—This line is extremely active and all signs point to a steady increase in the demand during the coming months. The large program of speculative construction is to a great extent responsible for the growing hardware demand, and all current signs point to a continuation of this form of building throughout the remainder of the year. Prices are firm and no changes of consequence have been reported.

Electrical Supplies—Trade is quite brisk and there are strong indications of a steadily increasing demand during the next three or four months. Wiring supplies are moving rapidly and there is also a more lively interest in specialties. Building activity is decided on the increase throughout the Metropolitan district and as a result the electrical supply trade anticipates a steady flow of business this summer. Stocks are adequate for all demands and prices are firm and steady with the exception of rigid iron conduit, on which manufacturers recently announced an increase.

Building Stone—Local dealers in this material state that the market is in a better position to supply the demand than it has been for a long time past. There is no delay in getting deliveries on the job and although the demand is active and steadily increasing the market is easy. Michael Cohen, one of the principal dealers in building stone, stated this week that stone prices are now extremely favorable and prospective builders might well afford to take advantage of the situation. No radical changes have been announced in the wholesale prices of building stone, and until railroad freight rates are lowered the prevailing levels are likely to continue.

Nails—The market is fairly active and all signs point to increased demand during the remainder of the year. The large program of speculative construction now practically under way has improved the nail situation materially. Prices are very firm and New York quotations are $3.25 base, per keg, on wire nails, and $3.90 to $5 base, per keg, on cut nails.

Linseed Oil—The demand for this commodity has improved during the past week or so and consequently the market is in a better position than it has been for some time. Prices are very much firmer than they were and jobbers are hopeful about the future for their line.

Developments Promised in Traction Situation

Politics, which has always figured prominently in transit affairs in New York City, is again evidenced in the latest discussion of the conditions under which the much-needed additional facilities, as well as their kind, shall be provided. But daily it is growing more and more apparent that public opinion unswayed by politics is the dominant factor in the present situation, and that many of the party leaders appreciate the importance of conceding this fact.

Probably the public is better informed than ever before as to the financing, building and operation of intraurban traffic routes. Certainly much of the camouflage behind which old-time manipulators carried on their operations safe from public scrutiny has been removed. Statements of receipts, operating costs and net, now required by law, are understood in their original form by many people and can be, and are, translated into colloquial language so that all who care to know may clearly comprehend the chief points in the working out of the complicated transportation problem. This being so, it is comprehensible both that the public no longer can be fooled as to its rights and also that it will weigh carefully plans put forward to protect its rights and to afford it the traffic conveniences of which it stands so much in need.

With this basis to go on, it is practically assured that the five-cent fare question has been removed as a political asset and has become merely something that must continue to be the measure upon which rapid transit must be operated. Recent financial statements of Manhattan and Brooklyn companies indicate the futility of further agitation for increased fares. There has been a period of time since transfers were discarded and municipal bus service inaugurated long enough to enable the public to make up its mind as to the advantage of a unified transit system at a five-cent fare and the inexpediency of replacing well-equipped and manned traction lines with haphazard motor buses, however useful the latter may be as feeders to through routes. Not only has the public had time to form an opinion on many features of the matter, but there are indications that it is awaiting with interest, and will examine with care, the program of extension of present transportation routes, links between the existing lines and the building of new roads which it is announced will be made shortly by the Rapid Transit Commission. This program is semi-officially declared to include a new four-track subway the full length of Manhattan on the West Side; the extension of the Seventh-Avenue Subway to the Harlem; a Brooklyn crosstown subway connecting the Queensboro Subway with the B. R. T. and I. R. T. subways near Prospect street; a tunnel under the Narrows so the Fourth-Avenue route may be extended into Richmond; the extension of the Queensboro route to Flushing and a moving sidewalk under Forty-second street from Grand Central Station to Times Square. The cost of this tentative plan is placed at $260,000,000.

As was to be expected, Mayor Hylan immediately voiced his opposition to the proposals of the Commission, although these had not been officially promulgated. Chairman George McAneny as promptly replied to Mayor Hylan, suggesting that until the publication of the complete plans he hoped the Mayor would reserve decision as to their merits and pointing out that the Mayor already had fallen into error and made misstatements because not fully informed as to the Commission's completed plans.

What Chairman McAneny urges on the Mayor will be the attitude of the public generally, irrespective of politics. When the Commission's program is published it will be considered thoroughly and if good will be accepted, and if faulty, will be condemned. The traction muddle has continued long, but most New Yorkers find hope in recent developments. What they want are adequate facilities, and they stand ready to support any feasible plan, regardless of the source from which it emanates.

Grave Danger in Avarice of Labor

Recent developments in the building labor situation, not only in New York City but through the contiguous territory, makes it quite apparent that the building trade workers are determined to proceed with their policy of extortionate wage demands. During the past week strikes for higher wages have been reported from several localities near the Metropolis, and in districts where no active difficulties are being encountered it is only because a passive industry has submitted to the demands of the workers for bonus pay.

The majority of building mechanics seem totally oblivious of the fact that in insisting upon their demands for wages, frequently more than fifty per cent. above their recognized union scales, they are not only retarding the progress of the building industry but that their attitude is clearly prejudicial to their own best economic interests. If these workers would take time to analyze the situation they would realize that they are preventing a return to normal conditions by holding up construction costs, which in turn are primarily responsible for the excessive rentals prevailing today, and rent is one of the fundamentals in the economy of living.

Seemingly there is no end to the avarice of building labor. Workers in other of the nation's leading industries have accepted wage-scale reductions, in a number of instances returning to or approximating the pre-war levels. By so doing they have demonstrated their interest in supporting a general business revival by allowing the industries in which they are employed to resume activity at a semblance of normal progress.

On the other hand, a large proportion of the building trade workers, taking an unfair advantage of the urgent need for additional residential accommodations and the rush of the building revival which has created an unprecedented demand for their services, not only have insisted on adhering to their highly-inflated war-time wage scales but have gone further and, by means of "snowball" strikes, unauthorized by union officials and wholly uncalled for according to any reasonable code, have brought discredit upon their industry, discouraged builders from starting contemplated operations and made it certain that high rentals must be endured, not only by themselves but by the entire community, for an indefinite period.

An attitude of selfish interest, such as is now being displayed by some of the building trade workers, will be certain to have its natural reaction. This may not become apparent for some months yet, or even while building is progressing at its prevailing maximum rate, but this period of boom times in the construction field will likely be followed by a period of slackness and then those workers who have sowed the wind will reap the whirlwind.

Y. M. C. A. Inaugurates Course of Study for Home Builders

RECOGNIZING the steadily growing interest in home construction and ownership and realizing that the average prospective homebuilder knows relatively little about the fundamentals of site selection, planning, financing, construction and the other factors that are involved in such an undertaking, the Young Men's Christian Association has inaugurated a course of study which it has called the "Home Builders' Forum." This course is planned to give to prospective home purchasers and builders some idea of how to differentiate good construction from that which is not up to standard and also to warn them against some of the more common mistakes that would under ordinary conditions be possible through ignorance of the pitfalls.

The Educational Bureau of the Y. M. C. A. has obtained as speakers in this course men of high standing in their respective professions and trades who will give brief outlines of their various subjects, stressing the fundamentals of design, plan, finance, construction, etc., and then permit an opportunity for the asking of pertinent questions and open discussion. This course was opened at the West Side Branch of the Y. M. C. A. three weeks ago last Monday evening. The opening subject was upon "Practical Home Ownership," which was introduced by Edward P. Doyle of the Real Estate Board of New York. The speaker at the second meeting was F. P. Benson, secretary of the Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn and a member of the faculty of New York University, who had as his subject "Selecting a Locality and a Home Site."

Last Monday evening W. P. Tienken, of the editorial staff of the RECORD AND GUIDE, addressed the class on the subject of "Estimating Costs and Securing Bids." This subject covered the methods of determining approximate costs from preliminary sketches, and gave a schedule of cubic foot costs for the various types of construction commonly employed in home construction. It was brought out by Mr. Tienken that while these unit costs might safely be used as factors in arriving at approximate costs they were subject to local changes in either direction through higher or lower labor costs, material prices, freight rates, etc. The latter portion of this address dealt with the best methods of securing final bids on the finished plans and specifications, and warned the class about a number of problems the average layman might be confronted with and their accepted ways of solution.

Mr. Tienken delivered an address on very much the same subject on Tuesday evening before a Home Builders' Class being formed at the Central Branch of the Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn. This address, however, covered the subject of "Home Construction and Ownership" in a general way and was in a manner preparatory to the commencement of the proposed course of study.

The following experts will address the class at the West Side Branch at future meetings: Robert D. Kercheval, of Henry L. Doherty & Co., "Financing the Home"; E. H. Howell, Serial Building Loan & Savings Association, "Buying Property and Negotiating Loans"; John Taylor Boyd, architect, "Architectural Planning"; George Fowler, engineer, "Letting the Contracts"; Henry Atterbury Smith, architect, "Selecting the Materials"; Col. H. C. Boyden, of the Portland Cement Association, "Foundations and Exterior Walls"; Wetmore Hodges, of the American Radiator Co., "Heating and Ventilating"; S. G. Hibben, Westinghouse Electric Company, "Lighting Systems"; Arthur East, of the Paint, Oil and Varnish Club, "Painting and Decorating"; Eric Hodge, landscape architect, "Planning the Home Grounds," and Robert Sexton, director of the "Own Your Home" Exposition, "When to Build or Buy."

Rusted Metal Work Costly to Home Owners

THE aggregate annual repair bill of home-owners in this country will this year amount to $540,041,769 for one item alone—replacement of rusted sheet metal work, including leaders and gutters, valleys and flashings. This is the outstanding fact brought out by a survey just completed by the Copper & Brass Research Association.

It is estimated that there are in use in this country at the present time 5,175,000,000 feet of leaders and gutters and that about one billion feet is renewed annually. The cost of replacements of rusted iron and steel pipe in plumbing is placed at $86,500,000 annually, making a total annual rust bill of approximately $626,500,000.

Of every dollar spent in residence construction, 36.1 cents is spent for masonry, 29.1 cents for carpentry, 8.7 cents for heating, 6.5 cents for painting, 6 cents for electrical work, 6 cents for plumb-ing, 3.5 cents for sheet metal work, 2.9 cents for roofing and 1.2 cents for hardware. The survey shows that the four last-named items, plumbing, sheet metal work, roofing and hardware, are the heaviest contributors to the nation's annual repair bill.

It is estimated that between four and five billion dollars will be spent this year in new construction, a large part of it residential. Of this amount approximately $240,000,000 will be spent for plumbing, $140,000,000 for sheet metal work, $116,000,000 for roofing, and $48,000,000 for hardware. It is in these items that the largest annual waste for repairs and replacements takes place.

In the Bulletin of the Copper and Brass Research Association, recently made public, it is shown that 3½ mills more on the dollar will provide brass pipe for the plumbing; 7-10 of a mill more on the dollar, copper in the sheet metal work, 2.8-10 cents on the dollar, a copper roof; and ½ of a mill more on the dollar, brass or bronze hardware.

Production of Stone in the United States During 1921

ABOUT 62,400,000 short tons of stone was quarried in the United States in 1921, according to the United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior. This is more than 20 per cent less than the production in 1920. The estimated value of this stone is $92,500,000, a decrease of 30 per cent, as compared with 1920.

Producers all over the country stated that both wages and prices had been reduced, and nearly all reported a decrease in the cost of production. High freight rates are said to have contributed largely to the general depression in the industry.

Building stone was in but little demand, and the returns at hand indicate a decrease in output of about 25 per cent. The output of monumental stone, which has shown practically no diminution during the last five years, apparently decreased more than 45 per cent. Paving blocks were in great demand, and increases were shown in the sales of curbing and flagging, facts that indicate a revival in street work in cities and towns. The campaign begun for the betterment of suburban and country roads caused an increase of nearly 8 per cent in the output of crushed stone. Depression in the metal-smelting industry was reflected in a decrease of more than 50 per cent in stone sold for fluxing and for use as refractory material. Decreases were noted also in the demand for agricultural limestone, and for stone used by alkali works, sugar refineries, paper mills, and in other manufacturing establishments.

Building Loans on Apartment Projects Being Curtailed

Excessive Demands of Labor Convince Important Lending Institutions That New Policy Must Be Adopted to Check Unhealthy Development

A DECISION to radically curtail loans for apartment house construction has been reached by some of the largest loaning institutions in this city, according to information gathered by representatives of THE RECORD AND GUIDE. This decision, it is declared has been forced by the attitude of labor. Responsible officers of many large loaning institutions have reached the conclusion that more millions cannot with safety be poured into apartment-house projects in the metropolis so long as builders have to pay the wages now demanded by bricklayers, carpenters, plasterers and workmen in other lines.

An official of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company makes the statement that that company will not lend another dollar for apartment-house or other large building construction until the labor organizations identified with building change their course and end the incessant demands upon builders which are adding to the high cost of construction. This decision applies to all parts of the city. The time has come, in the opinion of this company and of other large lending institutions, when a firm stand must be taken. There is an abundance of money for building loans, but many of the prominent institutions which control it feel that the demands of labor have brought the building situation to the danger point and that the only way to avoid disaster later is to stop the flow of money at the source.

Early this week the Title Guarantee and Trust Company declined to make a loan of $500,000 to a firm of Bronx builders on some new apartment-house projects because of the arbitrary rulings of the labor organizations that control the building trade. The builders who sought the loan are reliable men and the project was feasible in every way, but the lending company decided against making the loan. Officials declared such a stand would have to be taken sooner or later, and that the present is as good a time as any to do it. The speculative builders in many instances were declared to be in sympathy with the position taken by this company.

It is felt that while this new development in the situation will create hardships and forestall considerable of the apartment-house construction contemplated and necessary to relieve the housing shortage, yet firm measures must be taken, in order to bring down construction costs and in the end bring lower-priced apartments. Until this is done the belief in financial circles is that there will be no end to the exactions of labor.

While thus far there has been no general agreement to curtail loans by all of the big lending institutions, the trend is in that direction. They are drifting to a common understanding in the matter. It is only by presenting a firm front of opposition, they believe, that the great end sought can be accomplished. They are tired of the harassing delays in apartment-house building caused by labor.

The existing labor situation has caused an economic condition which adds so much to cost of construction that the resultant rents per room demanded are far beyond the means of the average man. Lending institutions find that many of the new multi-family houses are not being rented or sold as rapidly as they should be. This is as true of new buildings in Brooklyn as it is of those in northern Manhattan and the Bronx. Neither are two-family houses at from $14,000 to $17,000 each in Brooklyn and certain parts of Queens selling as well as the housing shortage would seem to dictate they should. These prices are far higher for such buildings than have prevailed heretofore. The rents for them are as high proportionately as the rents of multi-family houses. There must be a drop, too, from $25 and more per room per month for apartments in multi-family houses in Brooklyn, it is declared. The situation does not encourage lending institutions to go further. They feel that safety lies in a cessation of lending. In face of the prevailing opinion that pre-war rentals will never be witnessed again many lending officials believe there must be a tendency strongly in that direction if the house-construction movement is to be placed on a healthy basis.

What is regarded by some lending institutions as an unhealthy tendency lies in the fact that some builders are offering a month's rent, or more, free in order to fill their new buildings. This is due to the fact that the rentals are beyond the means of the average apartment tenant and that the builder, who must fill his house at prevailing rentals, is driven to desperate means to do so. In pre-war days the motive for offering a month's rent, or more, free to a prospective tenant was different. There was then a large supply of living space, and tenants paid much lower rentals. The present situation does not look good to lenders from any angle. There is no immediate certainty of lower labor costs and the lack of adherence to agreements by union labor makes the element of high cost variable and uncertain. The lack of moving to new apartments on May 1 was another untoward sign to lenders.

Labor constitutes 85 per cent. of the cost of building and with labor costs reduced to those prevailing in normal times it is argued that structural costs will come down and that lower rentals within the means of the average man will follow. The compensation of the average tenant in the general walks of life is tending downward. Lending institutions now consider even $9 a room per month too much for the rank and file of apartment-house tenants. Of course, they will have to pay more than that for a long time to come, but lenders are seeing the handwriting on the wall and are acting accordingly. The healthy situation was when the average tenant paid one-fourth of his income in rent instead of a great deal more than that sum, as he does now.

Randall Salisbury, Assistant Secretary of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, and identified with its Building Loan Department, said: "The exactions of labor, which are high-handed and unreasonable in the extreme, must be met firmly by lending institutions ceasing to lend on large construction, of which multi-family houses form a large part. Excessive labor costs are discouraging building loans absolutely. Even the builders feel that the position of the lending institutions now is the correct one. Only this week we declined to lend $500,000 on an apartment house operation that was perfectly good and feasible according to present standards. We must stop until union labor comes to its senses. The dead line has been reached. Beyond it we will not go. All lending bodies are feeling the same way to a great extent, and the feeling is generally crystallizing into action, as it has with us. If the wherewithal is not forthcoming labor will be made to realize its uneconomic attitude in the premises. It certainly, so far, has defied all appeals to reason and common sense."

John J. Pulleyn, President of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, said: "All lending institutions have become

New Angles of Landlord-Tenant Disputes Come Up in Court

Co-operative Owners of Hendrik Hudson Lose to Tenants, While Another Litigant Is Refused Elevator Apartment at Walk-Up Rate

THE first landlord-and-tenant case involving the fixing of rentals on a basis of 8 per cent. on the assessed valuation of the property has recently been decided in the Municipal Court, 7th District, by Justice Davies, in the matter of the Hendrik Hudson Apartments, Inc., against Williams, Alger, Follett, Toplitz, Altmayer, Tennant and Bunzel, tenants. A peculiar feature of this case is that the plaintiffs include the co-operative owners of the apartment house, occupying a portion of the building, while the defendants are other tenants paying rent to the co-operative tenant owners. Litigation was started nearly two years ago by tenants who objected to increases in rentals made by the corporation, as being exorbitant, these increases running in some instance from 50 to 90 per cent. over the rentals they had been paying before the co-operative ownership plan was entered into. Jacob Walz, attorney for the defendants, claimed that his clients had been discriminated against in fixing the new rentals to the advantage of the co-operative tenants, the greater income thus derived from the "outsiders" acting to reduce the rentals of the "insiders." Justice Davies found for the defendants, following the decision of Justice Greenbaum in the Appellate Division, First Department, fixing an 8 per cent. return on a fair valuation of the property, unencumbered by mortgages, and after deduction of expenses, as a "reasonable rental." Although Stotesbury and Miner, counsel for the co-operative owners, filed a bill of particulars in support of a higher valuation, Justice Davies held the assessed value of the property to be the basis upon which the rentals should be computed. In his opinion the Justice says:

"The landlord is the owner of the large apartment house known as the Hendrik Hudson, situated on the north side of 110th Street, the east side of Riverside Drive, and the south side of 111th Street, and brings these actions against these tenants under the housing laws for the fixing of a fair and reasonable rental. The apartment house is a large eight-story building erected about 1906, and is of the almost modern class of Riverside Drive elevator apartment houses, and is splendidly situated, both from a transit and livable standpoint. At the time of its erection it was noted, but since then it has had financially somewhat of a checkered career, and it has at last come under the ownership of this plaintiff, the stockholders of which are mainly, if not entirely, tenants in the building.

"After a trial which lasted a whole court day and in which all of the elements were carefully considered by testimony developed by the owner and by various counsel representing the nine tenants in litigation herein. The issues were submitted to the court, and since the trial the Justice presiding has specially made a visit to the apartment house for the purpose of making some personal notes as to the condition of the structure generally. After careful consideration of all of the testimony, I make the following findings:

"In my opinion, the landlord failed to overcome the legal presumption, and the assessed valuation of $1,150,000 is fixed as the basis value herein. The eight per cent allowance upon that is $92,000.

"As to the operating expenses, upon the trial very little issue was made, and it was conceded that $1,719 be eliminated, and with this reduction the operating expenses are therefore placed at $47,037.63. The depreciation in a building such as this I fix at one per cent of the assessed value of the building, and that is $6,400. The city taxes amount to $31,855. The total annual carrying charge of these premises is therefore $177,292. Under the law of this Department, as established by the Appellate Division in the case of Hall vs. Moos, each tenant is called upon to bear his fair share. The Court has taken testimony as to the number of rooms and location of each of the nine groups into which each floor is divided, having in mind the number of rooms, the location with reference to the sunshine and view, the size, and general comfort of each of the rooms, as well as a further subdivision of each of the groups into the relative comfort and enjoyment as to floors."

Justice Davies fixed the percentage of total rentals to be paid by each class of apartments in the building at from 7 per cent. for six rooms to 15 per cent. for eight rooms, according to location, taking into consideration sunlight, view and air, and making higher awards for upper floors than for the lower ones. The decision will be appealed to the Appellate Division.

Another landlord-and-tenant case of interest to many was recently decided in the Municipal Court, 7th District, by Justice John Hetherington, in which the court had to decide whether a tenant might invoke the aid of the Emergency Rent Laws to provide him with a home in an elevator apartment house at the prevailing price of a home in a walk-up apartment, for the greater convenience of his wife. The case was that of A. P. W. Kinnan, executor of the estate of Marshall P. Wilder, landlord, against Albert Grossman, tenant. Leary & Somers appeared for the plaintiff and Harold Budner for the defendant. Justice Hetherington's opinion follows:

"Upon the facts it appears that the tenant was in possession of a comfortable dwelling apartment at a monthly rental of $75. He was a married man and lived therein with his wife. Indications of the realization of his hopes of posterity, incited him to consider the inconvenience to his wife in the use of the stairs as a means of access to the apartment and the easier mode of an elevator, hence he cast about him for a so-called 'elevator' apartment and found the property of the landlord here. Inquiry disclosed that an apartment at $60 per month was available, but it did not suit him. He asked if a better were available and was shown the one he now occupies. Concerning its rental he was told it would be $100 monthly. He asked if it would be renovated and the reply was made that it would be if he entered into a lease of it for a term. To this he agreed, the lease in question here was prepared and executed; the landlord at a considerable expense renovated the apartment to suit the taste of the tenant and the tenant entered into possession and paid one month's rent, but refused to pay thereafter at the rate agreed.

"Furthermore that the apartment which he vacated was available to him as long as he chose to remain, its rent was less than that of the one he leased from the landlord here, that he was under no notice to quit, and save for the fact that his former domicile had no elevator to carry his wife up and down, it was quite comfortable. That he gave it up voluntarily.

"Under these circumstances, this tenant, an educated business man, entering into a written lease of an apartment after driving a shrewd bargain as to its renovation and rental, now claims he did so under duress. His counsel urges and cites authorities to the effect that the defence of 'unreasonableness in rental and duress' are available to every tenant, under the provisions of the rent laws, and that he cannot be estopped nor precluded from its interposition. No one questions this, but it is one thing to interpose a defence and another to establish it. The cause was tried precisely upon this issue.

"While a general emergency may exist (and undoubtedly does) from the inability of tenants to procure dwellings, it affects the public collectively, not always individually. In the case at bar it affected the tenant not at all. Common sense must be reckoned with in consideration of these cases and only where it is established that the emergency affected the tenant and that such emergency forced him into the agreement can it be held to have been established. No other conclusion can in justice be arrived at. The emergency recognized by the legislature is an emergency that takes away homes and shelter from the populace; no such emergency confronted the tenant here. He simply desired for his wife the luxury of an elevator apartment. Mothers have survived childbirth and reared excellent offspring for centuries before elevators were thought of, and if he desired the luxury, he should be held to pay for it. As well say that a passenger on a railroad, failing to find satisfactory seats for himself and wife in day coach, could demand seats in the parlor car without paying the additional cost thereof."

The motion was denied by Justice Hetherington.

fearful regarding the apartment-house situation. With the general compensation for mercantile and other non-union labor going down (this is to say, for the vast majority of humans), how can the excessive prevailing rentals for living spaces be maintained? With the average life insurance policy only $1,500 and the average savings bank account less than $1,000, the extravagance of present rental standards is obvious. Not only must union labor come down in cost, but all commodities that enter into comfortable living must come down, such as clothing, food and building material. The only logical argument the union man has is that he is paying more to live than formerly. Well, so is every man who does not belong to a union, and they form the major part of the nation. There is no gainsaying

the fact that prevailing rentals for the average man are way over his head and he is drowning economically in order to pay them. How can a fellow hold out forever with rocks tied to him?

"Lending institutions may not be able to force down the prices of general living commodities, but they will have something to say and do about the excessive cost of home building. The bulk of construction cost is labor and to that extent it adds much to high rentals. Borrowers naturally expect to borrow money in proportion to present costs. This cannot be. We are handling other people's money and we are playing safe. Apartment rentals must become lower if income properties are to continue to be stable investments. War prices cannot forever obtain either for labor or for living space."

Work Started on New Building for Greenwich Savings Bank

Handsome Structure, Being Erected by Marc Eidlitz & Son from Designs by York & Sawyer, to Occupy Block Front Just North of Herald Square

OLD buildings, occupying the block front on the north side of Thirty-sixth street from Broadway to Sixth avenue, are being demolished to permit the construction of a handsome new banking building for the Greenwich Savings Bank. This structure, which will be an architectural masterpiece and one of the finest banks in New York City, will occupy a plot with a frontage of 106 feet on Broadway, the whole block front of 136 feet on Thirty-sixth street and 100 feet on Sixth desirable as the construction of the new building progresses.

The officers' platform is on a mezzanine over the Broadway entrance, separated only by columns from the banking room, which it overlooks. The president's room occupies the Broadway-Thirty-sixth street corner on this floor.

At the roof level there will be a kitchen, dining-room for officers and for employes and dormitory space for men in the event it is ever considered desirable to keep them in the build-avenue. The building will be erected under a general contract awarded to Marc Eidlitz & Son, Inc., builders, according to plans and designs prepared by York & Sawyer, architects.

Designed exclusively for the use of the Greenwich Savings Bank, the new building will be constructed of stone, 80 feet high, its three sides enriched by Corinthian columns, which will form projecting porticos on Broadway and on Sixth avenue. The columns themselves will be of solid stone, nearly five feet in diameter and 40 feet high.

Entrances on Broadway and on Sixth avenue will admit depositors to an elliptical banking room, 87 feet wide and 120 feet in length. This room will have a clear height to the skylight in the domed ceiling of 72 feet. The interior columns at the ends of this room will be 32 feet in height.

The working space in the center of the main banking room will be more than twice as large as the working space in the present building at the corner of Sixth avenue and Sixteenth street. Wide stairways lead down from the vestibule of the Broadway entrance into the basement, where provision is made for the installation of a safe deposit company, if this proves ing over night. A certain amount of space is available for exercise, both indoors and on the flat roof of the building.

In designing this new banking building the committee of the bank has required of York & Sawyer, the architects, that everything shall be provided which can be foreseen to make this structure so adequate and so elastic that it may prove to be for many years to come a home for this institution.

The Greenwich Savings Bank is the third oldest savings bank in Manhattan. It was organized in 1833, fourteen years after the Bank for Savings and six years after the Seaman's Bank for Savings. The trustees of this institution have always been men identified with the large interests of the city, particularly in the old parts of New York—the old Ninth Ward or Greenwich section.

The bank was opened for business in May, 1833, at 10 Carmine street. In 1839 it moved to 11 Sixth avenue, and it has occupied its building at the corner of Sixteenth street and Sixth avenue since 1892. The new building at Thirty-sixth street, Broadway and Sixth avenue, therefore, is the third loca-

Review of Real Estate Market for the Current Week

A Fifth Avenue Corner for Improvement and Other Choice Corner Parcels Were the Features of a Market Well Diversified

THERE was a falling off in large transactions in real estate this week as compared with the week before, but there was nevertheless a good volume of dealing that was widely distributed. Five old dwellings that comprise an upper Madison avenue corner were bought as a site for reimprovement with a large elevator apartment house and there were other minor sales in this avenue. Lexington avenue, which for many weeks has been a theatre of good dealing, contributed more deals to the market. An ancient block front on Avenue A was sold by the estate of William Waldorf Astor to a well-known operator. Astor sales are now common, whereas they were formerly infrequent. In years past the sale of an ordinary Astor holding was worthy of bold type, whereas now sales by this estate are more or less anticipated. In strong contrast with the policy of the Astor estate is that of the Wendel estate which continues to hold fast to its realty in spite of the changed attitude of the law toward large property owners. Another Riverside Drive dwelling passed into new hands during the week, as did some West End avenue parcels.

An unusual trade was that of a Washington Heights elevator apartment house for a lower East Side tenement house with stores. A lower Sixth avenue corner was taken by an operator, while a Sixth avenue parcel near Herald Square passed into the hands of the tenant. A large apartment house on a Lexington avenue corner was sold. A site for a large garage was bought in the Dyckman section. Probably the bon ton sale of the week was a corner of Fifth avenue and 61st street, for improvement with a costly private house. Chinatown contributed a parcel and the Chinese mercantile firm that occupies it bought it. Various parcels on East Side avenues passed to new ownership. An old family holding at Seventh avenue and 23d street, whose ownership harked back to the era when West 23d street was a choice residential thoroughfare, was bought for remodeling. A costly dwelling in Harlem and some in the Fifth avenue section were bought. In Harlem generally old apartment houses and dwellings comprised the bulk of the dealing. Numerous American basement dwellings in good residential parts of the city were in strong demand. Marble Hill, at the northern outpost of Manhattan, was a factor in the market. Robert E. Simon again operated in Lexington avenue corner property. The activity in this avenue is marked. The diversity of the dealing was the prime feature of the week.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

THE total number of sales reported, but not recorded in Manhattan this week was 71 as against 89 last week and 115 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th st was 32 as compared with 40 last week and 35 a year ago.

The number of sales north of 59th st was 39 as compared with 49 last week and 80 a year ago.

From the Bronx 39 sales at private contract were reported, as against 52 last week and 37 a year ago.

Statistical tables, including the number of recorded instruments, will be found on page 596.

Queens Citizens to Hear Governor

Governor Nathan L. Miller will be the guest of the Queensboro Chamber of Commerce and address its members at their spring luncheon meeting to be held Thursday, May 18, in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Commodore.

Although the subject of Governor Miller's speech has not been announced, it is understood that he will discuss the traction situation in New York City.

William H. Johns, president of the Queensboro Chamber of Commerce, said: "We expect that this meeting will be one of the largest gatherings of the business men and residents of Queens Borough ever held, as reservations have already been received for more than 500 places."

Realtors to Play Golf

The spring golf tournament of the Real Estate Board of New York will open at the links of the Woodway Country Club, Stamford, Conn., on Wednesday, June 7. Further particulars will be announced later.

House with Prize Garden Sold

John Constable Moore sold for Mrs. Laura C. Schroeder, 172 East 64th st, a 4-sty stone English basement dwelling, on a lot 20.10x100.5.

Three years ago Mrs. Schroeder bought this property, rebuilt the house and constructed a garden in the rear which at the late garden show won the first prize for small city gardens.

Sells Prominent Corner

J. S. Maxwell sold for the Sioux Realty Co. to Louis Schlechter, 1125 Lexington av, northeast corner of 78th st, a 7-sty elevator apartment house with stores, known as the St. George, on a plot 38x82.2. It has been resold to the College Holding Co., Joseph Shenk, president.

Trade of Up and Down Town Parcels

Bertha Eichler sold to Samuel Boyarsky the 6-sty elevator apartment house, on a plot 75x100, at 540-542 West 146th st, which has a rent roll of $47,000 and was held at $200,000. The suites are rented as furnished apartments. The seller took in exchange the southwest corner of Second av and 10th st, a 7-sty elevator apartment house containing 7 stores, leased to the United Cigar Stores for 12 years at $10,000 a year. The entire building shows a rental of more than $26,000. The property was held at $150,000. Aaron Fishbach was the broker.

Large Loft Building Sold

Byrne & Bowman sold for the Colony Construction Co., Robert P. Zobel president, to Levy Bros, Brooklyn builders and operators, the Colony Arcade, a 12-sty mercantile building, 61.9x197.6x46, at 62 to 67 West 38th st, extending through to 62 West 39th st. The building is devoted entirely to the millinery trade. Among the tenants are Morris Goldzier, Rosen Bros, & Sussman, L. & L. Bandeau Co., Inc., and others. The property produces a rental of about $150,000 a year. It was held at $1,250,000 and was sold on a cash basis.

The sellers assembled the plot in 1913 and subsequently erected the present building on the lot and have held it as an investment since that time. This is the first large operation by the purchasers in the midtown section, they having been previously engaged in extensive building and lot operations in Brooklyn. They have erected four large theaters in that borough, which they still control.

City Buys New School Sites

Inwood and Dyckman sections are to have larger school facilities through the approval on May 4, by the Board of Estimate of the recommendation of the Board of Education to purchase a large part of the frontage on both 211th and 212th sts, between Broadway and Tenth av. Recommendation was also made to the Board of Estimate by the educational board for the acquisition of the block front on the north side of 181st st, between Morris and Creston avs, for the erection of a school to care for the growing population in this section of the West Bronx.

Famous Architect's Home Sold

Harry M. Lewis sold for Mrs. Julia P. Hull, widow of the late Washington Hull, architect, the 3-sty and basement brownstone dwelling, on a lot 20x100, that was long his home, at 154 South Portland av, Brooklyn. Mary E. Paget is the buyer, for occupancy.

Mr. Hull planned, among other fine buildings, the stone mansion of Senator William A. Clark, on Fifth av. He was drowned a few years ago while yachting in a heavy storm off the Rockaway coast and his body was not recovered.

Astors Sell Avenue A Block

The William Waldorf Astor Estate sold the block front on the east side of Av A, between 5th and 6th sts, to Louis Gold & Co. The property, known as 74 to 92 Av A, consists of ten 4-sty tenement houses with a 25-foot strip in the rear through from street to street. It was held at $350,000. The H. D. Baker Co. and A. Robinson were the brokers.

Banking to Individual Needs

A GREAT institution like this, organized to offer so many services to the public, must of necessity function with the precision of a fine machine.

Yet what has made us one of the strongest trust companies in the City is not so much the modern machinery, but rather that we have found the way to subordinate the mechanics of banking to the individual needs of depositors.

If the collective experience and advice of the officers of that kind of a trust company would benefit you in your individual business, then—

Building in Metropolitan Area Hampered by Labor Troubles

Growing Shortage of Bricklayers, Plasterers and Carpenters, Plus Demands for Bonus Wages, Disheartening to Entire Construction Industry

NO improvement was manifest this week in the local building labor situation. Despite the fact that there have been frequent conferences between representatives of the unions and the Employers' Association, in addition to determined effort on the part of the Public Group Committee toward settling the differences between the two important factions, the construction industry of New York City is no nearer an agreement for the remainder of the current year than it was last January. Negotiations are still in progress and the various trades are seeking to formulate independent agreements with their respective trade unions, but as yet no definite results have been accomplished and the only ray of hope lies in the fact that the industry is maintaining its optimistic attitude toward the possibility of a solution of the problem in the near future.

There is a grave shortage of mechanics in certain trades in the New York territory, and considerable new construction, while not actually at a standstill, is slowed down to a dangerous point on this account. Bricklayers are exceedingly difficult to obtain in adequate numbers and are only held on the jobs by payments of bonus wages, in frequent instances excessively high. The demand for carpenters is also growing, and as a result many contractors are complaining of the lack of skilled mechanics and hesitate to take on additional work because of the high wages being demanded.

Throughout New York City and contiguous territory, construction projects are barely 60 per cent manned with bricklayers. On a large number of jobs, where from ten to twenty-five bricklayers would be employed under normal labor conditions, the number of mechanics actually at work ranges from three to ten. The speculative building program, which includes the major portion of the housing construction now in progress, is suffering particularly because of the labor crisis, and these builders are not only witnessing serious delays on their operations, but are facing constantly mounting construction costs because of the extortionate bonuses these workers are demanding and getting. The daily newspapers carry many advertisements for bricklayers and carpenters, practically all of whom are promised extended employment at wages, in many instances, as high as forty per cent. above the recognized union scale for those trades.

"Snowballing" strikes continue in Queens and the cost of brickwork on buildings in that borough, particularly on projects on which construction is too far advanced to abandon, is increased approximately twenty per cent. because of the demands of labor. Construction in the outskirts of Brooklyn and in the Bronx is being delayed, and in a number of cases held in indefinite abeyance, for like reasons. Public school construction in all sections of the city is suffering greatly on account of the conditions, and all active building, including practically every type of construction, is dropping behind in its schedule, while labor's demands increase and competition for skilled mechanics grows more prevalent.

There is a great deal of labor unrest throughout the local building industry. The conditions at present so adversely affecting the industry in New York City are spreading in a constantly widening circle, and outlying suburban communities are also being hampered in their building programs because of lack of adequate labor and inflated wage scales.

In several counties along the Hudson River bricklayers threaten to strike for higher wages. The spring building program is much greater than was anticipated and labor, therefore, feels that a premium should be paid for its services if this work is to be completed at the time set.

Hudson County, in New Jersey, is in a bad way for bricklayers. Contractors who specialize on projects in that district have had their scouts out everywhere in an endeavor to lure workers to their own jobs. The pay of skilled bricklayers is from $10 to $11 a day, and the shortage is felt in Jersey City and almost every part of Hudson County, where a boom in building construction is in progress, or would be if there were sufficient men to do the work in prospect.

It has been reported from Trenton that bricklayers and plasterers are out on strike for an increase of wages and that considerable construction is being held up pending a settlement of this difficulty. These trades have been working under a scale of $9 per day and are demanding $10 because of the large amount of work in prospect and the keen competition for skilled workers. The contractors of Trenton have made a compromise offer of $9.50 per day, but as yet no reply has come from the unions.

Builders in Newark are also facing higher construction costs through wage advances in certain trades. Following recent conferences with the Ironworkers' Union and the Masons' Laborers' Union, the General Contractors' Association announced that a new scale of wages became effective on May 1. An increase of $1 per day has been granted the ironworkers, increasing their pay from $8 to $9 a day, with the understanding that the former feature of compulsory employment of foremen is to be eliminated. The masons' laborers were granted an increase of three cents an hour, bringing their hourly scale from 72 cents to 75 cents.

A strike of the plumbers in Elizabeth has stopped work on a number of important construction projects in that city and there is every indication that the trouble will spread. As a result of the action of the plumbers, other trades have been affected, and it is reported that about fifty union lathers, carpenters, electricians and their helpers were taken off the jobs when non-union plumbers, sheet-metal workers and their helpers were put to work by the members of the Master Plumbers' Association. The plumbing contractors are bringing in non-union workmen in order to break the strike in their trade, but their action is likely to influence sympathetic strikes and there is a possibility that a large amount of residential and commercial construction in Elizabeth, Roselle, Elmora, and other nearby sections will be retarded. The difficulties in the Elizabeth district are largely attributed to intra-union problems and it is anticipated will soon be settled.

In that section of New Jersey which lies along the line of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, between South Orange and Morristown, there is a decided shortage of workmen in some trades. This applies particularly to bricklayers, plasterers and carpenters, but other trades are also complaining of a growing difficulty in obtaining skilled men at reasonable wages. Practically all bricklayers are demanding a bonus over their recognized rates, and a mason insists upon at least $17 a day on short jobs. Although no construction is yet being held up on labor's account, progress is impeded and there will be serious delays unless the situation improves.

Foundations Started for Large Apartment at Kew Gardens

Multi-Family Dwelling to House One Hundred and Five Families Planned by Shampan & Shampan Will Cost $650,000

FOUNDATIONS have been started for two large multi-family houses at Kew Gardens, L. I., one of the most highly developed and exclusive residential communities in the Borough of Queens. These apartments, which are of the garden type now so generally favored in suburban sections, will provide for one hundred and five families in suites of two, three, four and six rooms.

The operation is progressing under the direction of the Roanoke Construction Company, owner and builder, from plans and specifications prepared by Shampan & Shampan, prominent Brooklyn architects. The cost of construction, including the value of the land, is placed at approximately $650,000.

These apartments occupy a plot averaging 190x150 feet which was recently purchased from the Kew Gardens Corporation by the Roanoke Construction Company through Edgeworth Smith, Inc., who have also been appointed renting and managing agents for the buildings. The buildings are located just off of the Queensboro Boulevard, on the Union Turnpike and Austin street. They are about five minutes' walk from the Kew Garden station of the Long Island Railroad, which is but seventeen minutes from the Pennsylvania Station, Manhattan, and the Flatbush Avenue Station in Brooklyn. The site is within thirty of the Times Square section by motor, via the Queensboro Bridge. The Kew Gardens Inn, under Knott Management, is located near the new apartments and the surrounding neighborhood is built up with modern dwellings of the type which have made this locality famous as a high class residential community.

The new apartments will be four stories in height, with basement, and will be built around three sides of a large exterior court. This court is thirty feet wide and will be extensively landscaped and beautified with flowers, shrubbery, fountains and sculptures. The facades of the building will be of face brick with trimmings of limestone and terra cotta and the walls of the court will be of light face brick which will reflect the light into the apartments.

Plans for this operation show the rooms to be large and of excellent proportions, with ample closet space and all modern conveniences and devices for easy housekeeping. According to the present schedule the construction will not be completed before October 1, but renting is rapidly proceeding now from the plans and the inquiries denote an insistent demand for accommodations in structures of this character located in semi-suburban districts.

Builders' Association Calls Mass Meeting to Discuss Material Shortage

AT the earnest solicitation of many builders in the City of New York, as well as several of the important dealers in building material an informal conference was called by the Builders' Association of Manhattan, at the office of its counsel, Anderson, Phillips & Moss, 565 Fifth avenue, Manhattan, to discuss the shortage of brick and to consider ways and means of remedying the present acute situation. After a thorough discussion, Harry G. Anderson, of Anderson, Phillips & Moss, was delegated to confer with Samuel Untermeyer, chief counsel for the Lockwood Committee, with the suggestion that a wider conference be immediately held to discuss the problems confronting the building industry. It was the consensus of opinion of the meeting that invitations to attend this conference should be sent to the manufacturers of brick throughout the State and New England, the building material dealers, commission dealers in brick, and builders throughout the Greater City of New York.

After a lengthy conference with Mr. Anderson, at which Harry Goodstein, president of the Builders' Association of Manhattan was present, Mr. Untermeyer stated that he realized the serious situation due to the shortage of brick, and accepted the invitation of the Builders' Association of Manhattan to attend the conference.

The Builders' Association of Manhattan accordingly has called a conference to be held on Tuesday evening, May 16, 1922, at 8 o'clock sharp, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, to discuss the problems now confronting the building industry. An invitation to attend this meeting is extended the manufacturers of brick, dealers in brick and building material, builders throughout the City of New York, and any others who are interested in the subject. The invitation sent out by the Builders' Association of Manhattan emphasizes the great importance of the conference. It is expected that plans will be devised which will be of value and importance to the industry.

Monthly Dinner of the Real Estate Board Monday Evening

AT the monthly meeting of the Real Estate Board of New York, to be held at Delmonico's on Monday evening, May 15, an innovation will be made by reserving the latter part of the evening for a general discussion of the work of the Board and for constructive criticism or suggestions for improving it. A special subject for discussion will be the advisability of obtaining a permanent home for the Board.

As usual, all classes of members are expected to attend. Immediately following the dinner, opportunity will be given the active members to vote on certain amendments to the constitution which the Board of Governors thinks it advisable to present at this time. The meeting is confined to members.

New Building Projects Starting Despite Adverse Conditions

Weekly Construction Statistics for New York City, Tabulated by F. W. Dodge Company, Show Only Slight Drop Due to Labor Difficulties

LABOR conditions far from satisfactory and a growing scarcity of certain building materials do not seem to be greatly deterring architects and engineers from going ahead with plans for many large projects nor do these conditions operate as a preventative to the award of contracts for new construction. Figures tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company, for the eighteenth week of this year show that in the territory including all of New York State and New Jersey, north of Trenton, 687 new building and engineering operations were reported in the planning stage. This construction will involve a total expenditure of more than $23,863,600. During the same period the announcement of contract awards represented a total outlay of $16,080,800 and involved 423 separate projects.

Local conditions, as applied to New York City, have apparently not influenced a recession of planning activity nor have the retarding factors been permitted to slow down the award of contracts for new work. During the past week 223 new construction projects, scheduled for locations in New York City, were reported by architects and their value totals $13,788,000.

The contracts awarded for city work during the same period numbered 114 and are representative of an outlay of approximately $8,757,100.

In the group of 223 operations for which plans were reported during the eighteenth week of this year, planned for sites within the boundaries of Greater New York, were 41 business structures of various types, $5,372,000; 1 educational project, $12,000; 6 factory and industrial building operations, $645,000; 2 public buildings, $150,000; 11 public works and public utilities, $555,200; 6 religious and memorial buildings, $440,000; and 156 residential operations including apartments, flats and tenements and one and two-family dwellings, $6,613,800.

Among the 114 projects for which contracts were awarded during the week were 20 business buildings such as stores, offices, lofts, commercial garages, etc., $593,000; 4 educational structures, $1,950,000; 3 hospitals and institutions, $30,000; 2 industrial projects, $37,000; 1 military building, $12,000; 10 public works and public utilities, $402,800; 3 religious and memorial projects, $170,000; 69 residential operations of various types, $5,486,300 and 2 social and recreational buildings, $76,000.

The medal was recently presented at the University Club.

The group consisted of the American section of the Societe des Architectes Diplomes par le Gouvernement Francais, and the medal is an annual award made by the parent society in Paris to commemorate a great service rendered to architecture by a layman.

"Mr. Root has a long and extremely important record in his efforts in behalf of American architecture," said John Mead Howells, president of the American section.

"Mr. Root, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft were responsible for the rehabilitation of the original plan of Washington, D. C., designed by L'Enfant and approved by Thomas Jefferson. It was, however, Mr. Root's untiring support which made possible the work of the commission, consisting of McKim, Burnham, Olmstead and Saint Gaudens."

New President for Geo. A. Fuller Company

James Baird was recently elected president of the Geo. A. Fuller Company, builders, 175 Fifth avenue, succeeding Paul Starrett, who resigned. Mr. Starrett will continue to be identified with the company, although not active in its management, as he has become a director and president of the U. S. Realty & Improvement Company, 115 Broadway, which controls the Geo. A. Fuller Company.

Mr. Baird was the senior vice-president of the company and the manager of the Washington office. He will in future make his headquarters in the Flatiron Building at Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street. The new president is forty-eight years old and has been identified with the company for about twenty years. He is a member of the Engineering Associates and other prominent organizations affiliated with the construction industry, and is also a member of the board of managers of the Cosmos Club, of Washington. For a number of years he has been a governor of the Columbia Country Club, one of the most popular of the Capital's social centers.

Gains in Cement Output

The March production of 6,685,000 barrels of Portland cement brought production for the first quarter of 1922 up to 15,254,000 barrels, a slight increase over the 15,240,000 barrels put out in the opening quarter of 1921. Shipments in the first quarter were 13,218,000 barrels, against 120,091,000 in the same period of 1921. At the end of March stocks amounted to 13,284,000 barrels, compared with 12,000,000 at the end of March, 1921.

Testing Strength of Fire Clay Brick

Experiments on 14 brands of fire clay brick to determine their durability and load carrying capacity in furnace arches are being continued by the Bureau of Mines. Fusion and permeability tests and chemical analyses are still to be made. Entire bung arches, of 40 brick each, were tested at the works of the Ohio Malleable Iron Co., at Columbus, Ohio, in a 40 foot furnace. The relation between serviceability and the resistance to load at high temperatures, spalling, density, porosity, chemical analyses, fusion temperatures, and permeability were studied. The results showed a close relation between the percentage loss on spalling and the serviceability.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

BUILDING interests in this city and the surrounding territory are daily evidencing greater concern over the labor outlook. Building trade workers are not only scarce in some trades, but are demanding wages considerably in excess of their stipulated union scales, and as a result construction costs are steadily mounting and there is a fear that they will go beyond the limit permitted by good business judgment.

There is also a scarcity of basic materials, and a consequent advancing trend to their prices. Both of these factors are exerting a marked influence upon the local construction program, and during the past week a number of prospective builders have decided to hold their operations in indefinite abeyance until the conditions are more favorable to economic building.

Common brick has advanced again in price and the current wholesale quotation is $20 a thousand in cargo lots. Portland cement manufacturers have also announced an increase in price of 25c. per barrel, making the delivered price of this commodity in New York City $3.25 per barrel, less the usual rate for bags returned. The demand is active for all materials and the dealers are for the most part concerned in allocating their supplies so that none of the active construction will suffer undue delays for materials.

Common Brick—Demand for this commodity is far in excess of the available supply and manufacturers are making every effort to get brick into the city, and as a result the up-river plants are now practically devoid of stock. Recent arrivals have been taken out of the market immediately upon the report that the barges have docked and still there is a mad scramble for brick by builders who don't want their projects delayed beyond the October renting season. Manufacturers are doing the best they can to advance production and from all accounts they will have new brick in the market about May 24. This is considerably earlier than in other years, but the circumstances demand all possible haste in filling orders. There is some labor unrest in the Hudson River brick plants and strikes for higher wages have occurred at Kingston, but they have been promptly settled. So far these disturbances have not spread to the yards further down the river, and it is hoped by manufacturers that labor conditions in the plants about Haverstraw and Newburgh will be such this summer as to permit the maximum of brick production.

Summary—Transactions in the North River brick market for the week ending

Thursday, May 11, 1922: Condition of market: Demand greater than the supply; prices, advanced and firm at the new level. Quotations: Hudson Rivers, $20 a thousand to dealers in cargo lots alongside dock. Number of cargoes arrived, 30; sales, 30. Distribution: Manhattan, 9; Brooklyn, 15; New Jersey points, 3; Astoria, 2; Flushing, 1.

Lumber—Trade is active in both wholesale and retail departments of the lumber business and dealers are confident that the demand will increase considerably before mid-summer. There is a growing demand from building sources, particularly in suburban sections, and manufacturing consumers are again becoming real factors in the lumber market. As a whole, lumber prices are steady and firm, but during the past week or so there has been a slight easing off on soft wood prices due to the arrival of fairly large consignment from mill points. Yellow pine is holding firmly and other structural woods are steady. Hardwoods, particularly flooring, are stronger in tone and there is a likelihood of higher prices in the near future.

MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

Roofing and Building Papers—There is a substantial volume of business in this line and the demand is growing daily as new operations are started. Suburban construction is the most important factor in this market and the outlook is for increased requirements throughout the next few months. Prices are firm and unchanged.

Structural Steel—The market for fabricated material for building projects is quite active and the outlook for a steady improvement in demand is excellent. Commitments during the past week or so have involved a large total tonnage, and several important operations, requiring upward of 1,500 tons each, are likely to be closed within the next week or so. Despite the shortage of common brick and other basic materials and the difficulty of securing labor in some trades, the local building program is progressing favorably and there is no recession of activity in sight. Steel prices are very firm and subject to further advances. Fabricators are now generally quoting from $67 to $75 per ton for material erected in commercial structures.

Concrete Bars—Demand for concrete reinforcing material has dropped off to a large extent during the past week. This is largely the result of the fears that the coal strike will prevent mills from delivering on their contracts. Another factor is the advancing price trend, and until both supply and prices are stabilized buying will probably be only for immediate requirements.

Builders' Hardware—Demand is extremely active and dealers are doing their utmost to keep their stocks complete. Persistent rumors of shortages prevail and prices are very firm. Reports from manufacturers indicate that the hardwood demand from all sections of the country is very heavy and production is approximately at full capacity.

Cast Iron Pipe—Despite the lack of important municipal business, the market for cast iron pipe is exceedingly active, with private buyers making heavy commitments for this commodity. Inquiries are numerous and denote a large volume of new business to be released within the next few months. For the most part, pipe foundries are operating at nearly 100 per cent. of capacity and prices are strong and with a tendency to advance. With demand for cast iron pipe in excess of the supply and pig iron prices steadily increasing, manufacturers anticipate an early advance in pipe prices. Current New York prices are as follows: 6 in. and larger, $48.80 per net ton; 5 in. and 4 in., $53.80, and 3 in., $63.80, with Class A and gas pipe $4 extra per ton.

Window Glass—As local construction increases in volume the demand for both plate and window glass is improving proportionately and jobbers are making active preparations for the rush of orders that is due to come during the latter part of the summer, just before the bulk of the building now under way reaches the point at which this material is to be used. At present glass prices are very firm and there is little probability that current levels will be changed to any extent.

Electrical Supplies—The demand for wiring materials and other electrical supplies is steadily gaining. The building boom in this territory is now at its height and there is every indication that the building material and supply markets will be busy to full capacity for the next few months. The price situation in the electrical trade is quite favorable. No changes of importance have been announced and prices are apparently more steady than they have been for some time. Jobbers report their stocks in good shape and there is no complaint of delayed deliveries.

An Ideal Arrangement

With the abandonment of the private generating plant in the Farmers Loan and Trust group downtown, arrangements have been made with The New York Edison Company to supply current for all needs, and with the New York Steam Company, to supply steam for every purpose

By thus taking both electricity and steam from street sources, much valuable space is released for other purposes. In addition there will be a very material saving in the cost of light, power and heat. Central Station supply is the ideal arrangement for large buildings

The three buildings of this group occupy the greater part of the triangular block bounded by Exchange Place, Beaver and William Streets. The total electrical load will be 4000 lamps and 150 horsepower in motors

If your electrical plant is unsatisfactory or your costs high, let us explain what Central Station Service will mean to you

Planning New York's Future

New Yorkers are growing accustomed to the idea that this is the biggest city in the world and that its supremacy in population, finance and commerce is likely to increase rapidly from now on. But very few of the millions living within the Metropolitan District have so far visualized to just what eminence it will attain if the present rate of progress in home and in international affairs is kept up for another century or a considerable part of that period. New York to most of its residents is already nearly perfect, and certainly more desirable as a place of residence than any other part of the country or any place in the whole world.

But the public-spirited men and women at the head of The Russell Sage Foundation, fully recognizing all that is praiseworthy in the physical makeup of the city, further realize that even with all its natural and acquired pre-eminence it still can be improved on and that if the well-being of its inhabitants is to be preserved as its growth increases there must be adopted sane and scientific plans along which the development must be accomplished. The statisticians of the Foundation, fixing the population today of the Metropolitan District at 9,000,000, say that in less than thirty years it will be 16,500,000 and by 2000 A. D. that it will aggregate 37,000,000. Realizing that no other human relation is so abnormal as the congestion of population such as exists on the East Side, in certain sections of the Bronx and in Brownsville, only equalled by the squalid conditions of the slums of London and the repellant features of the native quarters in the cities of the Far East, the Foundation has inaugurated a series of studies, legal, physical, industrial, economic and social, for the purpose of formulating a comprehensive regional plan for the development of the city and its environs so that the welfare of this great multitude of people shall be fully protected. When these investigations have reached the stage of intimate knowledge of the conditions of living and working in this densely populated area, then it is proposed to institute comprehensive plans for the development of the district embodying the best thoughts of engineers, artists and architects, public officials, social workers, economists and business men. It is hoped in this way to bring about the undertaking of projects of constructive importance so as to accomplish the greatest improvement in the social, industrial, commercial, intellectual and artistic values of the community.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover, after outlining the proposal of the Foundation, summed up its possibilities in the following words: "New York is the gateway of Europe into the United States and the dumping of great hordes of people into our slums is a poor introduction to Americanization. One part of such a plan must be a realization of each economic group in the community as to its function to the whole great community of which it is a part. With this in mind residential districts, whose interests center largely around low cost of living and educational and recreational facilities, would see their interests in better means of distribution and the development of public utilities. The manufacturing districts must find out not only better aligned transportation, but co-ordination to residential areas which can be developed upon human lines. The survey can help arouse a consciousness of its needs on the part of each community and group within the whole territory. The co-operation of all groups must be enlisted if a workable plan is to be evolved. This is vital in surmounting the legal difficulties in the way of executing such a plan."

At the recent meeting in the Town Hall, when this great project was launched, speakers called attention to the fact that the rectilinear mapping of the city, with its natural growth retarded by the barriers of the Hudson and East Rivers, had resulted in untold misery in the stifling tenements of the East Side, where two millions of people live in a square mile or two of territory while 300 miles of wilderness of unexampled natural beauty exists only six miles away in Northern New Jersey.

What Washington, Chicago, Paris and other cities have done in the way of city planning New York must do if it is to continue to hold the premier place as the world's most attractive as well as most important city. To the furthering of this commendable project Elihu Root, Robert W. de Forest, John J. Carty, Charles Evans Hughes, William Howard Taft and many other eminent Americans are giving their support, and it is in order that those who will share in the benefits common to all citizens by the carrying out of this humanitarian project, but who will also profit financially, the men and women vitally interested in its real estate, should join with them in its consummation.

Cause of the Brick Shortage

Although it is true that the prevailing scarcity of common brick is retarding local building construction to some extent, there seems to be little real excuse for the loud clamor coming from certain quarters because of the so-called "famine." The complaining builders are themselves largely to blame for the existing conditions. The speculative building program, which has now practically submerged all other forms of construction activity in this vicinity, has for the past few months made it almost impossible for other types of project to proceed. The inroads speculative builders have made upon the available supplies of building labor and materials have substantially increased construction costs and operated in a manner prejudicial to the best interests of the industry as a whole.

No one can deny the existing shortage of brick, but the fault lies almost entirely with those interests which have striven to take the fullest advantage of the Tax Exemption measure and the high rentals still obtainable for living accommodations. In frequent instances these builders have had neither regard for competitors in their own branch of the industry nor any recognition of the rights of others to share in the supplies of those commodities which they desired.

Feverish haste to get apartments completed in time to take full advantage of the high rentals has resulted in a sustained demand for brick throughout the past year. The open winter was a contributing factor, as it permitted construction practically without cessation. This naturally exhausted the brick reserves which under ordinary conditions would have been available for early spring construction and resulted in the chaotic conditions now prevailing.

Recent suggestions that brick be imported from Europe in an effort to break the local wholesale market have not been taken with any degree of seriousness by builders who are informed as to current conditions. There is every likelihood that a fair trial would prove this method of supply both inadequate and prohibitive as to cost. Builders of experience are not placing much faith in the ability of importers to supply foreign brick at prices which will be sufficiently low to affect the market for the Hudson River product.

At this juncture there seems to be only one remedy for the troubles engendered by the scarcity of common brick. That remedy is patience. Hudson River brick manufacturers are doing their utmost to supply all current requirements, and, in addition, to provide a reserve for the coming winter and the early spring of 1923. They have speedily settled strikes in their plants for higher wages and they are operating their machines at the maximum capacity. These producers had no way of foretelling the demand for this season. In past years they have frequently been left with heavy reserve stocks which they were forced to sacrifice in order to resume manufacturing the following season. But the general building public has never heard the brick manufacturers complaining of their losses or because the industry was not living up to its obligation to take brick it could not absorb. It is only when the situation is reversed and a group of interests, selfishly concerned about diminishing paper profits, raise a loud wail that talk is heard about injustice, combinations and inflated prices.

The early release of additional construction will only complicate an already serious situation. If given a reasonable opportunity to produce, the Hudson River brick manufacturers will be in a position to supply all current demands, but they cannot be expected to jump from zero to maximum output in the first few weeks of a new season, particularly as they have had to contend with a fuel shortage, inadequate labor and increasing manufacturing costs.

There is a splendid lesson to the building industry in the prevailing common brick situation. Brick manufacturers have never known beforehand what the demand is likely to be for the season next following. They have always been forced to operate their plants blindly, without knowing even approximately what was expected of them, but being always supposed to have adequate reserve stocks available, whether saleable at a reasonable profit or not. Possibly the lesson of the present crisis is to give the brick-makers some idea of what the requirements of the forthcoming season are likely to be. If this demand can be gauged, manufacturing costs can be stabilized, plants more efficiently operated and managed and the entire building industry benefited thereby.

Mr. Noyes Makes Interesting Analysis of the Real Estate Market

CHARLES F. NOYES, president of the Charles F. Noyes Company, believes that the real estate business today compares favorably with that in recent years at this period in the year. Taking up this line of argument Mr. Noyes declared that the business of his firm is exceptionally good at the present time, with a very excellent outlook for further business as the time approaches the usually dull summer months.

"The 'easy' business of war days is gone," said Mr. Noyes recently, "and all who enjoy normalcy and hard work should be glad of it. In its place the important brokerage firms are now arranging deals with bona fide investors, and this is the best character of real estate dealing at any time. Mortgage money is very easy and any good loan can be obtained at rates of from 5½ per cent. to 6 per cent., and a few good loans have recently been placed at 5 per cent; 5 per cent money, however, is exceptional and security must be ultra-desirable. Business renting for the 1923 season is better than most advance renting seasons. While rentals have dropped to stay dropped from the high point of war days when office space commanded $4.00 to $5.00 per square foot, warehouse buildings 50c per square foot, and manufacturing lofts $1.00 per square foot, yet we all know now that the old figures which existed prior to 1914 will not return. All leases made are being made on the basis of rentals that show a good income yield for the properties and this is as it should be.

"Sales of real estate to investors are now being freely made and a considerable amount of exchanging is being handled by the larger real estate offices. Money is plentiful and this is best emphasized by the fact that during the first three months of this year over $5,000,000,000 in money has been in circulation, or an average of $51.25 per capita as against $35.05 per capita during the same period in 1914, and all of this money is eligible for investment. Not only is this great amount of money in circulation, but in 1920-1921 the aggregate resources of the national banks were nearly double those of 1914. The business man of large affairs finds himself at the end of the war period with 'odds and ends,' and these with a little additional money he can convert into a substantial realty investment. This exchange movement in my opinion will grow, and I predict that within six months one of the healthiest trading markets of my time will be in progress.

"The fact that real estate has proven itself to be the one prime investment of all and is so regarded for the first time even by men who formerly clung to Wall Street or bond investments, is accelerating this movement. The real estate market 'turned the corner' last January and now every month shows a steady and healthy gain not only in volume of business done but in aggregate amount over that of 1921.

"From April 26, 1922, to May 2, 1922, there were transferred 351 properties on Manhattan Island, involving a total assessed valuation of $24,135,000; as against 295 properties transferred from April 27 to May 3, 1921, with an assessed valuation of $20,054,500. From January 1, 1922, to May 2, 1922, there have been 4,090 transfers on Manhattan Island with an assessed valuation of $283,040,750, while during the same period in the year 1921 there were 3,597 transfers at an aggregate valuation, based on the city assessment roll, of $203,904,299. These figures conclusively show that the corner was turned January 1, 1922, and improved conditions in real estate are now being felt by those whose fingers are continually on the pulse of the real estate market.

"The only clouds on the horizon, and these affect every commodity just the same as real estate, are the Soldiers' Bonus Bill, tariff revision and Income Tax regulations. The first two may or may not be solved to the general satisfaction of business, but the present Income Tax regulations as they affect real estate ownership and income derived therefrom will, I think, be modified and worked out with fairness to real estate investments before we are many years older. Beneficial changes were made in the regulations and the laws for 1922, and more will be worked out later. When this one serious handicap is removed Manhattan real estate will have the biggest rise in its history, and while we are waiting for this, all real workers in the real estate profession have all the active profitable business that anyone deserves."

Transit Commission Proposes 32 Miles of New Subways

Plans Additions to Present Lines with Links Between Them and New Four-Track West Side Tunnel All to Cost $218,000,000

NEW subways, links to join existing lines and extensions of these lines extending for 32.55 miles throughout the city with 84.20 miles of track are to be provided at a cost of $218,000,000 by the program of the Transit Commission made public on May 11. It is estimated by the engineers acting for the board that the work can be completed in about five years from the time it is started, and it is expected that contracts will be advertised for bidding in about six months. In presenting its plans to the public for consideration and criticism the Commission says:

"Provision for the building of new subways is one of the most important of the duties with which the Transit Commission is charged. The orders issued, or to be issued by the Commission for increasing service on the existing lines as rapidly as the financial condition of the operating companies permits will, for the time being, afford a substantial degree of relief. But these measures are palliatives only, and do not solve the problem. The growth of the rapid transit traffic, which increases daily, has been upon an enormous scale. The new lines provided under the dual contracts, which more than doubled the mileage of the original subway and elevated system, have been open but a few years, and are already crowded to capacity. Under the highly congested conditions of 1913, the year in which the dual contract construction was commenced, the Interborough subway alone carried 327,471,510 passengers. During the year ending June 30, 1921, the Interborough old and new lines together carried 639,385,780. The elevated lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company in 1913 carried 162,514,055 passengers, while in 1921, with the system of subways allotted to the Brooklyn Company, under the dual plan linked with the elevated, the total rose to 404,970,640. Figures like these tell their own story.

"During the rush hours the lines of both companies are carrying very nearly the maximum number of trains their trackage will accommodate. Bringing in more cars, as the Commission's service orders require, 'spreading the peak' of the period of worst congestion, and keying up the service in every possible respect will continue to help; but points of 'saturation' will again be reached, long before new lines are ready for use. The building of new lines offers, in fact, the only means of permanent and continuous relief, and it is the conviction of the Commission that a broad building program should be launched with the least possible delay.

"A building program should have been under way five years ago. Not a new line has been provided, however, since March of 1913, and some of the construction work then required by the dual contracts has not yet been finished. The time consumed in the building of a subway, including the laying out and validation of routes, the drawing of plans, the preparation of contracts and the actual construction work runs from three to five years.

"With such time limitations in view, the Commission took up the matter of necessary new construction shortly after its appointment. It has since had under consideration a variety of routes and plans, studied out and prepared, in the first instance, by its Consulting Engineer, Daniel L. Turner, and from among these, has agreed upon seven major projects as the first to be presented. It will proceed with the formal adoption of the particular routes included, and take whatever other steps are necessary to set the actual work in motion, after opportunity has been given for full public discussion."

The separate lines proposed, listed in the order in which the Commission believes they should be put under construction, are as follows:

I. The extension of the Corona line, in North Queens, from Corona to Flushing.

II. The extension of the cross-town subway in Forty-second Street, Manhattan, with moving platform equipment connecting with each of the present and future north and south rapid transit lines, both subways and elevated.

III. A Staten Island Tunnel, to connect with the Fourth Avenue Subway, in Brooklyn, and with the various steam and trolley lines in Staten Island.

IV. An extension of the Broadway-Seventh Avenue Line of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system, from Fifty-ninth Street, Manhattan, under Central Park West 110th Street and Seventh Avenue to 155th Street.

V. A Brooklyn crosstown line from the Queensborough Plaza in Long Island City to a point of connection with the Brighton Beach Line, at or near Franklin Avenue and Fulton Street, Brooklyn.

VI. A new subway and East River tunnel to connect the Fulton Street elevated line, in Brooklyn, with the Broadway-Fourth Avenue Line, at the City Hall station, in Manhattan.

VII. A new trunk line subway to run from downtown, Manhattan, to Washington Heights, following, in the main, Eighth and Amsterdam Avenues.

"Although a certain order of construction is indicated," the Commission says, "it is the judgment of the Commission that, so far as possible, the preliminary work upon all of these lines should be taken up at once, and without material difference in the fixing of the dates of actual beginning of construction. It is considered equally important that the entire program should be arranged, so far as possible, in construction units that will be capable of immediate operation as integral parts of the transit system, each as soon as it can be completed, thereby avoiding waste either in the use of operable structures, or in the unnecessary accumulation of interest. The plans of the engineers have been worked out with these ends in view."

The details of the routes proposed, with the estimated costs and periods of time for construction are as follows:

(1) The line to Flushing which, some years ago, was assured first place in the program of extensions to the dual system, will run as a three track continuation of the elevated structure from Corona to Flushing Creek, and from thence as a subway to Main Street. It will cross the Creek on a drawbridge, the plans for which are about to be submitted to the War Department for approval and at its terminal will connect with practically all of the trolley lines entering Flushing from the north. The estimated cost of the work is $2,800,000, and the time of completion three and a half years.

(2) The 42nd Street line of moving platforms, which would be carried in subways under the present sidewalks, would be ready for use in three years, and would cost, including station finish, track and real estate, $6,000,000.

From a traffic point of view the 42nd Street problem is, next to Canal Street, the most important now pressing for solution. The present shuttle service, as the crossbar in the "H" system, has far outgrown its temporary purpose and should be replaced as soon as possible. Passengers are now required to walk a quarter of a mile between the shuttle, with two intervals of waiting, one for the shuttle itself, and one for the up or downtown train. The unloading, simultaneously, of an entire trainload of passengers causes intolerable crowding on the mainline platforms, and aggravates the discomforts of delay. The Commission believes that the moving platform will provide all of the transfer facilities needed more satisfactorily than by any other method. It will reduce walking to a minimum; give continuous service instead of intermittent; shorten the time of transfer; do away with the congestion due to mass arrivals; increase capacity, and provide seats for everyone.

Carried from river to river, this service, incidentally, will solve another serious transit problem. There are seven rapid transit trunk lines, subway and elevated, with twenty-three tracks, at present routing across 42nd Street uptown and downtown, without connection with or transfer to a single crosstown line. When the Eighth Avenue line is built, there will be four more such tracks. This is a vital defect in the carrying system as it exists today. There should be a number of crosstown lines, to give proper convenience and elasticity to the general Manhattan system, but the most pressing need, no doubt, is that existing at 42nd Street, and this need, too, would now be met by the moving platform. Incidentally, the present surface railroad can be eliminated, and proper connection afforded at the 42nd Street North River Ferry for the suburban traffic received at that point. The Commission is reserving appropriate levels for the building of additional subway tracks also across 42nd Street, when and if they are required. It has also under consideration the proposed alternative of looping the 42nd Street Line with a new crosstown line through 34th Street to serve the heart of the shopping district.

(3) For the connection to Staten Island two alternatives are offered. That at present favored by the Commission would be provided by the building of a two track subway, beginning at Fourth Avenue and 57th Street, the present terminus of the Fourth Avenue in Brooklyn, running through Fourth Avenue, under private property and the Ridge Boulevard to Fort Hamilton, and thence under the Narrows to Pennsylvania Avenue, in Staten Island. Via Pennsylvania Avenue the tunnel would extend to a point near Vermont Avenue, at which connection can be made to the South Beach branch of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railway, continuing thence through Pennsylvania Avenue to the South Side Boulevard, where connection can also be made to Tottenville, and other points now reached through the trolley system.

Such a subway and tunnel would take from five to five and a half years to build. The engineers of the Commission, however, also recommend that, upon the completion of the line to Fort Hamilton, a Municipal Ferry be put in operation to connect with the Staten Island points. Such a ferry would cost $3,000,000, and would bring the Island traffic in touch with the subway system three years earlier. Upon the completion of the entire line, it would still find a highly useful service in providing a crossing point for vehicular traffic.

The alternative Staten Island route proposed would begin at Fourth Avenue and 67th Street, Brooklyn, at a connection with the Fourth Avenue line, and proceed under New York Bay to Arietta Street, in Staten Island, where connections would be made with the rapid transit and trolley systems.

To complete the Fort Hamilton route, subway and tunnel, would cost approximately $17,000,000, with $3,000,000 added if a ferry service is used. The route to Arietta Street, which would have a balancing advantage in touching more directly the Staten Island communities at present the most populous, would cost about $4,000,000 more.

It is appreciated that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, under a legislative act of 1921, has been preparing to construct a tunnel connection between Brooklyn and Staten Island, for the joint use of passenger and freight traffic. So far as such a tunnel is designed to carry rapid transit passengers, it would, of course, be essential that it be planned in cooperation with the Transit Commission. The engineers of the Commission are, however, unanimous in their judgment that a tunnel designed to carry freight trains cannot be used for rapid transit passenger purposes. In this judgment the engineers of the Board of Estimate have apparently concurred; though the Commission has not as yet been informed of the nature of their present plans. The Commission is, of course, prepared to enter into any manner of practicable cooperation that will give the Borough of Richmond its much needed transit relief.

The Transit Construction Commissioner, predecessor of the Transit Commission, initiated the preparation of plans for a rapid transit tunnel as early as May, 1920, at which time an appropriation of $50,000 was made by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to provide for the incidental surveys and explorations necessary to the development of more detailed designs and the selection of a place for the proper tunnel crossing. At the time of the passage of the Act of 1921 this work had been advanced considerably but it was stopped when the Board of Estimate cut out the appropriation covering it which the Transit Commission had inherited. It seems not improbable that if the Fort Hamilton Route be chosen, a plan might be agreed upon under which the freight and rapid transit tunnels can be built at the same time, with a consequent saving in the net cost of each.

(4) The Broadway-Fourth Avenue Line, now operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to 59th Street, Manhattan, is a four track trunk line running through 86th Street and Fourth Avenue, in Brooklyn, over and under the East River by way of the Manhattan Bridge and the Whitehall Tunnel, and via Broadway and Seventh Avenue, North. The southern terminal of this line is already supplied with more branches than the trunk tracks can properly accommodate, but the northern extremity has but one collecting and distributing branch, the two track line through 59th and 60th Streets to the Queensborough Plaza. The other two tracks of the trunk line are dead-ended at 59th Street. For this reason, workward in the morning and homeward at night, during the rush hours, only half of the capacity of the line is developed from the northern terminal. Passengers using the Brooklyn system are, moreover, unable to pass north of 59th Street without paying an additional fare at an Interborough station. It is proposed, therefore, to build another two track extension from Seventh Avenue North under Central Park West, and the Park to 110th Street, and thence via Seventh Avenue to 155th Street and Eighth Avenue. A spur track for such a connection has already been constructed. This extension would provide, in effect, another north and south line for the full length of Manhattan Island. It would relieve very materially the Ninth and Sixth Avenue Line of the Manhattan Elevated Company, as well as the Lenox Avenue branch of the original subway between 110th Street and the Harlem River.

Furthermore, it would hasten the time when the Sixth Avenue elevated line may be removed from the street. This line at present adds practically nothing to the capacity of the city's rapid transit facilities. It adds only to the convenience of the passengers using it, and its removal from the street would provide the most immediate outlet possible for the sort of development that is now overstraining Fifth Avenue.

Another incidental advantage of this extension would be that the surface tracks upon Central Park West may be more readily removed—as the subway would provide virtually the same service—and the released surface of the street thereupon transformed into a westerly Park Boulevard.

The approximate cost of the Central Park West-Seventh Avenue extension would be $26,500,000, and the time consumed in construction three and one-half years.

(5) The so-called Brooklyn Crosstown Line was originally projected as an elevated when the dual system was laid out, but its construction was deferred because of local objection to elevated construction, and because of the fact that the city's resources for the more expensive alternative of subway building had then been exhausted. It is the opinion of the Commission that the line should be built as a subway without further delay—first, as a means of articulating all of the rapid transit lines at present traversing Brooklyn and Queens, so that any one of these can be reached conveniently and quickly from any other one; second, as a means of access to the shore front of Brooklyn and Queens north of the Navy Yard; and third, as a direct means of carrying passengers from Manhattan and Queens to Brooklyn and Coney Island without traversing the congested district of lower Manhattan.

Such a line will tend further to decentralize traffic by building up another prosperous business thoroughfare north and south in Brooklyn, and will save the Queens traffic bound for Brooklyn from a long detour through Manhattan.

Through Long Island City the line will follow Jackson Avenue, one of the widest and most important thoroughfares in the business section of Queens. Through the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn, it will follow Manhattan Avenue, the principal business street of that section, and thence through Roebling Street, Williamsburgh, and by the cutting of a new street, of about three blocks in length, from Roebling Street to Bedford Avenue, and thence to a connection with the Brighton Beach Line at Fulton Street and Franklin Avenue. In its progress, it would furnish points of transfer to the stations of all the other lines it would intercept—the Broadway, Myrtle and Lexington Avenue elevated lines, and the 14th Street-Eastern subway.

The Commission has also in view a further connection between this line by way of Flushing or Park Avenues and Jay and Smith Streets, to the Borough Hall section of Brooklyn. At some future time, no doubt, it will also be desirable to connect the northern end of the line directly with the Astoria branch of the Queensborough system, thence into Manhattan at 25th Street and across 125th Street to Fort Lee Ferry.

The estimated cost of the line as now proposed is $24,000,000, and the time to complete from three to three and one-half years.

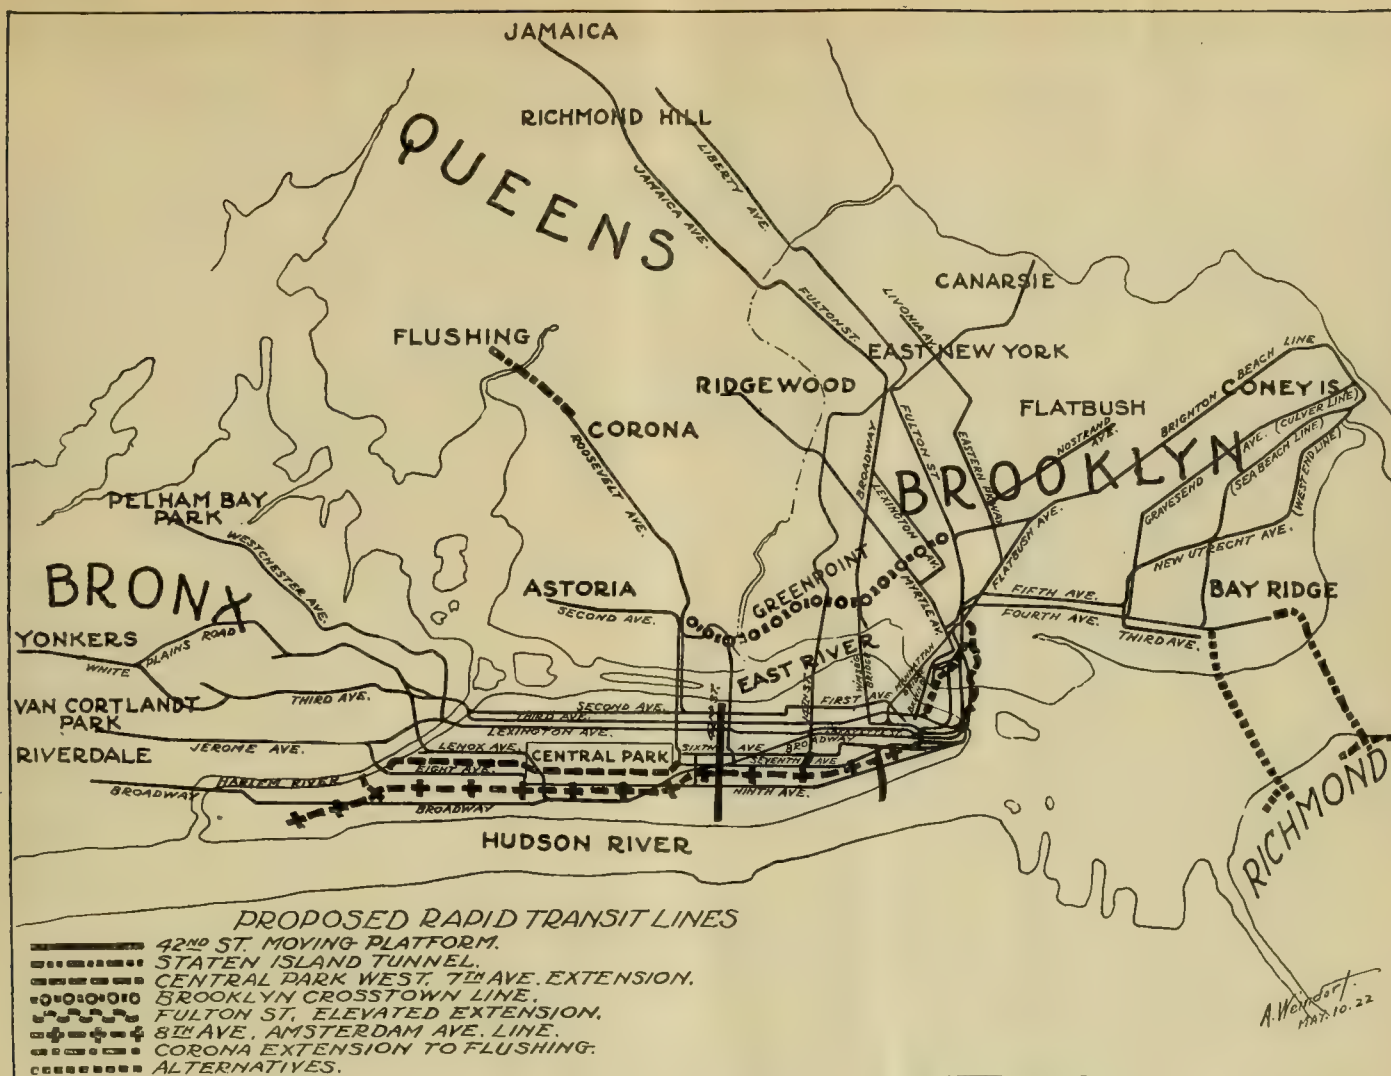

(6) The proposed link between the Fulton Street elevated line in Brooklyn and the Manhattan sections of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit subway would proceed, at the Brooklyn end, by way of the so-called "Ashland Place connection." This will provide additionally a connection with the present Fourth Avenue Subway. It is the view of the Commission, however, that another crossing to Manhattan should be afforded through a new East River tunnel, for the relief from over-crowding of the existing Whitehall tunnel. If such a plan is followed, it will involve more or less modification of the Nassau Street line in Manhattan. The building of this line, for which provision is made in the dual contracts, had not been undertaken, apparently more or less by common consent, during the eight years preceding 1921. The present Commission, upon its appointment a year ago, made no change in this situation, pending proper consideration of plans under which it might be linked with a tunnel of its own or otherwise modified. The present recommendations of the Commission's engineers cover two alternative routes. Each of these would require, at the start, the removal of the elevated railroad from lower Fulton Street, Brooklyn, thereby greatly improving the most important thoroughfare of that borough. Under either, the Fulton Street tracks would be dropped to a subway at a point at or near Clermont Avenue, and carried thence via Fulton Street, private property, Fort Greene Place, DeKalb Avenue, further private property and Livingston Street to Sidney Place. From this point, the first of the alternative routes would proceed under Grace Court and the East River to Nassau Street, and thence across Park Row under the present Post Office Building to a connection with the Broadway Subway at City Hall, Manhattan. Under the second alternative, the line would run from Livingston Street under private property to Clinton Street, and thence through Liberty Street and lower Fulton Street under the East River to Ann Street, in Manhattan, and across Park Row to the main line at City Hall.

"The great Central District of Brooklyn has so far been deprived of proper access to the city-wide subway system," the report adds, "The Commission wishes to right this seeming injustice as soon as possible. Brooklyn needs more than anything else in the way of transit facilities additional trunk line access to and through Manhattan. There are so many branch lines traversing the Borough of Brooklyn under the dual plan, the traffic upon all of which is developing remarkably, and so few trunk lines serving these, that only about half of the full capacity of the existing Brooklyn system can really be developed until more trunk lines are constructed. This, in the judgment of the Commission, is the strongest argument in favor of the construction of a new and separate tunnel for the downtown Manhattan connections.

"The estimated cost of the first of the alternatives proposed from Ashland Place to the City Hall, within which part of the original Nassau Street line would be incorporated, is $28,000,000, and that of the Ann Street connection, $25,000,000. In estimating the outlay upon either of these alternatives, however, allowance should be made for the estimated cost of $7,000,000 of the Nassau line as a link in the dual plan, which is still carried in the estimates of uncompleted dual work, and which, of course, would be deducted from the total cost of the purely new work."

The report continues:

(7) The Eighth Avenue-Amsterdam Avenue line would, in many respects, be the most important and the most ambitious in scope. Beginning at a point in Forty-first Street between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, where connection is to be made with the Queensborough subway, ground for which was broken last week, it will run south on a four track line through Eighth Avenue to Fourteenth Street, and as a two track line to Hudson and Chambers Streets. Northward from Forty-first Street it will run as a four track subway up Eighth Avenue and across Fifty-seventh Street, with underground access to Columbus Circle, and up Amsterdam Avenue to 103rd Street, thence as a four track subway to 155th Street, still via Amsterdam Avenue but as a three track subway to 159th Street and Fort Washington Avenue, and thence to 181st Street.

It is proposed to construct the Eighth Avenue line by sections, each capable of linking up upon its completion with some part of the transit system now in use, and in accordance with the following program:

(a) The first section recommended for construction will cover the portion of the line extending from 41st Street to Fourteenth. This will carry four tracks, but so placed as to permit the addition of another group of tracks at a later date. Eventually eight tracks are designed for the full trunk sections of this route. Those now to be built will be located in a two deck four track subway, placed on the west side of the Avenue. At Forty-first Street this will be connected with the Queensborough extension, and at 14th Street by means of two connecting tracks to Sixth Avenue and Fourteenth Street, with the Fourteenth Street-Eastern District line to Brooklyn.

These connections will afford a through loop service between the Queensborough and 14th Street lines, incidentally opening up one of the most important sections of Manhattan to either.

(b) The second building stage south on Eighth Avenue will carry the line from Fourteenth Street to a terminal station at Chambers Street, where passengers desiring to go further south in Manhattan, or to Brooklyn, will transfer to the Broadway-Seventh Avenue line.

(c) The third step will cover the section north, again as a two deck four track subway, on the westerly side of Eighth Avenue to Fifty-seventh Street, and thence by way of Amsterdam Avenue to 103rd Street. At this point, the traffic of Lenox Avenue branch of the existing subway can be diverted to the new line thereby providing for the immediate relief of the upper west side of Manhattan through the turning over the existing Broadway-Seventh Avenue line entirely to its service.

(d) As a fourth and final step, the line will be continued on a four track single level up Amsterdam Avenue to 155th Street, and from this point, with three tracks, up Fort Washington Avenue to 181st Street. This fourth unit will provide the further facilities so badly needed through the densely built apartment territory that has developed in upper Manhattan, as the result of the building of the first subway. It would provide this territory with an express service beginning at 155th Street and running the full distance south to Fourteenth Street.

The estimated cost of the Eighth Avenue line by sections would be: (a) $12,000,000; (b) $7,500,000; (c) $24,000,000; (d) $26,000,000—a total of $69,500,000. Sections (a) and (b) would take a little over three years to complete; sections (c) and (d) four years.

"It is proposed, incidentally," the Commission declares, "to develop a general concourse station at Columbus Circle, where the lines of the Amsterdam Avenue, the Broadway-Central Park West connection and the present subway will converge all within an area of two or three blocks. This would bring the service of practically every part of the city to Columbus Circle and materially stimulate the development of this increasingly important section of Manhattan.

"While the building of the Amsterdam Avenue line to Washington Heights, and the extension of the Broadway line to Harlem, will provide the west side of Manhattan for some time to come with the facilities it so badly requires, the crosstown line through Brooklyn, connection with all of Manhattan north of the Queensborough Bridge connection, will, in turn, greatly relieve the present pressure on the east side lines. The provision made at various points in the new plan for cross connections, affecting nearly every line in the city, will in turn permit a much improved distribution of the general traffic, and aid the better development of the city itself."

The several new routes projected will add the following track and route mileage to the present mileage of the dual system:

No.	Classification	Length of Route
		in Miles	Length of Tracks in Miles
1.	Flushing Extension	1.90	5.20
2.	42nd Street Moving Platform Line.....	2.00	4.00
3.	Staten Island Tunnel. Either alternative.....	3.20	6.40
4.	Central Park West—7th Avenue Extension....	5.10	12.50
5.	Brooklyn Crosstown Line	6.25	12.50
6.	Fulton Street Elevated Extension.....	2.80	5.60
7.	Eighth Avenue—Amsterdam Avenue Line.....	11.00	38.00
		Total 32.55	84.20

"The total estimated cost of the construction," the Commission says in conclusion, "of the seven projects in view is in round numbers $174,000,000. With the addition to this figure of the overhead costs of administration and engineering, and the amounts of interest on the funds employed, paid during construction estimated at $44,000,000 in all, the total cost of the lines will be $218,000,000.

Suit Begun to Test Legality of Tax Exemption Ordinance

President Goldfogle, of Tax Department, Made Defendant, Gives Number and Amount of Exemptions During First Year of Law's Operation

A SUIT to determine the legality of the tax exemption ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen, in accordance with the permissive act passed by the Legislature, has been brought by the Hermitage Company, No. 2 Rector Street, in the Supreme Court against Henry M. Goldfogle, president, and the members of the Board of Taxes and Assessments to restrain them from exempting new housing from taxation.

The Hermitage Company, in the papers filed, assert that since the passage of the ordinance many new houses have been erected and if such ordinance is permitted to be followed by the Tax Commissioners, $100,000,000 in new construction will be exempt from taxation soon, "thereby increasing very substantially the amount of taxes which this plaintiff will be obliged to pay on its property."

The complaint further sets forth that the "Board of Aldermen had no power or jurisdiction to pass said ordinance, the same is wholly null and void, and the proposed act of the defendants in exempting said new buildings from taxation in accordance with the provisions thereof, will be an illegal official act."

The plaintiff therefore asks that "the said illegal official act of said defendants as such Commissioners in exempting such new buildings from assessment for purposes of taxation be prevented by the judgment of this court and that this plaintiff have such other relief as may be proper."

The Corporation Counsel will defend this suit.

President Goldfogle issued a statement declaring that if the suit was successful the city would receive $2,294,000 in taxes, which is the amount that would have been paid on $83,450,000 of property exempted under the ordinance during the first year it was in force, and that the tax lists would ultimately be increased a total of approximately $23,000,000 because exemption extends over ten years.

According to figures given out by Commissioner Goldfogle, the exemptions allowed are as follows:

On one and two-family houses, $59,108,840. On multi-family houses (apartment houses), $24,341,400. These figures are for all boroughs.

The total tax, if the exemptions are not provided for, would be $2,294,881.60. Commissioner Goldfogle pointed out that since the exemption lasts for ten years, the amount which the city will lose in taxes is $22,948,816, and if the same amount of property is exempted during the second year, that figure will be doubled.

The exemptions during the first year the ordinance has been in force follow:

Tax Exemption by Boroughs
	One-family houses	Two-family houses	Multi-family houses
Brooklyn	3,124	1,352	168
Bronx	718	195	67
Queens	5,235	1,411	29
Richmond	1,122	61	3
Manhattan	1	45
Total	10,200	3,019	312

In the Borough of Manhattan the largest single exemption allowed, according to Commissioner Goldfogle, is on an apartment house at Broadway and Ninety-seventh to Ninety-eighth Street. This exemption amounted to $719,000.

In the Bronx, the largest exemption was $400,000 on property on Mt. Eden Avenue; in Brooklyn, $340,000 on property on Ocean Avenue; in Queens, $279,000 on property at Forest Hills, and in Richmond, $10,000.

Real Estate Board Increases Annual Dues of Active Members

THE Real Estate Board of New York held its monthly dinner meeting at Delmonico's last Tuesday night.

President Charles G. Edwards, Vice-President Walter Stabler, Secretary William H. Dolson, and Treasurer J. Irving Walsh, took a lively interest in the proceedings. Mr. Edwards relinquished the chair to Mr. Stabler during the discussion of business. Other members of the Board of Governors present were: Clark T. Chambers, Charles A. DuBois, Irving S. Whiting, William D. Kilpatrick and Weymer H. Waitt. The officially appointed inspectors to examine, canvass and count votes were: Benjamin M. Phillips, Fenimore C. Goode, Frank H. Tyler, W. L. DeBost and E. A. Tredwell.

Primarily, the meeting was for passing on amendments to the Constitution in matters which concerned only the active members; and it was the first occasion in the history of the Board when the strictly business affairs of the active members were discussed among all of the members.

Of the amendments acted on the first was for increasing the annual dues of active members from $75.00 to $100.00. This was carried by a vote of 91 to 43.

The second amendment was designed to remove the limit now placed on active membership. The growth of the Board in recent years has made it necessary to amend several times this provision in the Constitution. In 1913 when there were about 195 active members, the limit was placed at 200. In 1920 it was raised to 300. In June, 1921, it was changed so that when there should be a waiting list of 51, 50 should be taken in and a new waiting list be started up to 50. In the fall of 1921 a definite limit of 350 was set up. This has since been passed, with a waiting list nearly sufficient to make 400. The Board of Governors therefore decided to put the matter before the membership with the result that the amendment removing the limit entirely was carried by a vote of 124 to 20.

Among the subjects in which interchange of opinion was had at the meeting were: The Licensing of Real Estate Brokers and Salesmen; the Relationship between the Broker Member and the Property Owner Members of the Board; the Value of the Board to the Broker and to Other Classes of Members.

The Real Estate Board will be represented at the Convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at San Francisco in the latter part of May, by Charles G. Edwards, president, J. Irving Walsh, treasurer, and Richard O. Chittick, executive secretary. Mr. Walsh will be accompanied by Mrs. Walsh and their daughter, Miss Walsh.

"The funds necessary to meet the cost of construction will, no doubt, be raised, as required, through the sale of city bonds. The methods through which the amount required for the equipment of the new lines, which may reach an additional $100,000,000, will be determined as the general consideration of the future relationship of the city and the operating companies proceeds. The degree to which bonds for construction may be sold under the city's present constitutional margin of borrowing capacity is yet to be determined.

The Commission understands from the official statements of the city Comptroller that a substantial borrowing margin is already available. It will, however, very naturally consult both the Comptroller and the Board of Estimate upon the general subject of financing at the appropriate time.

"Early announcement will be made of the dates to be fixed for hearings, at which full public discussion will be invited, and which will be held before further action of any definite nature is taken, either upon the plan in its entirety, or upon any of its details."

Review of Real Estate Market for the Current Week

Sale of a Large West End Avenue Apartment House Stood Out in Bold Relief Amid Much Varied Dealing

THE principal characteristic of the real estate market, this week, was dealing in all kinds of properties in all parts of the city. Old and new tenement houses of the walk-up types, elevator apartment houses, private dwellings of all kinds and conditions, vacant plots for improvement, old corners for reimprovement, business taxpayers, mercantile buildings and dwellings to be remodeled into stores and offices, formed the aggregate. Tenants acquired some of each kind of improved property and one tenant who had been leasing a large plot in Harlem for a stone yard bought the plot. Some old estates disposed of choice parcels. The William Waldorf Astor estate still continues to sell.

Crowning the dealing of the week was the resale of the Evanston elevator apartment house, at the southeast corner of West End Avenue and 90th Street, for about $1,750,000. It represented the taking of a quick profit by a firm of big operators. Everybody seems to be a bull on New York real estate just now. There were other important elevator apartment houses sold and some of them are in course of being resold. The Horace Russell mansion, on a Park avenue corner, was resold as the site for a church.

Madison and Lexington Avenue corners as well as inside parcels figured largely in the dealing. The upper reaches of these thoroughfares are in a state of transition from private residence to apartment residence and business combined that shows the spreading out of the apartment house construction movement. The Lexington Avenue subway route is a powerful factor in the change under way. Several sites for tall elevator apartment buildings were bought on cross streets. A single lot in Upper Fifth Avenue—a rarity nowadays—changed hands for improvement with a fine dwelling. Some Third Avenue corners were bought. The Steinway piano firm added to the plot it has assembled in East 58th Street as the site of a new building for its offices.

Downtown the Childs restaurant firm bought a building on Broadway, near Leonard Street, that it has long leased. The lower West Side was active. Trinity Church sold a group of old buildings and there were scattered sales that indicate strong demand. Some of these parcels were bought by tenants. A parcel on Sixth Avenue also went into the hands of a tenant.

Two Columbia University leaseholds adjacent to Fifth Avenue were bought and the buildings on them will be remodeled for business uses. The leasing for a long term of years of the southwest corner of Broadway and Third Street means the passing of an old 3-story building that was originally a dwelling and the reimprovement of the site with a small office building. Emphasizing the growing rental power of the Fifth Avenue and 42d Street section was the leasing of one of the newly made stores in the street side of the Bristol building to a trunk and bag dealer, at an aggregate rental of $300,000 for a term of years that is not very long. It represents a vastly increased rental over that paid by the former lessee. A 21 years' lease of the old dwellings at 166-168 Fifth Avenue was another important lease of the week.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

THE total number of sales reported, but not recorded in Manhattan this week was 109, as against 71 last week and 101 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th st was 47, as compared with 32 last week and 62 a year ago.

The number of sales north of 59th st was 62, as compared with 39 last week and 70 a year ago.

From the Bronx 34 sales at private contract were reported, as against 39 last week and 21 a year ago.

Statistical tables, including the number of recorded instruments, will be found on page 626.

Trinity Sells Old Holdings

Corporation of Trinity Church sold the property at 193 and 205 West Houston st, 146x100x irregular, situated 265 feet east of Varick st. The property consists of six dwellings and a vacant lot. Plans for an interesting development will be announced in a short time.

West Side Corner in New Hands

Col. A. R. Kuser, a large stockholder in the Fox Film Corporation, purchased from the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. the 4-sty brick building at the southeast corner of Tenth av and 54th st for about $500,000. The property is under lease to the Fox Film Corporation for a term of 21 years, but that fact, according to officials of the film company, has no bearing whatsoever upon the purchase by Col. Kuser. The Fox interests, it was said, did not want the fee to the building themselves, so Col. Kuser bought it on his own behalf for investment.

The building occupies a plot 175x100.5 and is one block south of the $1,200,000 Fox film studio and executive office building, which occupies the entire block front on the east side of Tenth av, from 55th and 56th sts. It is used by the Fox company in conjunction with the main building for studio purposes. It also serves as a storage house and headquarters for the purchasing department of the film company.

Candy Manufacturer Buys in Queens

Roman-Callman Co. sold to the Rocco Realty Corporation, (a holding corporation for Ridley's, well known manufacturer of popular priced candy), a plot of 22,750 square feet at the northwest corner of Queens Boulevard and Moore st, Long Island City, having a frontage of 100 feet on the Boulevard and 227½ feet on the street, and being at the end of the viaduct from the Queens Borough Bridge Plaza. The 100 x 100 Boulevard corner was sold for the estate of Joseph A. Bermel, former President of Queens borough, and the adjoining 127.6 feet on Moore st was acquired from Cornelius Burke. On this plot a 4-sty reinforced concrete building will be erected, having a total floor area of 70,000 square feet (with steam heating, refrigerating, air conditioning, and power plant), and of the most modern construction. Ridley's was established in 1872 and was long located on Grand st, Manhattan, but, keeping up with the growth and development of the city the location was later changed to the West Side of Manhattan, and this latest move to Long Island City will be a notable step in the improvement of one of the important thoroughfares of greater New York.

Long Rest for R. E. Simon

Robert E. Simon, whose work as broker and operator in important real estate transactions has long made him a prominent figure in the New York market will sail for Europe on June 13, on the steamship Reliance, of the American Line.

Mr. Simon will be absent for fifteen months and it will be his first real play spell in many years. While abroad he will carefully study real estate conditions in the large cities and meet the leading property owners and brokers of the places he visits. His main purpose, however, is recreation.

During his absence his office in the Brokaw building, at 1457 Broadway, will be open as usual. It will be in charge of his confidential man, H. R. Thompson, who will represent Mr. Simon in all matters.

United States Guaranty Company Increases Its Dividend to an 8% Basis

The Board of Directors of the United States Title Guaranty Company of 32 Court street, Brooklyn, has declared a semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent., payable on June 15, 1922, to all stockholders of record at the close of business May 31, 1922, it having been on a 6 per cent. annual basis up to the present time.

The progress of this company and the noticeable increase in its activities, which began several years ago under the able leadership of its late president, George A. Fleury, has continued steadily under the present administration. The company has been very active in the mortgage market, principally in the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, and has built up a large guaranteed mortgage and certificate business. The officers and directors are being heartily congratulated on the success of their efforts. While its policy is known to be a conservative one, its activities indicate an aggressive attitude in building up its business, and its success on these lines is assured.

The statement of the condition of the company at the close of business December 31, 1921, showed assets of $1,527,308.51. The capital stock of the company is $625,000, and its surplus and undivided profits, which were $480,658.27 at the close of the year, had been increased to $530,000 on May 1. The officers are Charles E. Covert, president; Paul C. Cloyd, George W. Cummings, Charles J. Lockitt and James G. Debevoise, vice-presidents; Charles H. Puckhaber secretary; James J. Mulhearn, treasurer; Charles V. Rapelle, John Browne, Fred B. Bradley, assistant secretaries, and Hugo Hirsh, general counsel.

Charles A. Boody is Chairman of the Executive Committee, the other members being William C. Courtney, Charles A. Angell, Walter V. Cranford, Charles F. Neergaard, Hugo Hirsh and William B. Greenman.

Childs, As Tenant, Buys Building

The Childs Co. bought the property it occupies at 351 Broadway, with an "L" through to 91 Leonard st, surrounding the northwest corner of Broadway, from the American Institute of the City of New York for a stated consideration of $203,000. The buildings, of the 4 and 3-sty type, on which a mortgage of $175,000 is allowed to remain, measure 25.6x173.1x irregular, the "L" through to Leonard st being 11.6x 56.9.

East Side Apartment Site Sold

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. and James E. Clark sold for the estate of Mary B. Hughes 146-158 East 52d st, seven 4-sty flats, on a plot 150x100.5, to a syndicate composed of W. and J. B. Ferguson, Julius Bendheim and David H. Van Dam.

This property, which was held at $300,000, will be improved by the purchasers with a 9-sty apartment house of the best type from plans of Schwartz & Gross.

Stoddard & Mark represented the buyers and the contract for the building will probably be awarded to Ferguson Bros.

Operators Sell Madison Avenue Corner

Weil & Mayer sold 1431 Madison av. southeast corner of 99th st, a 7-sty elevator apartment house with stores, known as the Blythebourne, on a plot 50.11x100, to Mrs. Celina Bloom.

Steinways Add to Site

Douglas L. Elliman & Co., Inc., in conjunction with Edward J. Hogan, sold for Mrs. Ernest Fahnestock 116 West 58th st, a 4-sty and basement brick dwelling, on a lot 20.2x 100.5.

The buyer is Steinway & Sons, who through this purchase now have a frontage of approximately 60 feet on 58th st by 63 feet on 57th st. This concern, for many years located at 109 East 14th st, plan in the near future to erect a new building for their permanent home on this plot.

Famous Estate Passes

The Knolls on Chester Hill, Mount Vernon, N. Y., country home of the late James A. Bailey, the circus man, is to be converted into a combination country club and hotel. Announcement to that effect is made by Mayor Edwin W. Fiske of Mount Vernon. According to the latter the project will be carried out by the Bailey Park Hotel Co., which has been incorporated to take the property over.

Judging from the elaborate plans the establishment will be modeled after the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club, just completed by the Bowman interests, between Harrison and Rye. A 12-sty structure containing 500 rooms is to be put up on the Bailey estate and an 18-hole golf course is to be laid out. It is estimated that the entire project will cost about $3,000,000.

The Knolls comprises about 32 acres, and was mentioned as one of the chief assets in the circus man's estate in the suit brought by his niece, Anna E. Robinson, to break his will on the grounds of insanity and undue influence. The showman had always felt a great affection for the place and spent much of his spare time there. Upon his death he left it to his widow, who died in 1912.

The original owner of The Knolls was best known as the partner of P. T. Barnum in the Barnum & Bailey Circus enterprise. He was born with the virus of the "big top" in his blood and at the age of 15 ran away from the home of his aunt in Detroit, Mich., to join a circus. He was an orphan whose only heritage was the family name of McGinniss. This, however, he readily changed by way of compliment to Fred Bailey, the manager of his first show.

Judge Russell's Home Resold

The efforts of J. P. Morgan, Mrs. Robert Winthrop and other well known Murray Hill residents to prevent the old home of the late Judge Horace Russell, at the southeast corner of Park av and 37th st, from falling into the hands of tall apartment house builders have been successful. The property has been purchased by Christian Scientists, who plan to erect a costly church on the site. The plot measures 98.6x105.

Mr. Morgan, Mrs. Winthrop, William Church Osborn, Mrs. Charles H. Coster, George Bowdin, John Riker, Mrs. Willis Reese and others formed a syndicate last fall and purchased the property. The sale to the church interests is said to have been made at a figure which will clear the syndicate of all expense involved in the venture. The Murray Hill folk had about determined to improve the site with low multiple residences when the offer was received from the church interests.

The Garment Center Realty Co. obtained from the Title Guarantee & Trust Co. a loan of $6,000,000, covering their two buildings on the west side of Seventh av, at 37th st. The northerly building has a frontage of 74 feet on Seventh av, and a depth of 275 feet on 37th st, with an L through to 38th st with a frontage of 116.8 feet. New York Society of Architects Holds Annual Meeting

James Riely Gordon Elected President for Seventh Consecutive Year at Gathering
[Which Indicated Organization's Increasing Sphere of Influence]

NEARLY one hundred members of the New York Society of Architects attended the annual meeting and banquet which was held at the Hotel Astor, Tuesday evening, May 16. Those present were extremely enthusiastic about the excellent progress made by the organization during the past year and the promise of greater constructive efforts to be made during the forthcoming months. This association has outlined an ambitious program of legislative work for the ensuing year and its activities, steadily widening in scope, are a reflection of the growing interest in the development of the organization along constructive lines and the realization that the Society is accomplishing a splendid service in raising the business and ethical standards of the architectural profession.

President James Riely Gordon presided at the business meeting which preceded the dinner. The annual reports of the officers and chairmen of the standing committees all showed the New York Society of Architects to be in a flourishing condition and evidenced a vast amount of unselfish interest and effort on the part of the individuals and committees charged with the conduct of the organization.

The reports of the Membership and Legislative Committees were particularly interesting and encouraging. During the past twelve months the enrollment of this society has grown steadily and consistently and its personnel now includes a large number of the most prominent architects in this city.

The Legislative Committee report dealt almost entirely with the proceedings leading up to the passage of the Architects' Registration Bill passed by the last session of the Legislature, and now law. This committee also outlined its program for legislative work contemplated next year, and impressed upon the society the great need for extreme watchfulness to prevent the passage of laws that will be prejudicial to the best interests of the architectural profession and the building industry as a whole, and furthermore asked for the fullest co-operation of the members in the committee's efforts to foster beneficent legislation.

The Nominating Committee, after reviewing the work of the officers who have served the society during the past year, decided no more zealous or efficient officers could be selected, and renominated James Riely Gordon as president; Adam E. Fisher, vice-president; Edward W. Loth, second vice-president; Arland W. Johnson, secretary; Walter K. Volckening, financial secretary, and Henry Holder, treasurer. These officers were unanimously elected upon the subsequent ballot. The election of Mr. Gordon as president is the seventh consecutive year he has been selected for this honor, and the society was a unit in giving President Gordon credit for untiring labor in developing and expanding the work of the organization.

President Gordon acted as toastmaster at the banquet which followed the annual meeting. Seated with him as guests of the New York Society of Architects were: D. Everett Waid, Treasurer of the American Institute of Architects and President of the New York State Board of Examiners for the Registration of Architects; William P. Bannister, Past President of the Brooklyn Chapter, A. I. A., and Secretary of the State Board of Examiners; Frank Mann, Tenement House Commissioner; W. S. Faddis, President of the Building Trades Employers' Association; Edward W. Loth, Vice-President of the New York State Association of Architects; James B. Slee, President of the Brooklyn Chapter, A. I. A.; Wm. Wholean, representing Eidlitz & Hulse, attorneys; Hon. James N. Bly, Assemblyman from Brooklyn, and a member of the society, and W. P. Tienken, of THE RECORD AND GUIDE.

After an interesting vaudeville program the toastmaster called upon several of the guests for brief addresses. In practically every instance these talks were informal and dealt largely with the recent passage of the bill requiring architects practicing in this State to register. The New York Society of Architects was in a large measure responsible for the successful passage of this legislation which places this State among the leading commonwealths which have taken definite action toward the curtailment of unqualified practitioners in this profession.

Mr. Waid, who has been identified for several years with the State Board having charge of the registration of architects, briefly told of the benefits accruing to the profession and the building industry through the provisions of this measure and explained some of the qualifications required by the Board of Registration. In closing he highly complimented Assemblyman Bly for his untiring interest and effort in behalf of this bill, and admitted that if it had not been that Mr. Bly was also a qualified architect as well as a statesman, it is doubtful if the bill would have passed the Legislature.

Mr. Bannister told the members of the society something about the machinery of registering the profession according to the provisions of the law. He explained how every section of the law has been passed upon by the State Attorney General, and compared the salient points of the New York State law with similar legislation passed by other states and showed how the profession in New York is better protected against promiscuous practitioners.

Commissioner Mann, of the Tenement House Department, complimented the society on its growth during the year and its achievements along constructive legislative lines, and then told how improved standards of planning and design would better local living conditions and protect our population against poorly constructed and unsanitary dwellings. In passing, he stated that all housing construction records are being broken by the present building boom, that apartments now under construction will provide for approximately 50,000 families, and that the structures for which plans have already been completed and filed but construction not commenced, will furnish homes for another 50,000 families. These apartments are in multi-family dwellings located in the five boroughs of New York City, and do not take into consideration the large number of one and two-family houses either now under construction or for which plans have already been filed.

Assemblyman Bly spoke at length upon the efforts leading up to the passage of the Registration Bill during the closing days of the session, and how it was necessary to combat prejudices of legislators who do not realize the importance of the measure nor the effect its passage would have in stimulating higher professional standards, to say nothing of insuring safer construction throughout the State.

In conclusion Mr. Wholean spoke of the legal aspects of the Registration Bill, and Mr. Loth told of his twenty-five years of experience in working for this measure which only became law about a month ago.

N. Y. Building Congress Inaugurates Luncheon Meetings

Dr. B. M. Anderson, Economist of Chase National Bank, Addresses Members on Subject of "Price Trend in Trade"

MORE than fifty members of the New York Building Congress attended the first of a series of luncheon meetings arranged to keep the membership in touch with the activities and aims of the organization. This luncheon was held at the Engineers' Club, Tuesday, May 9, and the enthusiasm of those present indicated to the officers that the future meetings scheduled will grow steadily in popularity.

The luncheon this week was planned by John Lowry, Jr., chairman of the Committee on Surveys, and was addressed by Dr. Benjamin M. Anderson, Jr., economist of the Chase National Bank. The subject of Dr. Anderson's address was "Price Trend in Trade," and although the speaker did not stress past or current price trends as they apply particularly to the building industry, those present obtained valuable information and data that will be useful in making an analysis of the price tendencies in the construction business.

Dr. Anderson outlined in an interesting manner the history of general commodity prices from 1914, at the time of the outbreak of the war in Europe, to the present. Study of the index numbers for all commodities showed no particular change during the latter part of 1914 as a result of the war, and in the year following there was only an average increase of five per cent., and Mr. Anderson stated that the industrial slack at the outbreak of the war was the reason for the relatively small increase in prices.

The demands for goods, quickened by the requirements of the warring nations, however, caused American industries to expand their facilities and utilize idle plants, and it was not until this happened that a serious advancing trend was noticeable in commodity prices. Toward the end of the first half of 1916 our industries reached the limit of aggregate production, and after that the European demand for clothing, foodstuffs and war equipment rapidly increased prices so that at the end of the year levels were approximately sixteen per cent. above pre-war times. As conditions grew worse on the other side during 1917 prices advanced rapidly and at the close of the year were eighty per cent. above pre-war levels. From this there was a slight decline for a month or so, but it was followed by a further advancing movement which carried commodity prices to 106 per cent. above normal. The armistice brought still higher prices and it was the general opinion of economists that the return of soldiers and sailors would increase production and consequently reduce prices. This did not occur, however, and we did not reach the peak of the price advance until some months after the war had ceased. The peak of war-time prices was passed during the period when the United States was in its most extravagant mood, and according to Bradstreet's and other recognized publications, the post-war high peak of commodity prices went to 227, as compared with 106 for the war period.

A Small Industrial Project of Considerable Architectural Merit

ARCHITECTURAL distinction in a relatively small industrial project is unfortunately so infrequent as to become worthy of comment when such an operation is discovered. There are many large industrial plants scattered about the country which have become landmarks, noteworthy for architectural treatment which almost seems to remove them from the strictly utilitarian into the realm of the artistic. It is not often, however, that a factory owner, contemplating a small building in a more or less obscure location, has a sufficient aesthetic sensibility to desire and demand a building so designed as to portray his own regard for better things while at the same time elevating the tone of its environment.

John J. Burns, president of the National Marble & Slate Corporation, when this concern decided upon the construction of a modern marble and slate working plant, sought the advice of Hugh Tallant, a well-known architect, who designed a building of modest dimensions but which in architectural treatment will add greatly to the appearance of the neighborhood and materially increase the value of surrounding properties.

The new building for the National Marble & Slate Corporation will be located at 617 to 619 West Forty-eighth street on a plot 50x100 feet, leased from James T. Stanley for a term of twenty-one years, with renewal, and option to purchase. The building will be one story in height with ground dimensions of 50x80 feet. The front will be of face brick and the arched window and door openings will give the structure a decidedly Gothic appearance.

This factory will be the only one of its kind on the west side of Manhattan, and its location and equipment will make it especially adaptable for efficient and rapid service to architects and contractors. The plant will provide work for a force of about twenty skilled marble cutters and polishers.

Hugh Tallant, Architect
PROPOSED FACTORY BUILDING IN 48TH STREET

The equipment will be of the most modern type obtainable, and will consist of cutting, planing and polishing machines, crushers, etc., all electrically operated by direct connected motors. Dock and rail facilities are at hand to insure prompt service to out of town customers.

The National Marble & Slate Corporation will furnish and install fine interior marble, tile, slate, mosaic and terrazzo work in high class building projects and will also manufacture a high grade of cement tile in various colors and designs, for which there is a rapidly growing demand.

Construction of this plant will be started immediately, and it is anticipated will be ready for operation early in September.

Scope of the Lumber Industry

THE lumber and wood-working industries in the United States represent an investment of $12,000,000,000, and employ approximately 1,000,000 men; their annual railroad freight bill is approximately $170,000,000, paid for transporting 200,000,000 tons, which is more than 10 per cent. of the total tonnage of the American railroads, according to Charles Hill, general manager, Southern Pine Sales Corp. of New York, in an address delivered at the annual meeting of the Southern Pine Association held recently in New Orleans. Lumber ranks first among the nation's industries in the number of employees.

Local Building Showing Effect of Serious Brick Situation

Construction Statistics, Compiled by F. W. Dodge Company, Indicates Drop in Both Contemplated New Work and Contract Awards During Past Week

ALTHOUGH the weekly building figures for New York City show slight reductions as compared with previous weeks, a condition largely attributable to the scarcity of brick and the inadequate labor supplies, there is practically no change in the volume of activity throughout the New York territory as a whole. Figures tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company, covering newly contemplated construction and contracts awarded in New York State and New Jersey, north of Trenton, show that during the nineteenth week of this year 674 new building and engineering operations were reported in the early planning stages. This work will involve an outlay of approximately $21,800,700. During the same period the contracts awarded in this territory numbered 445 and represented a total expenditure of $16,448,300.

Reported activity in Greater New York during the week of May 5 to 12 inclusive involved 262 projects, for which plans are being prepared and which will call for a total outlay of $7,211,200. The contracts actually awarded in the city during the week numbered 112 and will amount to a total of $8,086,600.

The list of 262 building and engineering operations reported as being planned for locations in Greater New York was composed of the following groups: 40 business projects such as stores, offices, lofts, commercial garages, etc., $2,294,500; 5 educational buildings of various types, $295,000; 6 factory and industrial operations, $109,000; 2 public buildings, $120,000; 14 public works and public utilities, $589,000; 4 religious and memorial projects, $147,000; 185 residential operations such as apartments, flats and tenements and one and two-family dwellings, $3,374,000, and 6 social and recreational buildings, $282,500.

Among the 112 operations for which contracts were awarded during the nineteenth week of this year were 28 commercial projects of various types, $1,992,000; 3 educational buildings, $225,000; 2 hospitals and institutions, $410,000; 2 public works and public utilities, $485,600; 5 religious and memorial projects, $179,000; 67 residential operations, including multi-family dwellings and one and two-family houses, $3,449,000, and 5 social and recreational projects, $1,346,000.

This resolution expressed its appreciation for the wide vision of the Russell Sage Foundation Committee and its devotion to an ideal of organized city planning, and promised the moral support of the Architectural League and its members to the proposals for laying out a definite plan for the future growth of the Metropolitan area.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

SCARCITY of common brick has slowed down local construction to some extent, and during the past week the chief topic of conversation among builders and allied interests was the difficulty of securing materials and the bonus demands of certain classes of building trades labor. As far as the supply of common brick is concerned, however, both manufacturers and dealers are assuring the industry that with a little patience all of the requirements will be met. According to current reports the Hudson River common brick plants are now working at all possible speed and brick of this season's make will undoubtedly be on the market within the next two weeks, and possibly less.

Common Brick—Demand for this commodity is intense, and as fast as cargoes arrive they are being taken out of the market by dealers who are rushed with orders and without stocks to fill them. Quite a volume of brick arrived during the week, and the situation is easier than it was a week ago, but the crisis is not over yet, and there will be a shortage for a few weeks to come. The strike of the brickmakers in the Haverstraw yards has been settled and the workers returned to their jobs Wednesday morning. Manufacturers are doing their utmost to speed up production and they are working their machines to full capacity and running as many as they have men to operate. Within the next week or so new brick will likely begin to arrive and after that the producers promise a steady supply adequate to all demands. Common brick prices are exceedingly firm but no advance in the wholesale market has been reported during the week. The level is now $20 a thousand to dealers in cargo lots.

Summary—Transactions in the North River brick market for the week ending Thursday, May 18, 1922. Conditions of market: Demand heavy; prices very firm and unchanged. Quotations: Hudson Rivers, $20 a thousand to dealers in cargo lots alongside dock. Number of cargoes arrived, 41; sales, 41. Distribution: Manhattan, 16; the Bronx, 2; Brooklyn, 15; New Jersey points, 6; Astoria, 2.

Lumber—Market conditions have changed but slightly during the past week. The demand for lumber is keen and showing marked signs of increasing within the next few weeks. A large volume of new construction is being undertaken and reports from suburban sections indicate extensive activity along residential lines. Lumber prices are firm and likely to hold at their present levels for some time to come as the current orders are in excess of production and as a consequence the market is not overstocked in some items. Report comes from Washington that a comprehensive program of commercial and manufacturing simplification has been proposed by the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association to Secretary Hoover, and as a result he has called a conference of representatives of both the soft and hard wood lumber manufacturing associations, railways, building engineers, architects and the wood consuming industries and retailers of lumber, to meet in Washington during the week of May 22. The lumber industry proposed to effect a sweeping reorganization of its grades, dimensions and their simplification that would affect millions of makers, handlers and consumers of lumber. The most novel proposal is that of putting the industry as a whole behind the stated quality of the product of each of its members by branding grades on every piece of lumber sold.

Structural Steel—Structural steel bookings have dropped off to some extent during the past week or ten days, but there is a vast amount of new work in prospect and quite some tonnage is now being figured. The local shortage of common brick has slowed down construction somewhat, and as a result, contractors are going slowly about steel awards. Prices are exhibiting a marked upward tendency with mill quotations very firm and fabricators quoting from $67 to $75 per ton, erected.

Roofing and Building Papers—Reports from the outlying sections of New York City and from the suburban districts show a steady and consistent demand for these materials. The large program of residential building in the semi-rural sections is largely responsible for the activity of this market. Stocks are not heavy but seem sufficient for all demands and prices are very firm.

Cast Iron Pipe—Business in this line is extremely active, and as a result the Eastern plants are busy at nearly 100 per cent of capacity. Although municipal buying has dropped off to some extent during the past few weeks the demand from private sources is very heavy and from all accounts will continue throughout the next month or so. Considerable new municipal business is in sight, but the chances are that it will not be realized for bids for a month or so. Prices are very firm and rumors persist to the effect that quotations will be advanced at any time, but up to the present no official announcement of higher prices has been made. New York quotations are as follows: 6 in. and larger, $48.50 per net ton; 4 in. and 5 in., $53.80, and 3 in., $63.80, with Class A and gas pipe $4 extra per ton.

Window Glass—Increased interest is developing in this line and within the next few weeks it is likely that local demand will reach its season's height. Throughout the city there is a vast amount of apartment house construction now about ready for glass and other projects are coming along steadily which will maintain an active demand for some time to come. Stocks are plentiful and prices are very firm.

Nails—The market is spotty, and in some sections business is excellent, while in others interest is lagging to some extent. Stocks are adequate to meet all current demands and mill deliveries are satisfactory. Prices are variable to a degree and there is considerable difference in quotations according to locality. New York prices range upward from $3.35 base, per keg on wire nails, and from $3.90 base, per keg on cut nails.

Builders' Hardware—The recent heavy demand for hardware has depleted stocks to a considerable extent and manufacturers are being pushed to keep abreast of their orders from jobbers. The local building season is now at its height and the demand for all items of hardware is exceptionally keen. There are persistent rumors of higher prices in the near future, but as yet no changes have been announced by either manufacturers or dealers.

Linseed Oil—The local demand has improved greatly during the past week or so, and as a result jobbers are in a more optimistic frame of mind than they have been for many months past. Prices are very firm and slightly higher than they were owing to the advance announced by the crushers. Dealers are in anticipation of a steady increase in demand and as stocks are relatively light prices are expected to remain firm and may possibly advance.

Electrical Supplies—Wiring material sales continue to hold up well, and as a general thing both manufacturers and dealers are satisfied with the prevailing market conditions. Orders are increasing somewhat in both number and size.

EDITORIAL

Misrepresenting the Brick Situation

Architects, contractors and prospective builders who are capable of analyzing the current underlying conditions in the local building industry place little credence in the continued claims that construction is being impeded by a "famine" of common brick and by excessive costs for some of the basic materials. Reports gathered from authentic sources during the past week show only a negligible amount of active building being held up because of the so-called brick "famine," and the supply is daily improving.

Common brick of the current season's manufacture is now coming into this city and additional barges are being loaded with new brick as rapidly as it can be taken from the kilns with safety to handlers. Brick manufacturers assure the building public that within the next week at most the supply of this material will be adequate for all requirements and that construction can now proceed without fear of further hindrance because of a scarcity of brick.

It is unfortunate that the general public depends so much for its information as to local building conditions upon what appears in the daily newspapers. Recent press statements, tending to show that a large volume of construction is at a standstill because of a famine in brick, have been highly colored. The facts show no justification for the cry of a brick famine nor is there necessity for importing common brick from Europe, as suggested by Samuel Untermyer, in order to supply the local market and break the "grip" he asserts brick manufacturers and dealers have upon the building industry by limiting the supply and maintaining excessive prices.

Experienced builders place little faith in the ability of anyone to bring foreign brick into the New York market in successful competition with the American product. First, because the cost of transportation and handling, and the difficulties of distributing these cargoes will more than offset whatever base price advantage may be obtained, and secondly, because Counsel Untermyer has also apparently overlooked the fact that Europe may not have brick for sale in sufficient volume to become a factor in regulating the price for the domestic product. It is a matter of record that at present there are inquiries in the hands of Hudson River brick manufacturers for brick for export to Europe. There is little likelihood of getting brick from Europe while this commodity is badly needed abroad.

Another thing seemingly overlooked by Mr. Untermyer is the fact that European brick differs radically in dimensions from the commonly-used American product. These foreign brick cannot be used without redesigning buildings already planned or making important structural changes in building now under construction. This, while possible if there were a real emergency, would be extremely uneconomic because of the time and additional cost involved.

At a mass meeting held in the Hotel Pennsylvania recently Mr. Untermyer reiterated his charges of gross profiteering against the brick manufacturers and material dealers, and followed this with similar misleading statements in his memorial to Congress in reference to tariff revisions on building materials imported from foreign countries.

The axiom that "Truth is mighty and shall prevail" must be inoperative as far as the building material situation is concerned, for otherwise Counsel Untermyer hardly could have stated, as he did in both his report to the Legislature and in his memorial to Congress, that "there is an excess of fifty per cent. in the prices being exacted for building materials beyond what would yield a fair profit, and in some special branches of the business, as for instance, that of brick and sand, the excess is not less than one hundred per cent."

This statement probably was based upon the testimony of Marvyn Scudder, expert accountant for the Lockwood Committee in its investigation of the building material situation, which was given after an examination of the books of one of the leading brick manufacturers of the Hudson River district. This testimony was included in the recent report of the Lockwood Committee to the Legislature, but it was not qualified in any respect because of facts subsequently pointed out, nor did it show clearly just how these percentages were arrived at.

On May 28, 1921, THE RECORD AND GUIDE printed statements from Wright D. Goss, President of the Empire Brick & Supply Company, who was charged by Mr. Untermyer with being one of the most heartless of the "profiteering" brick manufacturers and dealers, in which the testimony of Scudder was shown to be grossly misleading, if not altogether untrue. In the same article were printed the true facts as to the profits obtained by brick makers, based upon the reports of expert accountants of the highest reputation, and upon which the Federal Income tax payments of this firm were made.

A study of these figures, printed about a year ago, will show that the Lockwood Committee report does not give to the public the true facts about the brick industry. Fortunately the major portion of the building industry is familiar with the truth of the situation and is only slightly concerned about the future supply of common brick and its price trend. These interests realize that with a little patience all of their requirements will be supplied. It is the prospective builders of homes and other buildings who seemingly are being misled as to actual facts because sensational reports of how the Lockwood Committee is working for the amelioration of the ills of the construction industry are regarded by busy editors of daily newspapers as more interesting reading than the actual facts.

"Our Country Finding Itself Again"

President Harding's announcement of the advent of the revival of business, made to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at its annual convention held last week at the National Capital, was the official utterance of a belief that has been gaining ground in commercial circles as the year progressed. That the President merely stated what business men generally had begun to recognize as the actual condition of trade did not detract from the importance of his summing up of the situation. Many sources of information unavailable to private citizens are open to President Harding and he is known to have been giving considerable of his time to the study of some of the problems confronting business at this very critical period. For this reason his conclusions, reflecting as they did the opinions of the majority of those at the convention, solidified the cheerful feeling that had prevailed and sent the three thousand members of the Chamber to their homes in all parts of the country, prepared for the vigorous prosecution of their various lines of business.

That commercial affairs are at last decisively if somewhat slowly on the upturn is evidenced in a number of ways by which the business world measures progress or retrogression. Steel manufacturing has reached seventy-five per cent of capacity, with prices rising. This output equals pre-war production taking into account the increased capacity of the mills. Copper mines are again being worked as the enormous stocks accumulated near the close of the war diminish rapidly because of the increased fabrication of articles of peace time use. The New York City Employment Bureau, the Y. M. C. A., the Salvation Army, the Knights of Columbus and the American Legion, as well as the United States Department of Labor and the State Labor Bureau, all of which organizations have been in close touch with the employment situation during the period of readjustment, agree that there has been a revival of industry which has cut unemployment in New York City from 500,000 in October last year to 200,000 at the present time. Construction work still reaches record figures although wages and material prices refuse to come down. There is great activity in New York City real estate, which indicates a return of money to the field which has long held first place with conservative investors.

The strike of coal miners, although menacing, has so far failed to disorganize industry. On the contrary the statistics of car loadings proves that general business is improving in spite of the strike. Loadings of freight of all descriptions for the week ending May 13 were heavier than for the previous week, and for the corresponding week last year, although coal loadings were less than one-half those of a year ago. General merchandising is therefore improving rapidly and this movement is likely to be accelerated by the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission for a ten per cent horizontal cut in freight rates.

These signs bear out the President's assertion that the country is on the threshold of a new era. "Undoubtedly," he adds, "There is more than a mere business revival in sight. Our country is finding itself again."

Again American pluck and energy, persistence and business aptitude, are overcoming what seemed to be insurmountable difficulties. It is inevitable that the enthusiasm evoked by President Harding's cheering pronouncement to the Chamber of Commerce will further stimulate business throughout the whole country.

Tenement House Commissioner Mann Sees End of Housing Shortage

IN a statement made last Wednesday before the New York Society of Architects, Frank Mann, Tenement House Commissioner, said the records of his department showed that at least 50,000 apartments in multi-family buildings are now under construction in Greater New York and that plans for an equal number in addition, already have been filed with his department, the majority of which are likely to be started within the next month or so. This will provide in the neighborhood of 100,000 new living units in this city in apartment houses, and does not take into consideration the large number of accommodations provided in the one and two-family dwellings already erected or under construction.

Figures tabulated by the Tenement House Department show that the work actually under way on April 10 will cost approximately $129,000,000, and will provide a total of nearly 115,000 rooms in multi-family dwellings of various types. The following table shows how the current apartment house construction, under way on April 10, is distributed by boroughs:

	Manhattan	The Bronx	Brooklyn	Queens	Richmond	New York City
Tenements	108	340	545	346	1	1,350
Rooms	20,195	49,955	28,688	15,391	225	114,454
Estimated cost	$33,318,000	$52,363,500	$31,307,000	$11,874,000	$450,000	$129,312,500

Commissioner Mann stated in connection with the apartment house construction movement that in his opinion there is little need for further worry about a housing shortage. The construction now under way, plus that already completed under the Tax Exemption Ordinance, is sufficient, he declared, to provide for the population of this city and leave a surplus.

Board of Estimate Considers Cost of Northern Boulevard

THE Borough Planning Committee of the Queensboro Chamber of Commerce, of which Alrick H. Man is Chairman, recommended at a public hearing before the Board of Estimate last Friday that 50 per cent. of the cost of widening Northern Boulevard (Broadway) from Cemetery Lane, Flushing, to the Nassau County line, be made a city-wide charge, while 20 per cent. should be assessed upon the Borough of Queens and 30 per cent. upon the local area benefitted, instead of 30 per cent. upon the city as a whole, 30 per cent. upon the Borough of Queens and 40 per cent. upon the local area, as has been recommended by the Chief Engineer.

The report of the Borough Planning Committee to the Board of Directors of the Queensboro Chamber of Commerce states:

"Your committee has had under consideration the proposed widening of Broadway, Flushing, otherwise called Northern Boulevard, from Cemetery Lane to the Nassau County line. This street constitutes the main east and west thoroughfare of northern Long Island, and is extensively used by residents of the Borough of Manhattan and outlying points to reach the north shore of Long Island beyond the city limits.

"Only a trifling portion of the present traffic through the street originates in the Borough of Queens, and a very much less percentage is tributary to the abutting property. The abutting Property owners do not favor the widening of the street, claiming that the traffic is detrimental to their comfort and enjoyment and to the value of their property, and that the widening of the street will increase the hardships which result from dust and noise which extends far into the night.

"In the case of the widening of Merrick Road, it was agreed by the city that 30 per cent. was a fair proportion to be borne by the local area of assessment. Your committee is of the opinion

"As to the balance of the cost, it does not seem logical that any large fraction of it should be placed upon the Borough of Queens, inasmuch as no property in the Borough of Queens, except the portion which is directly tributary to the avenue, is benefitted any more than other property throughout the city. Our recommendation is that 20 per cent. of the total be borne by the Borough of Queens, and the balance, 50 per cent., by the city at large."

REAL ESTATE SECTION

Remarkable "Comeback" of Values in Old Retail District

Rentals in Section from Fourteenth to Twenty-Third Streets and Sixth Avenue
Now on Basis Prevailing Before Department Stores Moved Northward

THE return of trade strength to the mercantile centers of Fourteenth Street, Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue between those points is one of the significant phases of the real estate market of this era. Twenty-third Street has not experienced as full a restoration as have the other two centers mentioned, but it is coming along even though more slowly. Rentals in Fourteenth Street and in Sixth Avenue are about the same as they were a decade or more ago, when numbers of the large retail stores moved a mile northward. It has been a gradual ascent from the marked decline in values that then commenced. The fact that it has been gradual has made the return sounder and surer.

The real estate decline in those neighborhoods was caused purely by the sudden removal of large establishments and the leaving of millions of square feet of vacant business space behind them. The circumstance created consternation among investors. To have various large department store buildings abandoned and stand empty for a considerable period was bound to have a depressing effect on adjacent holdings through the lack of shopping traffic which the old conditions created. On Sixth Avenue especially the large vacant buildings were sub-divided into loft and manufacturing spaces. Several of these would have continued as department stores if it had not been for the panic of 1907. Some of them were under one ownership, although they bore separate firm names. These were all closed permanently. The panic accentuated the trade movement that had begun shortly before.

Following was the long period of readjustment of neighborhood mercantile conditions, when the new purposes for which these buildings would be used was being determined. Caution, foresight and exceptional judgment were required to pull these large properties through along the right lines. It has been done and it proves the inherent value of real property on any prominent thoroughfare of this city. It is another powerful demonstration that New York real estate, properly manipulated and managed, is never down and out.

Except for the fact that owners of the fee to certain large department-store building sites in this region demanded unwarranted rental increases on renewals of leaseholds there might not have been the pronounced northward movement from that section in the first place. It was a section of the city situated along the lines of least traffic resistance. The Sixth Avenue elevated railroad has stations and always had them at Fourteenth Street and at Twenty-third Street. The route tapped and still taps the entire territory north of Twenty-third Street, Staten Island to the South, Brooklyn by bridge connections and the five suburban counties of New Jersey and the country beyond by connecting with the North River ferries downtown and the Twenty-third Street ferry. The West Side contributed much business, too.

Since the era of change transpired in the region new traffic conditions have strengthened it. The Hudson River tubes run under Sixth Avenue, with stations at Fourteenth and at Twenty-third Streets, the Broadway subway has stations at the same thoroughfares, and the nearly-completed Fourteenth-Street-Greenpoint route of the subway will pour traffic into the section. The Fourteenth-Street line of surface cars tie the Eastern District of Brooklyn to it by way of the Williamsburg Bridge. The original subway route also has a station at Fourth Avenue and Fourteenth Street and within easy reach of the old shopping center. From the standpoint of accessibility the retail exodus from its old surroundings is declared by some shrewd real estate operators to have been a decided mistake.

The large retail stores that have remained downtown are doing a bigger business than in the past. Hearn & Son have never regretted remaining in Fourteenth Street. John Wanamaker, whose establishment is even farther south, is satisfied with the progress he is making at the old stand established by A. T. Stewart more than fifty years ago. John Daniell & Sons still hold forth strongly in their original quarters nearby. New retail firms have come into Fourteenth Street and into Sixth Avenue. Browning, King & Co. are busy at their old stand on Cooper Square.

There is another consideration. The large establishments which went northward to Thirty-fourth Street and beyond abandoned the existing buildings only to establish a much greater overhead charge elsewhere. They have no better nor more complete rapid transit facilities in their new locations than now obtained in the old ones. They did not have them at the time. Since they departed the Pennsylvania Station has been built and joined to the Seventh-Avenue Subway and the latter joins the station at Fourteenth Street by one express run of less than three minutes. A few minutes' run on a local to Twenty-third Street brings that street within easy reach. The large retail stores are less concentrated than they were in the past. There is more walking between stores for shoppers.

Since the era when most of the large stores were in the part of the city mentioned there been an increase of eighty per cent. in the residential population south of Twenty-third Street on the West Side. The Seventh Avenue subway route has caused a rehabilitation of Greenwich Village and the region just to the north of it. There is more of a trend to apartment houses in that direction and many old dwellings whose future was uncertain have been remodeled for occupancy. The old Chelsea section is in stronger favor than it has been for a generation or more. The recent leasing of the old Hotel Chelsea, on West Twenty-third Street for more than sixty years, is a salient example. The site of the old Morton House, at Broadway and Fourteenth Street, is being improved with a building much larger than the old one and it will command rentals far stronger. The building on West Twenty-third Street that housed the Eden Musee became the site of a building more modern and more useful. Various Sixth-Avenue corners and inside parcels between Fourteenth and Twenty-third Streets have been bought by tenants because they are deemed invaluable for their business purposes and they desire to be sure of permanency of possession. The area adjacent to lower Fifth Avenue and Washington Square still holds strong for residential purposes, while not far away is a larger business population than in past years. All contribute to shopping strength.

Discussing the subject, Robert E. Simon, prominent real estate operator, investor and observer of real estate conditions, said:

"The movement of large retail business interests from Fourteenth Street, Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue between those streets is what caused the transformation of the Herald Square-Grand Central neighborhood, the greatest square mile of shopping center in the world. Of course, the city will grow further north in a business way. It will be a general commercial

To Build Post Office Annex Over Pennsylvania Tracks

Five Bids for Building and Lease to Government at Total Cost of About Twenty Million Dollars Being Examined for Award

BIDS for the new post office annex building to be constructed over the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad, west of the General Post Office Building are now in the hands of Postmaster General Hubert Work for consideration. Five bids were submitted for the building which will have a total floor area of 818,966 square feet. While the basis on which the bids were made is a provision for a lease to the Government for a term of twenty years there is included in the bids an option which allows the Government to purchase the building within three, five, ten, fifteen or twenty years and a further provision for a renewal of the lease for ten years. The bids follow:

Jacob Kulp & Co., $19,245,695 for the twenty years, or an average of $1.175 per square foot per annum; South Bay Realty Corporation, $20,500,000 for the twenty year period, or $1.25 per square foot; Parcel Post Building Company, $20,883,633, or $1.27 per square foot; Pennsylvania Postal Building Corporation, $24,900,000, or an average of $1.52 per square foot, and the American Postal Building Corporation, $22,000,000 for the twenty year period, or an average of $1.34 per square foot.

On the basis of the bids submitted to the Postmaster General, the annual charge by the various bidders for the proposed post office building would be as follows:

Jacob Kulp & Co., $962,284.75; South Bay Realty Corporation, $1,025,000; Parcel Post Building Corporation, $1,044,181.65; Pennsylvania Postal Building Corporation, $1,245,000; American Postal Building Corporation, $1,100,000.

John H. Edwards, Solicitor of the Post Office Department, is making the examination of the bids and the award is expected to be made soon. The building will be erected under authority of an Act of Congress passed in April, 1920.

In addition to the facilities afforded by the annex to the main post office provided for in these plans, the movement to exchange the old post office site for other property in the downtown district is making headway. City officials are known to favor the removal of the old building south of City Hall Park and it is understood they will offer the Government a portion of the new Court House site upon which to erect buildings for Federal offices now scattered throughout a number of buildings in the lower section of the city. This is the proposition which was tentatively under discussion during the administration of Postmaster General Hays, who had several conferences in this city with those interested in the removal of the old building deemed an eyesore as well as unsanitary and inadequate. In these conferences representatives of Comptroller Craig, in whose hands the matter was left by the city administration, gave assurances that the city was willing to make the exchange. Now the news comes from Washington that President Harding has appointed Secretary Mellon, Attorney General Daugherty, and Postmaster General Work as members of a commission which will have authority to exchange the land known as the old post office site below City Hall for other land to be deeded by the City of New York for post office purposes in the downtown district.

growth rather than a growth of department store zones. It is to be remembered that Manhattan has lost population to Brooklyn within recent years, and Queens is growing apace, as is Long Island fifty miles beyond the East River. Its shopping population is pretty well distributed at Pennsylvania Station and at Herald Square. It radiates southward as much as northward. The large stores that remained downtown not only do business with this element of New York's floating population, but they do business as well with the population in all the other regions within and without the city that dealt with them in years back.

"The average person will shop in the old center regularly as well as in the new one as long as he or she has the easy transit facilities to get there. Time was when the average Brooklynite shopped in Brooklyn. Nowadays the situation is different, on account of easy transit runs between that borough and Manhattan. Brooklyn shoppers are a large factor in stores here. With the Fourteenth-Street subway route in operation they will be a still bigger factor in the Fourteenth-Street and Sixth-Avenue zone.

"The trade factor that caused the business invasion of Fifth Avenue and its environs north of Forty-second Street was the specialty shops. They are even now multiplying in that region. Madison Avenue has become a mixture of specialty shops and modern office buildings. I am convinced it would be a great mistake for department stores to go north of Forty-second Street. Certain lines of retail trade seem destined to go further north, for instance jewelry, lingerie, linens, millinery, dressmakers and allied specialty lines.

"All structural development of recent years indicates a greater centralization of large retail trade south of Forty-second Street. Retail dry-goods stores and high-class specialty shops do not mix any better than oil and water. We must protect a district for these specialty shops if New York is to maintain her position as a world shopping and style center. The region lies between two great railroad terminals which drop their traffic there. And as so many large stores are established there it is logical that they will remain there. The old shopping centers of Fourteenth and Twenty-third Streets are on the line of travel from downtown and Brooklyn. They stand a better chance for big retail business than does the area from Forty-second to Fifty-ninth Streets. Of course, the traffic of Queensboro Bridge must be taken into consideration. There is heavy vehicular traffic over it.

"Macy's and Altman's stores might never have left the old Sixth-Avenue neighborhood if the question of much higher rentals on leaseholds had not presented themselves. This is proven by the fact that both of these large firms had built modern and large annexes to their buildings before the old leaseholds expired and one of them had also built a large palatial stable adjacent for its delivery wagons and horses. Surely they would not have done it if they had contemplated removal so soon after. It all demonstrates how individual differences sometimes change the trend of things. Macy's, McCreery's and Altman's all left buildings that were right at elevated railroad stations which led everywhere in order to go to new locations remote from such traffic distributors. The growth of the city helped them in the new locations.

"Subway routes now are no nearer to Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street than they are to Fifth Avenue and Fourteenth Street and the same avenue and Twenty-third Street. In spite of the fact that Fourteenth Street has been bothered by subway construction it has not been weakened as a trade thoroughfare as much as Forty-second Street was when a subway was built under it. The old merchants who held their nerve and remained in the old Fourteenth-Street and Sixth-avenue district are doing as big business as close to busy traffic routes as the ones that moved away, and they are doing it with less overhead in the form of property investment and lower carrying charges on their properties and they have not suffered the great loss caused by abandoning valuable properties.

"The contrast is interesting and strong at this time, when recrudescence is taking place in the old district, and in the light of the fact that the movement from it to Thirty-fourth Street and to Herald Square and further north was caused by seemingly outrageous rental values and the idea that trade centers must move periodically."

Work Started On New Mercantile Building in Terminal Zone

Cross & Cross, Architects, Design Structure to Cost $1,800,000 As Showrooms and Executive Offices for Millinery and Dress Goods Firms

WORK on the foundations is in progress for a large fireproof mercantile building which will occupy the block front in the south side of Forty-seventh street, between Madison and Vanderbilt avenues. This structure, which will be twelve and one-half stories in height, will be something in the nature of a departure for this neighborhood as it will provide office and showroom space for concerns in the wholesale millinery and dress goods lines, whereas the district is largely given over to high class retail shops.

The building is being erected for investment by Webb & Knapp, owners, on property leased from the N. Y. State Realty & Terminal Co., through Wm. A. White & Co., brokers, for a term of twenty-one years and two renewals. The aggregate net rental for this property is said to exceed $10,000,000.

Cross & Cross, 681 Fifth avenue, are the architects for this operation and the work is progressing under a general contract awarded to the Todd, Robertson & Todd Engineering Corporation, Inc., 101 Park avenue. The cost of construction is estimated by the architects to be approximately $1,800,000.

This project occupies a plot with dimensions of 215.5 by 100.5 feet and the structure will have a base area of approximately 21,666 square feet. According to the present schedule the building will be completed and ready for occupancy early in February, 1923.

Several long term leases have already been negotiated for office and showroom space in this new building. Aitken, Son & Co., now located at 417 Fifth avenue; Gage Brothers & Co., now at the corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, and Judkins & McCormack Company have signed leases. These firms are among the largest concerns dealing in millinery and dress goods in the United States. They have contracted for seven floors in this building through Wm. A. White & Sons, and Webb & Knapp, and two floors have been leased to the Bigelow-Hartford Carpet Company, with factories at Thompsonville, Conn., through Harris, Vought & Co., and Herbert McLean Purdy, brokers. All of these firms have made leases for twenty year terms dating from the time the structure is completed.

This building will be for executive offices and showrooms exclusively and manufacturing will not be permitted. The determination to construct a building of this character in this particular neighborhood was the outcome of the realization that the location offers the closest contact with the large department stores, exclusive retail shops, hotels, clubs and transit facilities of New York City.

NEW MERCANTILE BUILDING IN EAST FORTY-SEVENTH STREET

The movement of these wholesale millinery and dress goods concerns from the recently established center of these trades and their relocation in an entirely new neighborhood will be watched with interest not only by other firms in these and kindred lines but also by real estate interests who are always on the lookout for new trends of development.

Mortgages Aggregate $1,154,976,168 on New York Homes and Farms

HOMES and farms privately owned in New York State two years ago aggregated in value $2,646,156,868, according to figures of the 1920 Federal Census. Farms partly owned and partly rented, or homes and farms leased to tenants are not included in this tabulation, which has for one of its purposes the determination of the mortgage obligation of the home and farm owners. The debt on these properties represented by mortgages amounted to $1,154,976,168 when the census was taken, which means that the mortgage indebtedness amounted to 43.6 per cent of the value of the properties taken as a whole.

The census also discloses the fact that the number of homes other than farms in the State was 2,240,931. Of these homes 597,753, or 26.7 per cent, were owned by the occupants, and of these tenant-owned homes, 329,438 were mortgaged, which represents 55.1 per cent of the whole number.

President Harding Declares Business Revival Is Here

Makes Encouraging Statement to Chamber of Commerce of United States at Which Secretaries Hughes and Hoover Also Speak Hopefully

Washington, May 22.

EUROPEAN Conditions and Their Effect on American Business" and "The Merchant Marine" were the two principal topics for discussion during the tenth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States held here last week. Nearly three thousand of the nation's chief business men were in attendance. The most effective utterance of the two score speakers at the various meetings held by the members was that of President Harding when he declared that business was reviving but that no business permanently could succeed if it was not conducted honestly. It was the President's reassuring statement about commercial and financial conditions throughout the country that sent the delegates to the convention home filled with new enthusiasm and courage. The President referred to the situation in Russia in the prelude of his speech, and expressed a hope that conditions in that unfortunate country might be restored to a healthful state. "But," he said, "this will never be brought about until the existing system is abolished. Russia can never be restored until the communistic idea has been put aside and the rewards for righteous human activity are restored to the citizenship of that land."

President Harding called attention to the idea that the practicability of the doctrine of "less government in business and more business in government" depended upon the character of American commercial life.

"If the commerce of America," he added, "were always conscientious there never would be a single excuse for Government in American business." He declared it hopeless ever to return to the old order of American industry and exchanges in trade.

Taking up the question of foreign trade the President said:

"I believe it is possible to trade with the world without any destruction of American productivity. I wish for such an arrangement. Let us sell things that Americans can produce advantageously to those who cannot produce them. Let us buy the things that they have to sell to us and which we cannot produce. Out of such exchanges comes righteous relationship and balance of trade and the continued forward movement of the great human procession."

President Harding expressed the opinion that had this country a merchant fleet in proportion to its commercial importance there would have been no World War. No nation, he said, ever maintained dominance of trade unless it also was a carrier of trade.

"It is perfectly needless," he said, "to tell a body of business men and women that no thoughtful producer turns to his competitor for his deliveries."

The President's reference to conditions today follows:

"And I beg to remind you that the great World War, like every other war which preceded it, but more notably the great World War, because of its incalculable immensity, has left a state in human affairs quite different from any that ever preceded it. The war would have been a complete waste, it would have been an utter sacrifice of every effort, if we did not find the great human procession on a little higher plane than that which it followed before. An American commerce must keep that in mind. There will never be a time when you can go back completely to the old order of American industries and exchanges in trade.

"I say this because at the very moment we are on the threshold of a new era. Undoubtedly there is more than a business revival in sight. Our country is finding itself again. We are fundamentally right, and we do not intend ever to be discouraged for a long time.

"Business is reviving and we are soon to resume our onward way, and I admonish you of the larger responsibility to keep in mind the new state of human affairs and the awakened aspirations of men.

"I do not think that any business can permanently succeed that is not honest. And I do not think that any enterprise ought to succeed that is not honorable. And if you will combine honesty and honor, that enterprise which makes such a slogan will stand unchallenged before the world.

Secretary of State Hughes was another speaker who referred to the impossibility of transacting business with a nation which places itself outside the pale of international intercourse by setting up a policy of confiscation. In his address Secretary Hughes said:—

"Intercourse, from the standpoint of business, consists in the making of contracts and the acquisition of property rights. Nations may adopt what policies they please for the future conduct of their local affairs, and if these policies are not enlightened the result will inevitably be that production will languish and trade will shrivel up, and they will look in vain for security and confidence; still they will be within their rights in determining their future policy in local matters.

"International relations proceed upon the postulate of international morality, and the most important principle to be maintained at this time with respect to international relations is that no State is entitled to a place within the family of nations if it destroys the foundation of honorable intercourse by resort to confiscation and repudiation, and fails to maintain an adequate system of Government through which valid rights and valid engagements are recognized and enforced.

"This is in the obvious interest of business, and this is merely a way of saying that this course is vital to the prosperity of all peoples, for the activities of business are those of production, and exchange upon which the welfare of peoples inevitably depend. If profits are anticipated through a departure from this clear path of honorable dealing they will be found to be illusory."

Secretary of Commerce Hoover emphasized the point that since the signing of the armistice America had extended governmental and private loans to Europe aggregating $4,000,000,000, in addition to $1,000,000,000 donated in charity. This, he declared, was his answer to the criticism that Europe had been left by the United States to shift for itself.

Mr. Hoover characterized the possibility of the United States extending further governmental loans as "the most unlikely event on the economic earth." Further assistance, he said, must come from private enterprise, and to gain this aid, Europe must first establish the soundness of her institutions.

Business men and economists the world over, he declared, had long reached agreement on the steps necessary to advance Europe to the degree of stability which this country enjoys. They follow:—

"First—Such political relations between the States in Europe themselves as will produce an atmosphere of peace and destroy the atmosphere of war.

"Second—The reduction of armament, not only to lessen the Government expenditure, but to give confidence of peace.

"Third—The intergovernmental debts, including German reparations, to be fixed upon such a definite basis of payment of interest and principal as will create reasonable confidence that payments will be met.

"Fourth—The balancing of budgets more through the reduction of expenditure than the increase in taxation, and a cessation of the consequent inflation in currency and short-time bills.

"Fifth—The ultimate establishment of the gold standard with the assistance of either credits or gold loans, and where necessary, the acceptances of diminished gold content in many old units of currency.

Resolutions were adopted favoring representation on the Reparations Commission and International Court of Justice; calling for the speedy disposal of war claims; expressing gratification at the enactment of a National Budget Law; reaffirming confidence in the Federal Reserve system and protesting against any changes in it except those which will add to it further usefulness and strength; advocating an adequate privately owned and operated merchant marine and the codification of bills of lading; stating that the Interstate Commerce act should not be amended until the law has been tested by experience under normal conditions; deprecating any tendency to reduce the army and navy below the strength required for national safety; endorsing the achievements of the State Department; thanking the Department of Commerce for collecting and distributing information about foreign and domestic commerce; protesting against the exemption of governments from claims for damages to private property by government owned vessels; seeking additional inquiry into measures for flood control; a reduction in passport and visé fees.

The election of the following officers was announced: President, Julius H. Barnes, Duluth, Minn.; vice-president for the Eastern States, A. C. Bedford, New York; for the Northern States, Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago; for the Southern States, Harry A. Black, of Galveston, Texas; for the Western States, Thomas B. Stearns, of Denver. Honorary vice-presidents; William Butterworth, of Moline, Ill.; L. S. Gillette, of Minneapolis; Charles Nagel, of St. Louis, and A. B. Farquhar of York, Pa.

Review of Real Estate Market for the Current Week

Dealing in Large Apartment Houses and Sites for Them Together with General Buying by Tenants Were the Prime Features

THIS was a week of heavy and varied trading in real property. With the first summer month imminent there is no cessation of business as is usual at this time of the year. Throughout the city there is keen investment interest in real estate as well as activity by operators. The investment tone is demonstrated by the large number of tenants who are buying both business and residential parcels. Probably no week in the year has shown more of this class of buyers. The circumstance is a tonic for the market generally.

Outstanding features of the dealing were the sales of two large elevator apartment houses, each on a West End Avenue corner and each transaction amounting to close to $1,000,000. Numerous elevator apartment houses in the upper West side and in Harlem were sold that varied in price from $500,000 to $650,000 each. A large vacant plot at the south corner of Fifth Avenue and 96th Street changed hands for improvement with a fine apartment house, while a smaller plot farther north in the avenue was bought for a similar purpose. It would seem that the limiting of the height of apartment houses on this thoroughfare has not discouraged that class of building there. Numerous fine dwellings in choice residential streets close to Fifth Avenue changed hands.

Accompanying the sale of numerous fine apartment houses was the sale in the upper Madison Avenue, Lexington Avenue and Park Avenue neighborhoods of good sized plots for improvement with large elevator apartment houses and apartment hotels. It is a significant sign of the times. One site of distinctiveness for the purpose is on the upper West side, overlooking the north end of Manhattan Park, in which is situated the Museum of Natural History. Some less impressive locations for apartment houses in the upper West side were also bought.

Two sales that attracted wide notice were that of the 6-story business building at 605 Fifth Avenue to the Phipps' estate and that of a business building on West 125th Street by the estate of J. M. Horton, the latter property being acquired by the tenant. Two business buildings on Madison Avenue so changed ownership. There was great diversity of dealing in tenement house properties. On the important thoroughfares of the East side many merchant tenants bought the buildings their stores are in and the speculative element figured in these avenues as well. Washington Heights and the Bronx contributed many apartment house transactions. A warehouse in South Street was bought. The lower West side also did well. Corners were sold in Sixth, Eighth and Ninth Avenues, two of the transactions being in the Pennsylvania zone. There was strong investment interest shown in Greenwich Village, where many old parcels were bought by large business interests for the purpose of reimprovement. There was, too, some dealing in single parcels in the business streets close to Fifth Avenue and north of 34th Street.

Leasing of large business spaces was emphasized by the leasing of two floors, on the plans, in the Pershing Square building and the leasing of a Madison Avenue corner by the Gerrys. Forty-one per cent. of the space in the Pershing Square building is taken before it is built, which shows the steady concentration of large interests near the Grand Central Terminal.

Two Prominent Firms Merge

Albert B. Ashforth, Inc., of 12 East 44th st, and Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., & Co., Inc., of 41 Union sq, have associated their businesses, to become effective June 1 next. The Ashforth firm, which is composed of Albert B. Ashforth and George D. Arthur, was founded in 1896 by Albert B. Ashforth under the firm name of Ashforth & Duryea. In 1901 Mr. Duryea resigned and Mr. Ashforth conducted the firm until 1903, when Mr. Arthur was taken into partnership. The Tyng firm, which is composed of Stephen H. Tyng and H. Oakley Hall, was founded in 1888 by Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., under his own name. Mr. Tyng continued alone until 1898, when he formed a partnership with Mr. Hall, who had established himself as a broker in 1897 after resigning the presidency of a wholesale mercantile company.

Mr. Tyng and Mr. Hall become vice-presidents of the Ashforth concern and Mr. Ashforth and Mr. Arthur vice-presidents of the Tyng organization. They will continue to maintain all of their offices as in the past.

This combination brings together two of the best known real estate firms in New York City. Both Mr. Tyng and Mr. Ashforth are ex-presidents of the Real Estate Board of New York. They have been large factors in the development of the Union sq, Fourth av, 34th st, 42d st and Upper Fifth av movements and today control and manage a large number of the valuable properties which they planned, constructed and marketed in those sections.

The Ashforth concern maintains a downtown office in the Bankers Trust Company Building, 14 Wall st.

An Interesting Deal

Charles F. Noyes Co. leased back for W. R. Grace & Co. to S. Oppenheimer & Co., for a term of years from May 1, 1923, 96-100 Pearl st, three 5-sty buildings, about 60x75, and occupied by the leasing company since 1879. This is property owned by Julius Oppenheimer and adjoining the W. R. Grace & Co. building, but about a year ago it was acquired by W. R. Grace & Co. through the Charles F. Noyes Co. in connection with 88-94 Pearl st and 54-6 Water st, all of which property can be "recaptured" from the present tenants at future dates if and when required by W. R. Grace & Co. for improvement purposes. The firm of S. Oppenheimer & Co. was established in 1863 and is one of the few companies that, while it has operated as many as 12 buildings at one time in various parts of the United States and Europe, has never had even a trivial fire.

MORTGAGE LOANS

The trustees of the North River Savings Bank have made loans on various properties aggregating $1,120,500 in sums ranging from $8,000 to $360,000. The latter loan was on 308 West 86th st. Additional to the financing of real property the bank has arranged recently other loans totaling more than $370,000 for closing in the near future.

Loans on bond and mortgage amounting to nearly $7,500,000 were authorized by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. May 17. Of these nearly $2,000,000 were housing loans, about $1,250,000 were farm loans, and more than $4,000,000 were on business buildings. The housing loans covered 47 dwellings and 21 apartment houses, to accommodate altogether 623 families. These were widely scattered, some being in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee with a considerable number of dwellings in Chicago and its suburbs and other cities in Illinois and Indiana. The loans on business buildings were 10 in number in New York city and cities in Virginia, South Carolina, Washington, D. C., and a few in western states. One of the loans was on the new Broad Street Hospital in Manhattan. One of the largest loans was on an apartment house in Manhattan and several were in Queens and Brooklyn. The farm loans were scattered throughout the west and south, the principal ones being in Iowa, Missouri, Georgia, Tennessee, Kansas and Alabama.

Lawrence, Blake & Jewell have placed for C. F. Sheehan a first mortgage of $16,000 and a second mortgage of $4,000 on 323 West 34th st, a 4-sty dwelling; for M. Schonbrun $12,000 at 6 per cent on 25 Coenties slip, a 4-sty business building, and for L. E. Peck $25,000 at 6 per cent on 32 West 76th st, a 4-sty apartment house.

The Shamokin Realty Corporation obtained from the New York Savings Bank a building loan of $440,000 for the 15-sty apartment house at the northeast corner of Seventh av and 57th st, now nearing completion. The property has other liens amounting to $400,000. It measures 100.10 x 104.2.

Brooks & Momand placed a first mortgage loan of $115,000 on the new 5-sty apartment house at the northeast corner of Bedford av and Lenox rd, Brooklyn; also a first mortgage loan of $73,000 on 315 to 319 West 24th st, Manhattan, a 6-sty flat; $26,000 on 178 Orchard st and $22,000 for Gertrude Malnek on 112 East 88th st.

A loan of $650,000 has been obtained by the Hotel Hamilton Corporation from the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank on its property, 133.6x 102.2, at 141 to 153 West 73d st.

Edwards, Dowdney & Richart placed for the J. G. L. Building Co. a mortgage loan of $50,000 on the premises at the southwest corner of Longwood av and Southern boulevard, covering a plot 35x110.

Brooks & Momand placed a first mortgage of $150,000 on 135 to 139 West 26th st, a 12-sty loft building, 50x28.9.

William Henry Barnum & Co. head a syndicate with Tucker, Anthony & Co. and Otis & Co., which is taking an issue of $2,750,000 of first mortgage bonds on the Grand Central Palace and the adjoining Park av leasehold. The bonds will bear interest at 7 per cent, and provide for a sinking fund to retire the bonds in 20 years.

Out of the proceeds of the loan a new 20-sty office building will be constructed on the Park av plot, which will afford additional security to the bonds, as the present net income from the Grand Central Palace alone is said to be more than sufficient to pay interest and sinking fund requirements on the entire bond issue.

S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a first mortgage serial bond issue of $2,300,000 on the St. Gerard Apartment Hotel, southeast corner of Broadway and 71st st, construction work on which began this week on the site of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament. The new hotel will be 18 stories high with setbacks and will contain approximately 600 guest rooms in suites of one and two rooms with bath. The ground floor will be devoted to stores, lobby, lounge rooms, restaurants and kitchens. The land fronts 113 feet on Broadway and 173 feet on 71st st. Hudson River Brick Manufacturers Speeding Production

Current Season's Output Now Arriving and Supplies to Meet All Requirements Assured Without Relying on Imports from Europe

BUILDERS in the Metropolitan district were greatly relieved this week upon receiving the news that common brick of this season's manufacture is now arriving at the wholesalers' docks and that the initial cargoes will be followed by others as soon as the newly-burned brick is sufficiently cool to handle and load. Although there is a continued scarcity of this product the situation is infinitely improved and the outlook is for a steady gain in the volume of brick available for construction throughout this territory.

Brick manufacturers are exerting their greatest efforts to speed up production. They are, however, confronted with serious manufacturing problems which at present are preventing a capacity output and which are likely to curtail manufacturing operations to some extent for the next few weeks.

The shortage of brick which has been experienced during the past few weeks was brought about by conditions over which the producers had absolutely no control. The open winter was responsible for a steady consumption of brick in the New York territory which called for the reserve stocks local dealers usually had on hand for early spring deliveries. Then also the Hudson river was closed to navigation for some weeks and brick left in the up-river yards could not be transported by barge but had to be shipped by rail in smaller lots at greatly increased cost to the manufacturer. The keen demand during the winter months practically cleaned out the stocks of the manufacturers and when the building boom started early this spring there was practically no reserve supply for the emergency.

Since earliest spring the manufacturers have been confronted with conditions which prevented them from getting their plants in operation at a rate which would adequately supply the steadily increasing demand for common brick. The shortage of fuel has been one of the most important of these but other factors, notably labor troubles in various plants, along with flooded yards which prevented the manufacture of new brick or the loading of reserve held over from last year were also outstanding conditions combining to create the so-called famine of the past few weeks.

At the present time the manufacturing situation is greatly improved. Production is progressing at the maximum as permitted by the available supply of fuel and labor and producers are confident that the next few weeks will witness a marked change for the better. None of the leading manufacturers are expressing any doubt as to the ability of their industry to supply brick to meet all demands this season but they do feel that builders should be more considerate and less impatient. The brick industry had no previous knowledge of the rate of demand for the current season other than the general trade impression that construction activity was due for a tremendous increase. They could not foresee or provide against the fuel shortage nor settle strikes before they occurred, neither could they regulate the spring floods which inundated many of the plants on the Hudson River and delayed manufacturing operations for a few weeks.

In discussing the brick manufacturing situation recently one of the prominent Hudson River producers stated that the present shortage of brick is about the first time in local building history that construction has been curtailed or even delayed because this commodity was lacking but many times within the past ten years or so various production problems have been responsible for delays due to lack of face brick, terra cotta or structural steel, the latter oftentimes not available from two to five months after orders were placed and yet the industry kept moving and no great outcry was heard because of the situation.

Recently there has been considerable comment about the advancing trend of common brick prices. Manufacturers, however, point out specific reasons for the higher levels prevailing today and state that they do not see how prices are to be lowered to any extent even after the supply returns to normal. Brickyard labor is today uncertain and unsatisfactory. There are not enough men to operate the Hudson River plants at capacity production and there is considerable unrest about wages. At Kingston several strikes were started and settled upon the employers agreement to pay higher wages and a similar strike about a week ago, only more extensive in its scope, was only settled when the owners of the plants agreed to an increase of $1 per day. There is every likelihood that brickyard labor all along the river will demand and receive higher wages than those in effect during the 1921 season and herein lies one of the most potent reasons why new brick will not be greatly lowered in price.

Another very important factor affecting production costs is that of fuel. At present manufacturers are burning what they have had in reserve and are hoping for a settlement of the coal strike which will make this commodity available. Coal is required for producing steam to operate machinery, for burning the brick after it is made and pulverized coal is mixed with the clay before it is moulded. It is a prime essential in brick production and in order to keep the plants in operation manufacturers are now being forced to buy in large and small lots, whenever it is available, and pay almost any price demanded. At present there is practically no coal available under $12 per ton and when it is considered that a ton of fuel is required to burn about five thousand common bricks, the influence of high fuel prices on brick production costs can readily be realized.

Although brick producers are confident they will be able to supply the demand for the remainder of this season, they are quite certain in their own minds that there will not be any great surplus. During the past few years the common brick output has been below normal. Estimating the output of the Hudson River yards in their best year at a total production of about 1,200,000,000, the maximum which can be turned out this year, with active yards fully manned and machines working at full capacity, will be considerably less than 1,000,000,000 brick. Last season the total output for the Hudson Valley was estimated to be between 400,000,000 and 500,000,000 brick.

The prime reason for the drop in total production as noted during the past few years has been the ruinously low prices brick brought in this city. Manufacturers were unable to operate their yards at a reasonable profit and as a result many of the plants which formerly made brick for this market are now idle, with machinery and equipment partially dismantled and their buildings falling in decay.

Whether or not it will pay to reopen these yards still remains as a doubt in the minds of brick makers. There is no definite knowledge as to the continued duration of the brick demand. But a slump in demand for common brick may come before the end of the year, due to the cessation of apartment house construction.

Little Hope for Building Trade Wage Agreement This Year

Employers and Union Officials Deadlocked on Two Important Points But Various Trades Continuing Negotiations with Workers

A PART from the agreement entered into between the employers and the building laborers in which the present scale of $7 per day will be continued for the remainder of the year, as will other terms and privileges now in force, no definite progress has been made toward settling the differences between building trade employers and the trade unions affiliated with the industry.

Following a recent conference with Patrick Crowley, president of the Building Trades' Council, C. G. Norman, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Building Trades Employers' Association, stated that he expected no agreement would be made during the balance of this year. The negotiations have become deadlocked on two points. The employers refuse to make a collective agreement with the Building Trades' Council as representative of all of the unions in the building industry, and also refuse to sign a new wage agreement for 1923. The employers are willing to enter into a new wage agreement for the remainder of the current year, but the unions now insist upon an agreement for 1923 or an agreement from May 1, 1923, to May 1, 1924, based upon the cost of living at the present time.

Meanwhile the various trades are continuing their negotiations with their respective unions, but as yet little has been accomplished of a definite nature. Many conferences have been held but the unions are standing out for a collective agreement made by the Council and the Employers' Association. This plan the latter organization will not consider.

At the present time there is relatively little unemployment in the building trades and a grave scarcity prevails in some trades. Bricklayers, carpenters and plasterers are very difficult to obtain and hold on the jobs, and there is a growing scarcity in other lines, notably the inside finishing trades. Bonus wages are being paid in the majority of these trades and the excess runs as high as fifty per cent. above the recognized union scale in some instances. Builders feel there is little hope for relief from these conditions until the rush of construction is stopped and the demand for mechanics is not so keen as it is at the present time. The Public Group Committee is still organized and doing what it can to assist the industry, but the outlook for an early settlement in labor affairs is not of the best.

After the meeting at which the wage agreement for building laborers was made G. B. Dioguardi, General President of the Independent Bricklayers' Helpers and Building Laborers' Union of America, issued a statement in which he said that his union would proceed immediately with a vigorous campaign to enforce the union wage scale on all building jobs in this city.

Modern Apartments, to Rent for $10 Per Room, Started in Brooklyn

THOSE landlords who have been receiving extortionate rents for several years are discovering throughout the Metropolitan District a decided softening of rental values in multi-family buildings. Former high rents are not coming down as the result of a surplus of new apartments, but rather because homeseekers have found it impossible to pay the rentals demanded. Frequently owners of buildings, erected under the high costs of the past few years, have found it advisable to reduce rental schedules rather than permit their buildings to remain unoccupied for an indefinite period.

Builders are recognizing the trend of the times. They are planning their future operations along more economic lines and making a determined effort to produce modern apartments, equipped with all the desired conveniences, but which will rent at prices reasonably within the means of those they wish to attract as tenants.

Experienced builders say it is not impossible to construct modern multi-family dwellings today that will rent for ten dollars per room per month. Buildings with fair-sized rooms, ample closets, with steam heat, hot water and electric lights can be erected in good residential neighborhoods and can be rented at this figure, and possibly less, and still show a reasonable margin of profit. The high rentals of the past years were artificially stimulated by the scarcity of buildings and not wholly due to abnormal construction costs. A certain class of profiteering landlords were the most important factor in increasing rentals in the majority of instances from the pre-war level of $8 to $10 per room per month to the prevailing high level of $24 to $35 per room for the same apartments.

Walter Kraslow, who has been constructing high-class residential buildings in various sections of Brooklyn for the past twenty years, plans the immediate start of a multi-family dwelling project in which three and four-room suites will be rented at $30 to $40 per month. These buildings will be erected on high-priced land, in a neighborhood where vacant property is selling from $3,000 to $3,500 per lot.

This project will occupy the corner of Eighth and Prospect Avenues, Brooklyn, and the first unit started will consist of a four-story apartment, on the corner, and five three-story buildings adjoining on Eighth Avenue. These apartments, which were planned by Maxwell A. Cantor, an architect of wide experience in work of this character, will be modern in every respect and will contain all of the comforts and conveniences ordinarily found only in apartments renting at a much higher figure.

The corner building will have ground dimensions of 31x88 feet and will contain four apartments on each floor. Two of the suites on the first floor will contain three rooms and two will have four rooms, all with baths. The upper floors will be divided into four-room units.

The adjoining houses, which will be three stories in height, will have ground dimensions of 20x82 feet and will accommodate six families, in four-room units, each with bath. In all of these suites the rooms are of good size and proportions. The living rooms contain from 150 to 168 feet and the dining rooms have an area of about 150 square feet. The kitchens are about 9x13 feet and the bed rooms average 10x12.6 feet. Between the three story houses there will be double interior courts measuring 31.8x22 feet, which assures the maximum of natural light and ventilation to the rooms which face upon them.

The fronts will be of face brick and artificial stone, designed in good style but without costly ornamentation. Construction throughout will be of high standard, but the costly fixtures and finishes which form the basis of the high rentals usually demanded, are being eliminated, and less elaborate but equally satisfactory devices installed.

"Economic planning and the elimination of those items which add to the cost of the building and yet do not increase the comfort of the tenants makes it possible to construct these apartments and rent them at $10 per room per month," said Mr. Kraslow in discussing this operation. "There will be practically no waste space in these buildings; every available inch has been utilized to the best advantage. The rooms are large and the apartments will contain many conveniences found only in buildings where the rents are much higher. By cutting out unnecessary ornamentation, and by close supervision of costs, these buildings will be constructed at a figure permitting reasonably low rentals and still allow a fair margin of profit. I hope to continue building operations along this line, in the same neighborhood, because I feel that by so doing I will help many families to get back to a basis of correct economic living who for the past few years have either been crowded in small, unsanitary homes, or who have been forced to pay extortionate rents and were consequently unable to afford other comforts to which their incomes should entitle them."

Local Construction At Season's Height of Intensity

Serious Common Brick Situation Not Retarding Progress on New Plans Nor Preventing Award of Contracts According to Weekly Figures

CONSTRUCTION activity in New York State and New Jersey, north of Trenton, has now practically approached its maximum intensity for the season. For the next two months there is likely to be little change in the situation unless caused by strikes or serious material shortages which would naturally curtail progress in this line. Reports from every section of the territory indicate the building trades as being confronted with more work than can possibly be accomplished before the winter sets in and there is still more being planned which is scheduled for a start this year.

According to figures tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company plans were announced during the twentieth week of this year for 697 new building and engineering operations scheduled for locations in this territory. This work will involve a total outlay of $24,151,100. During the same week 491 contracts were awarded which will require an expenditure of approximately $28,757,900.

Figures showing the new work in the five boroughs of New York City also indicate extreme activity in building circles but the local operations are slowed down to some extent because of the serious common brick situation, which while better than it was one week ago still acts as the outstanding deterrent to major production.

Reports for local building operations show that during the week of May 13 to 19 inclusive 239 new construction projects were reported as being planned at an estimated cost of $14,521,500. The contracts awarded during the week numbered 123 and represented a total valuation of $18,847,100.

The list of 239 projects for which plans were reported in New York City during the twentieth week of this year was composed of the following groups: 37 business buildings such as stores, offices, lofts, commercial garages, etc., $1,040,500; 12 educational operations, $1,992,900; 4 factory buildings, $170,000; 1 military structure, $175,000; 2 public buildings, $10,500; 9 public works and public utilities, $1,454,100; 3 religious and memorial projects, $61,000; 169 residential operations including apartments, flats and tenements and one- and two-family dwellings, $9,572,500 and 2 social and recreational projects, $45,000.

Among the operations for which contracts were awarded during the week of May 13 to 19 inclusive were 22 commercial projects of various types, $4,487,000; 2 educational buildings, $31,400; 2 hospitals and institutions, $1,010,000; 3 factory and industrial projects, $238,200; 1 public building, $75,000; 3 public works and public utilities, $1,394,000; 5 religious and memorial structures, $133,000; 83 residential operations including multi-family structures and one- and two-family dwellings, $6,458,500 and 2 social and recreational buildings, $5,020,000.

Straus Loan for New Apartment Hotel

S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a first mortgage serial bond issue of $2,300,000 on the St. Gerard Apartment Hotel on the southeast corner of Broadway and Seventy-first street, construction work on which began yesterday (Tuesday). The bond issue is a closed first mortgage on both the land and building. The new structure is being erected on the site of the church of the Blessed Sacrament.

The new apartment hotel will be eighteen stories high, with setbacks, in accordance with the Zoning Law, and will contain approximately 600 guest rooms in suites of one and two rooms with bath, but the suites will be so arranged that they can be thrown into larger units at the discretion of the tenant. The ground floor will be devoted to stores, and ample space has been provided for lobby, lounge rooms, restaurants and kitchens.

The land fronts 113 feet on Broadway and 173 feet on Seventy-first street. In the immediate vicinity of the new hotel are the hotels Ansonia, St. Andrew, Hamilton and Robert Fulton. The owner is the George Dosé Engineering Co., Inc., and the architects are Maynicke & Franke. Hughes and Hammond were the brokers.

A. I. A. Convention in Chicago

The American Institute of Architects will hold its fifty-fifth convention in Chicago, Ill., June 7-9, at the Chicago Beach Hotel.

Instead of having special papers prepared featuring certain phases of the problems of architecture a new order of business has been laid down. The first session will be called to order promptly at 10 a. m. At noon a ready to serve luncheon will be held and will be given over to five-minute speeches concerning architectural subjects.

In the afternoon convention business will be taken up, and a trip has been planned to the Chicago University grounds after adjournment. This trip will be for the purpose of studying architectural effects and varieties of construction.

At the evening session the subjects of industrial relations, organization of the building industry and registration of architects will be discussed. After adjournment there will be dancing at the hotel.

This tentative first day procedure is typical of what has been planned for the entire convention. This program, it is believed, will best serve the interests and wishes of the profession as represented by the delegates.

The five-minute discussions at the luncheons, and the trips through various sections of the city will be held solely for the sake of architecture, and not institute business. It is thought by having such an elastic program that the convention will do justice to the administrative business of the institute and at the same time develop a spirit of fellowship and advance the delegates in some of those things that have to do with architecture.

Registration of convention delegates is arranged for Tuesday evening, June 6, and can be completed early on Wednesday morning at the auditorium of the Chicago Beach Hotel.

A pre-convention conference to be held in the hotel June 5-6 will develop ideas relating to better advertising methods for architects and the co-ordination of the building industry. All delegates are invited to attend this conference and a full report of its findings will be presented to the convention.

TRADE AND TECHNICAL SOCIETY EVENTS.

American Society for Testing Materials will hold its twenty-fifth annual meeting at the Chalfonte-Haddon Hall Hotel, Atlantic City, June 26 to July 1, inclusive.

National Association of Heating and Piping Contractors will hold its annual convention at the Hotel Statler, Buffalo, N. Y., May 31 to June 3, inclusive.

New York Building Superintendents' Association will hold its annual picnic and field day at Karatsonyi's, Glenwood Landing, L. I., Thursday, June 29. A large boat has been chartered for the transportation of members, their families and their guests to the park. An excellent dinner will be served, after which there will be a baseball game and an interesting program of field sports. Further details of the program will be announced later.

National Association of Building Owners and Managers will hold its fifteenth annual convention at Bedford Springs, Pa., June 19 to 24, inclusive. A large delegation from the New York Association is preparing to attend this meeting.

Illuminating Engineering Society will hold its annual convention in Boston, September 25 to 28 inclusive. This will be the sixteenth annual gathering of the society, and the convention arrangements are in the hands of a committee of which C. L. Edgar, president of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, is chairman; H. F. Wallace, vice-chairman, and J. Daniels, secretary.

American Institute of Architects will hold its fifty-fifth annual convention in Chicago, June 7 to 9 inclusive, at the Chicago Beach Hotel. Details of the program will be announced later.

New York Building Congress will hold the second of its series of luncheon meetings at the Hotel Pennsylvania, Tuesday, June 6 at 12:45 p. m. sharp. Louis A. Wilson, director of Vocational and Extension Education of the New York State Department of Education, will deliver an address on "Apprenticeship in the Building Trades." Members of the Congress are expected to be present and are cordially invited to bring guests who will be interested in this subject and the Congress movement.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

A CONSIDERABLE improvement in the common brick situation has relieved the tension of the industry to a great extent, and as there is every indication that this commodity will not continue to be a retarding factor for a much longer period contractors are more optimistic than they were only a week or so ago. As a matter of fact, the shortage of brick was not responsible for the stoppage of work on active projects, but some operations for which plans were fully matured were prevented from starting because no brick was available. Manufacturers assure the industry, however, that new brick is now coming into this market and more is being loaded for early shipment and this will naturally relieve the situation of one of its most serious aspects.

During the past week or so there has been a decided falling off in residential construction in this territory. A large number of speculative builders have decided costs are altogether too high to take a chance, particularly as rental values seem to be softening and as a result fewer apartment house plans are being filed, and architects who specialize in this work are not nearly as busy as they were a month or two ago. This will relieve both the a decided improvement in the outlook for a decided improvement in the outlook for commercial and industrial building activity.

Common Brick.—Although the demand for common brick is still exceedingly active and buyers are immediately taking up all brick as it arrives, the situation is much easier than it was and it is generally thought that the crisis of the famine is past. During the past week manufacturers report the shipment of new brick of this season's make, and barges are being loaded at the plants with brick still hot from the kilns. Practically all active jobs in this city are being supplied without lengthy delays and each day the supply grows better. Prices are very firm at $20 a thousand and there is no indication of a drop from this level for some time. Lower prices later in the season will depend largely upon coal prices, labor and other manufacturing costs.

Summary.—Transactions in the North River brick market for the week ending Thursday, May 25, 1922. Condition of market: Demand very active; prices firm and unchanged. Quotations: Hudson Rivers, $20 a thousand to dealers in cargo lots along-side dock. Number of cargoes arrived, 33; sales, 33. Distribution: Manhattan, 6; Bronx, 2; Brooklyn, 16; New Jersey points, 4; Astoria 2; Flushing, 1; Yonkers, 2.

Lumber.—This commodity is moving actively in both wholesale and retail markets and dealers anticipate a continued strong demand for the next two months or so at least. While building is the greatest source of demand there is a marked improvement in the buying of manufacturing consumers and as a rule the tone of the market is optimistic. Local yards are carrying fair stocks and at present deliveries are reasonably prompt. The consumption, however, is somewhat in excess of production and there is some likelihood of slight shortages in the more popular lines if the prevailing demand continues or grows in intensity. As a result of the market situation prices are very firm and there is a tendency toward higher values.

Structural Steel.—Bookings of fabricated material for new construction projects in this territory have been fairly heavy during the past week and the steel industry is looking forward to a steady improvement in the amount of business released. There are numerous large operations in prospect, many of which will be sent out for estimates within the next week or so. The shortage of brick is said to be holding back considerable new building for which plans are finished. According to the Iron Trade Review buying in the Metropolitan district so far this year aggregates 160,000 tons, or about 50,000 tons above normal as based upon figures for the past ten years. Practically all Eastern fabricators are already booked for more than fifty per cent. of their yearly output with deliveries on sizable tonnages running about three months. Prices on shapes are fairly steady and quotations on fabricated material, erected in commercial structures range from $67 to $75 per ton.

Reinforcing Bars—Better demand has characterized this market during the week or so due to the improved outlook for industrial construction and the award of a number of school projects. Considerable new work is being planned and the prospects are growing better all the time. Prices are firm and without material change.

Cast Iron Pipe—Eastern producers generally report excellent current business and bright prospects for the remainder of the season. Demand is very active and although municipal business is lighter than anticipated private buyers are making relatively heavy commitments. The majority of the pipe plants are operating from eighty to one hundred per cent of capacity and foundries are booked ahead for several months. The increased business of the past month or so has slowed down deliveries somewhat. Prices are unchanged but likely to advance without notice. New York quotations are $48.80 per net ton on 6 in. and larger; $53.80 on 4 in. and 5 in., and $63.80 for 3 in., with Class A and gas pipe $4 extra per ton.

Roofing and Building Papers—The situation is unchanged. Demand is keen and prices steady. Jobbers' stocks are adequate for all current demands and shipments out of stock are prompt. The suburban building program is largely responsible for the excellent business being enjoyed in this line.

Builders' Hardware—Business in this line is excellent and both manufacturers and dealers anticipate a continuation of active demand while the present building boom lasts. Jobbers are experiencing some difficulty in keeping their stocks in order and recently have made heavy commitments against a possible increase in prices. There are strong presentiments that hardware prices are due for a sharp advance but nothing definite in this regard has been announced as yet.

Window Glass—Demand is very keen and jobbers all are looking for a steady increase as the summer approaches. Local stocks are said to be sufficient for all business in sight and prices are extremely firm.

Nails—The nail market has not changed to any great extent during the past week. Buying is spotty, with reports of excellent demand from some districts and very light orders from others. The buying is localized largely and is in a measure a reflection of the amount of active construction in any given section. Prices continue to vary according to rate of demand, but New York quotations are based upon the following schedule: $3.35 base, per keg for wire nails, and $3.90 base, per keg, for cut nails.

Linseed Oil—There has been a very decided improvement in the tone of this market during the last week or so and although buying is not heavy the situation is far more active than it was. The majority of the recent business has been in relatively small lot orders and carload lot buying is still negligible. Local stocks are light but crushers are in good position to supply on short notice.

Edison Service at 24-34 University Place

The private plant in the manufacturing buildings at 24-34 University Place has been closed down and Edison Service substituted

After an investigation made by our engineers, the owners, the Sailors Snug Harbor, decided that they could materially reduce the operating expenses of the building by using Edison Service. The change involves the electrification of five elevators and several pumps used for house water and for operating the Sprinkler System, as well as the lighting of the building

Our engineers are At Your Service. You may call upon them to study your plant and make recommendations without placing yourself under any obligation

Quick Legal Decisions

Sometimes the examination of a title for a loan develops trouble in the title, and unless such trouble is disposed of quickly long delay occurs.

Very often these troubles are only imaginary, resulting from lack of real knowledge of real estate law.

Our Board of Counsel meets every Thursday and the troublesome questions of title are settled before they close their session for the day.

The man who arranges to borrow money from this Company may feel that our decision on any legal questions will be prompt and as free from technicalities as the intricacies of real estate law will allow.

Legislature Fooled About Housing "Crisis"

In its report to the Legislature last March the Lockwood Committee asserted that New York City was still victim of a housing crisis, short of accommodations for at least 80,000 families. This claim was advanced as justification for the extension of the Emergency Rent Laws and the Lockwood Committee itself. The demands of the committee were granted by the Legislature in the face of several authentic reports which showed that the housing shortage was being grossly exaggerated by the Lockwood Committee and its Chief Counsel.

Facts presented to the Legislature at the time showed housing conditions greatly improved and likely to be completely corrected by the construction work then in progress. These facts had been gathered through exhaustive surveys of the local situation, which showed a real revival of building. This revival, if not interfered with, would, it was pointed out, adequately supply the city's housing requirements, excepting in the matter of low-priced living quarters.

The Real Estate Board of New York stood firm in maintaining that the housing crisis had already passed and that the remaining local shortage would be eliminated by the residential construction then under way, or in prospect for an early start. The position of the Real Estate Board was based upon an investigation made by the Building Trades Employers' Association, in which it was shown that in New York City building was in progress to the full capacity of the industry to supply labor and materials and that the major portion of the active construction was residential in character. This, it was felt, could in the near future be depended upon to supply the demands of home-seekers. This survey, completed last December, showed that the supply of one and two-family dwellings had then reached the saturation point.

More recently Tenement House Commissioner Mann, in addressing the New York Society of Architects, expressed the opinion that the housing situation was rapidly becoming normal and that within the next few months there would be sufficient accommodations for all desiring them, and, indeed, a likelihood of a surplus. He said that apartment houses, erected since the passage of the Tax Exemption ordinance, have provided for at least 50,000 families, and that the multi-family buildings now actually under construction or planned for an immediate start will provide for a similar number. According to figures tabulated by the Tenement House Department, 29,952 additional families can be accommodated in the apartment houses which were actually being erected in New York City on April 10. These families will occupy about 115,000 rooms in 1,350 buildings which are being constructed at a total estimated cost of $129,312,500. They do not, however, include those structures which were started under the provisions of the Tax Exemption ordinance and completed before these figures were tabulated.

This report of the Tenement House Department shows 108 tenement houses being erected in Manhattan; 340 in the Bronx, 545 in Brooklyn and 346 in Queens. The Manhattan multi-family buildings will supply homes for 4,976 families, while those in the Bronx will house 14,066; in Brooklyn, 7,895, and in Queens, 2,960. This is exclusive of living quarters being provided in the one and two-family dwellings which are now being erected in great numbers in Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx, and which do not come under the jurisdiction of the Tenement House Department.

These statistics, confirming as they do the statements made at the time the surveys of the Real Estate Board and the Building Trades Employers' Association were given to the Legislature, furnish conclusive evidence that the housing crisis has passed and that the alarms sounded by the Lockwood Committee at the last session of the Legislature were baseless. With the elimination of the shortage clearly evident, the Legislature at the very outset of its next session should repeal the drastic Emergency Rent Laws which are so damaging to real estate values in Greater New York.

Labor May Pay Dearly for Present Policy

Certainly if labor leaders in the metropolis were farsighted, if they were to apply logic to the situation and abandon the grasping policy which they continue to urge upon their followers, they would regard as of the highest value the recent comments of Mr. Clarence H. Kelsey, President of the Title Guaranty and Trust Company, on building conditions now prevailing in New York City. Mr. Kelsey declares there is general alarm on the part of lenders and cautious builders, too, on the construction situation as related to apartment houses. Mr. Kelsey speaks as an expert, his are the words of a recognized authority, and what he says confirms most impressively the review of the mortgage money situation given in THE RECORD AND GUIDE on May 13, when this publication reported that the excessive demands of labor were convincing the lending institutions that a new policy must be adopted in order to check unhealthy developments.

Commenting on the building activity which followed the passage of the Tax Exemption Law, President Kelsey observes that "there was plenty of money to lend, there was a good demand for the space, and there were sufficient materials and labor in sight to start the movement," but, as he adds significantly, "the pace was too rapid." Materials went up in price, due to the increased demand, while labor, after maintaining war-peak wages right along, "found that by keeping down the supply of mechanics it could exact more even than the high union wage scale." Then resulted the enticing of labor from one job to another by the offer of bonuses, a shortage in materials developed, and now, as Mr. Kelsey points out, building costs are considerably higher than they were six months ago.

Further analyzing the situation as matters stand today, Mr. Kelsey says:

"Buildings are making very slow progress because of the dearth of labor, are running up in cost beyond the expectations of the builders because of the conditions stated, and it is beginning to be a question whether the builders in a great many cases will be able to complete the buildings and whether their resources will hold out to pay the heavier carrying charges because of the delay and the heavier costs both of material and labor.

"This is not the worst of the situation. It is a question whether the builders who are able to finish can get the rents which they expected, or the prices which they expected if they wish to sell their properties. In the estimation of a great many, the home construction movement in Greater New York is overdone already—certainly for the higher priced accommodations.

"It is because the lending institutions see these conditions affecting the building market that they are declining to finance any new construction and are advising builders not to begin anything new. It is not too late to prevent anything in the way of a slump by exercising firmness and self-control in the present situation and refusing new loans. If labor would come to its senses and try to earn its wages no matter what they are; in other words, would sell production at an honest cost instead of time with very poor results, there might be some chance for a much cheaper type of house for those who must have a low rent—$6 or $8 per room.

"If other construction could cease so that materials might come down to something like a fair figure and labor could be in such supply that it was eager to sell its services instead of entirely indifferent about it, there would be room for a moderate amount of activity in the cheaper style of house. At present nothing is being done for the occupancy of such houses, and the supply of the other kind is approaching a decided surplus."

President Kelsey's statements, like those of other leaders of the lending institutions, emphasizes the responsibility of labor in the present situation. It must be borne in mind that labor constitutes about 85 per cent. of the cost of building, and this fact explains why there can be no appreciable reduction in building costs until wages come down to a fairer basis. And the reason why labor leaders would urge a lower scale if they were far-sighted is equally patent; because if they longer delay in taking such action there will be a cessation of building after present projects are finished and labor then will have no work and consequently no wages.

Operation Involving Many Properties Aggregates Over Four Million Dollars

CHARLES F. NOYES Company last week closed a series of transactions involving approximately $4,250,000 and affecting fifteen properties including the Mercantile Building, at 23rd Street and Fourth Avenue; the big Partola Building on Sixth Avenue, 20th to 21st Streets; a Fifth Avenue mansion; and twelve other properties located in Manhattan, Bronx and Queens. It is the most spectacular deal in many ways that has been closed for a long time. As a consequence the U. S. Realty & Improvement Company liquidates two large units. This many-sided transaction involves the purchase by William F. Kenny of the 11-story Mercantile Building, covering a plot of 18,500 sq. ft., including 44-60 East 23rd Street, 304-8 Fourth Avenue and 45 East 22nd Street. This building, valued at Two Million Dollars, has six elevators and automatic sprinklers and is one of the finest investment properties in the mercantile district. It carries a rent-roll of $240,000 per annum and has a frontage of 175 feet on 23rd Street, 83 feet on Fourth Avenue and 25 feet on 22nd Street.

In the same deal a client of Beardsley, Hemmens & Taylor, attorneys, becomes the owner of the former Adams-O'Neil property occupying the entire block front on the westerly side of Sixth Avenue from 20th to 21st Street, a property costing the sellers over $2,300,000 and leased three years ago to the Partola Manufacturing Company. Mr. Partola when he obtained the lease spent about $250,000 on improvements, renamed the building after his company, Partola Building, and subleased the premises for about $250,000 per annum. This huge building covers 36,000 sq. ft. of ground; contains 9 elevators has automatic sprinklers and found a quick rental market when put in proper condition. It is leased to the Partola Manufacturing Company on a net rental basis, with an income of $100,000 per annum net during the last fifteen years.

The United States Realty & Improvement Company by the exchange acquired a Fifth Avenue corner in the Eighties, the exact identity of which is not announced. The United States Realty Company also acquired valuable improved and unimproved properties in New York City, Brooklyn and Jamaica, including six lots on Southern Boulevard between 147th and 149th Streets; six lots on Timpson Place between 144th and 147th Streets; five and a half lots at Castle Hill and Railroad Avenue two lots at the corner of Gleason and Leland Avenue; two lots on the south side of 149th Street near Timpson Place; two lots on 91st Street, Brooklyn, between Third and Fourth Avenues; two lots on 90th Street; two lots on 93rd Street; two lots on 94th Street, all in the same general vicinity; twelve lots on Tenth Avenue and 48th Street, Brooklyn, and, a large plot at Jamaica. The United States Realty Company also acquired the beautiful residence of sixteen rooms and four baths, with garage and other buildings at 94th Street and Shore Road, Brooklyn, with a frontage of 120 feet on Shore Road, 218 feet on 94th Street and a 200-foot frontage on 93rd Street. This residence, the first home of William F. Kenny, was recently altered and renovated.

The deal is of particular interest because it shows that the large investors are taking choice Manhattan properties for income purposes. The properties acquired by Mr. Kenny will be held for investment and the properties taken by the United States Realty & Improvement Company will be offered for resale. Clarke G. Dailey was one of the advisers of the United States Realty & Improvement Company in connection with the transaction. Babbage & Sande's were the attorneys for the United States Realty, and R. G. Redlefsen, of Beardsley, Hemmens & Taylor, represented Mr. Kenny's interests. Negotiations are pending through the Noyes Company for the resale of the properties taken by the United States Realty & Improvement Company. The "Mercantile Building" at 23rd Street and Fourth Avenue, has been placed in the hands of the Charles F. Noyes Company for management, by Mr. Kenny.

New York Building Congress Will Hold Luncheon Next Tuesday

THE Committee on Surveys of the New York Building Congress has planned to hold the second of its series of members' luncheons at the Pennsylvania Hotel, Tuesday, June 6, at 12:45 p. m. sharp. Several weeks ago the first of the series was held at the Engineers' Club and the attendance was so large and those present evidenced such interest in the efforts of this organization that the committee in charge decided to hold subsequent luncheons at a place where an unlimited number could be accommodated and permit members to invite as many guests as they desired.

The principal speaker at the luncheon next Tuesday will be Louis A. Wilson, Director of Vocational and Extension Education of the New York State Department of Education. He will deliver an informal address on the subject of "Apprenticeship in the Building Industry." Mr. Wilson, in addition to being a most interesting speaker who is thoroughly acquainted with his subject, has been most helpful to the Congress Committee on Apprenticeship, in its efforts to plan and foster apprentice schools for the New York building industry.

Burt L. Fenner, chairman of the Committee on Apprenticeship of the New York Building Congress, will introduce Mr. Wilson and give a brief outline of the work already accomplished by his committee.

The committee arranging these luncheons assure the members that all who come will be accommodated and urge as large an attendance as possible as the messages of both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Fenner will be of the utmost importance not only to Congress members but to everyone in the industry.

Planning Station for Commuters on Old Car Barn Site

Rapid Transit Commission Tentatively Considers Building at 4th Avenue and 33rd Street to Relieve Grand Central and Pennsylvania Terminals

COMMUTERS from Westchester, Long Island and New Jersey are becoming more numerous as the overcrowded conditions in New York City force people into the surrounding suburbs for homes where they may get more light and air, and have more room than they can obtain for the same money in the apartment houses of the city. In fact, the terminal facilities at all the big railroads are severely taxed at morning and evening rush hours for just the same reasons that result in the jams on the subways. There have been no considerable additions to these terminals since the Pennsylvania and Grand Central Terminal Stations were built. The population of the city and its suburbs has in the meantime increased more than the builders of these huge passenger stations anticipated, while the attractions which New York always offers to visitors from the Central and Far West and the South have been enhanced to a degree which has resulted in a large increase in the throngs of Westerners and Southerners coming here for pleasure and for business.

Since the Pennsylvania station was built the waiting room and other arrangements for the accommodation of the Long Island suburban traffic have been enlarged several times by taking over space allotted to other departments of the business. A number of additional facilities for the local traffic have also been installed in Grand Central Station since the new structure was originally thrown open to the public. Space formerly used by newstands is now occupied by booths for ticket sellers. These changes are indicative of the situation at the two largest stations, and also at the Lackawanna Station at Hoboken, and the Jersey terminals of the Erie, the Jersey Central and West Shore Railroads, where no improvements have been made for many years.

The overcrowding of these terminals by both through and local traffic has led to the discussion of the question of how to obtain relief for all classes of passengers without incurring the huge expense of the building of more structures like the Grand Central and Pennsylvania stations, which are more ornamental from an architectural standpoint than is necessary in the handling of short haul business. Separating the suburban from the through traffic has been suggested as the most feasible of several plans receiving attention of the Rapid Transit Commission and the railroad officials. One of the proposals which has met with considerable support is that a suburban station for handling the Westchester and Long Island commuting business be constructed on the old car barn site bounded by Fourth and Lexington avenues between 32d and 33d streets. This proposition became public at a meeting of the Transit Commission last week, at which Chairman McAneny admitted that members had been in informal consultation with the Westchester Transit Commission and its engineers upon the plan, which would revolutionize suburban terminal facilities here.

"Traffic at Grand Central Terminal and the Pennsylvania station already has reached such proportions as to approach unpleasant congestion," Mr. McAneny said. "This congestion is certain to increase with future growth of the city. The situation is bound, in time, to force the establishment of a separate terminal for this suburban traffic, and it is highly probable that a subway to care for the Westchester traffic will be found necessary.

"Five main line surface routes, spread out fanlike from the city over Westchester, now pour thousands into the city daily. Such a subway would have to run through the heart of the city, because already this suburban traffic is becoming hard to handle on the city's transit facilities."

Under the plan the Thirty-third street station would become a distribution point of prime importance. Mr. McAneny suggested that steps be taken to obtain some sort of hold on the site so it could not be used for anything else until the proposed plan can be worked out and adopted or rejected for some other solution of the problem. He would not say whether or not officials of the steam roads concerned had been consulted.

"As yet the whole thing is sketchy," he said, "but I think it can do no harm to say that Commissioner Harkness, Daniel L. Turner, the commission's consulting engineer, and myself have had some informal discussion, at their request, with the members and engineers of the Westchester commission."

What makes this particular location especially desirable for such a station is that the site which is owned by the New York Railways Company, can be connected with the tracks at Grand Central Terminal along the right of way on Fourth avenue, owned by the railroad company. Connections with the Long Island tube of the Pennsylvania Railroad also can easily be effected so that traffic from the Island could be diverted to the new station. If the project should prove practical upon further consideration of the legal and engineering questions involved the commission will probably set dates for public hearings to give opportunity for suggestions and criticism of the plan.

That the commission had been considering such a project came out during the course of a hearing before the commission of an appeal by the Thirty-third Street Board of Trade that the Thirty-third street station of the East Side subway be made an express stop.

Another factor in the working out of the plan is what connection would have to be made with the proposed underground loop connecting the various subways at 33d and 42d streets, Fourth avenue and Broadway.

Some opposition to the proposal has already been voiced by the Forty-second Street Property Owners and Merchants' Association, which fears that if suburban traffic is diverted from Grand Central Terminal to Thirty-third street values of property in the Terminal Zone will be injured and business in Forty-second street stores materially cut into.

Another step taken to provide the city with adequate connections with its suburbs was made last Wednesday when ground was broken in Jersey City for the vehicular tunnel. This action was taken notwithstanding the opposition of Mayor Frank Hague and the New Jersey Tunnel Commissioners to work being started until several streets should be taken over for approaches to the tunnel at a cost of $500,000. The New York Commissioners refused to sanction the expenditure of this money at the present time. Officials from headquarters in Manhattan went to New Jersey and began the digging on the site selected for the mouths of the tunnels on property acquired from the Erie Railroad. The engineers who took part in the ceremony were Clifford M. Holland, M. H. Freeman and M. I. Killmer. Work has already been started on the New York side so that the vehicular tunnel is now under way at both ends and should be completed in about three years.

Future of Title Insurance and Its Great Possibilities

Advantages of Local and National Operations Discussed by Cyril H. Burdett, Vice-President of the New York Title and Mortgage Company

PROTECTION of property owners by means of title insurance was the subject of discussion at annual convention of the Pennsylvania Title Association held recently at Pittsburgh. One of the principal addresses was that made by Cyril H. Burdett, Vice-President of the New York Title and Mortgage Company, who took for his subject, "The Future of Title Insurance and Its Possibilities." The speaker reviewed the general policy pursued by the New York and Philadelphia companies since they began business in the late eighties and said that it had changed very little during this period. The attitude of the Companies had been and still is to insure titles which are believed to be good, and to refuse to insure those which are felt to be doubtful. One company, he pointed out, which had for an extra fee insured doubtful titles had abandoned the plan. Mr. Burdett continued:

"Under our present system, the losses of the companies are very small. An investigation, conducted about two years ago, by a large title insurance company in the West, demonstrated this fact. It was found that one company, with approximately \$33,000,000 of insurance outstanding, extending over a period of eight years, had paid in losses only \$2,711.07. Other companies reported losses averaging from $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1 per cent to $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. of premiums received. This would mean, were the income of a company for premiums—which I shall assume includes the fees for title examination as well—amounted to \$1,000,000, a loss of from \$10,000 to \$55,000 a year. I believe that the higher figure very seldom occurs, and that the average losses paid by our title companies, in the larger cities, would be nearer \$25,000 on a million dollars income. Of course, we all know that the reason why our losses are so small is not because we find the titles perfect, but because we try to make them perfect, before we insure them, and this supervision and direction of the means by which titles brought before us are made insurable is one of the most troublesome features of our business.

"It is interesting to compare our losses with those paid by fire insurance companies, which average about 50 per cent of the premiums received, with expenses of about 35 per cent. Our expenses average from 50 per cent. to 85 per cent.

"The most frequent losses which the companies have to meet arise where policies insure marketability of title, and those of us who are familiar with the business in large cities, especially where there is more than one title company, find the greatest trouble arises from the questioning of titles upon re-examination by one or the other of our competitors, or by the regular practitioner, resulting sometimes in considerable expenditures in order to remove doubts as to the validity of title. It is very seldom that any title company has a direct attack upon the title to the premises insured. The experience of all of us, I think, will show that our most frequent losses, although not necessarily the largest losses, arise by reason of oversights and omissions in our own offices.

"It might be claimed that all this is an argument against the need of title insurance, but it cannot be denied that there are many bad titles, and no one can know in which class his is included. A search must be made to ascertain the apparent condition of the title, and though seemingly good a policy of insurance is a necessary protection. It is unnecessary to emphasize all the dangers which are so familiar to us in the history of titles, such as forgeries, invalid wills, dower claims, undiscovered heirs, defective acknowledgments, illegal trusts, defective suits and the like, which so frequently occur. Many of such titles are examined by us and refused insurance, and for this reason we escape large losses.

"In the case of no other class of insurance is the cost of examination of the risk so large as in connection with the insurance of real estate titles, and this cost usually leaves a comparatively small margin of the fees to be apportioned as a reserve for the payment of losses."

Taking up the question of the Torrens Law, Mr. Burdett said that this measure did not supplant what the title insurance companies were doing but was setting up short statutes of limitation in an attempt to destroy the rights which the statutes of our States have given to those who are in a position to assert claims against persons in possession of real property. He added that if these limitations were set up independently of the Torrens Law the title companies could easily pass more titles without trouble, and declared the popularity of the Torrens Law in New York City was measured by the fact that in thirteen years since it had been on the statute books there had been only 217 registrations under it. Mr. Burdett gave the history of the guaranteeing by surety companies of titles certified by attorneys selected by district land banks in the system of the Federal Farm Loan Bureau. He said:

"I have been interested to ascertain just how this plan has been working and recently made inquiry of the Farm Loan Bureau. They write: 'The plan of insurance against loss on account of title worked out by several of the federal land banks has proven satisfactory in every particular to date. No losses have been reported to us by reason of defect in title, although we were advised some time since by the Federal Land Bank of Columbia, S. C., that they had a case in which it seemed probable they would have to present a claim.' As title companies, we fought this procedure as revolutionary, and fraught with serious consequences, but the result would seem to prove that it was not so great a danger after all and it may be that we could branch out, not perhaps in this particular direction, but in others seemingly as radical, without incurring any great losses.

"On the other hand, there is some justification for the attitude taken by the title companies in refusing this business. The mere lapse of time is not the only factor entering into the running of the statute of limitations. Proof must be obtained that all parties having a claim against the title of a record owner have been under no legal disabilities, such as infancy or incompetency, during the running of the statute."

Mr. Burdett discussed the question of invasion of each others respective fields by surety and title companies and discountenanced it. He suggested the future development of the title business along national instead of local lines. On this subject he said:

"The development of title insurance business, as I have so far shown, is the liberalizing of policy. At the present time most, if not all, of the title insurance companies confine their insurance to their local city. In some few instances they extend their operations to the boundaries of the State, where they can send their own employees to make examinations. They never go out of their State, and never insure the examination by attorneys not in their regular employment. I believe the time has now come when the title insurance companies situated in our large cities and having large capital should extend their field of action by giving the benefit of the protection of their capital to the insuring of titles throughout the country, just as fire and life insurance companies, organized and located in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and other cities, issue policies anywhere in the United States. All these classes of companies have outgrown the provincialism which would confine their operations to a single State. Title companies can do the same.

"Out of thirty-five States where investigation has been made, I find that a title insurance company may enter and appoint agents in seventeen, the provisions with reference to qualifying being either nominal or requiring the payment of small fees, and, in some cases, the imposition of a small tax upon the fees collected. In sixteen States, deposits of securities are required to be made, either in the State where the business is to be carried on, or in the State where the home office is located, in most cases, $100,000. This is the same method adopted for the qualification of surety companies doing business in such States. The law of the State of New York was changed last year so as to allow title assurance companies organized under the law of that State to deposit securities for the protection of their policyholders with the Superintendent of Insurance, where the laws of other States made it a condition precedent to doing business in those States that such securities should be so deposited. The only States found where the laws do not allow outside title insurance companies to do business are the States of Ohio and Iowa."

Using the same methods and agencies as large life insurance companies Mr. Burdett said title companies could extend their business throughout the country. In conclusion he summed up as follows:

"It requires only a general education on the part of the public at large as to the value of title insurance. In order to convince the public as to that value we shall have to broaden our methods, make the policy more inclusive, assume greater risks than we have heretofore taken, and convince the public that we are giving value for value. When the time comes that National Title Insurance is a department of every title insurance company, those companies in the larger States, having very large capital, will of course be able to inspire greater confidence and obtain a larger share of business. The companies in such cities as New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago and Kansas City, with their large and abundant capital, should be the pioneers in this departure. Until title insurance companies have expanded their activities to include this field, they will not have fulfilled their true mission, nor have realized their greatest possibilities."

New Apartment Hotel Will Occupy Noted Church Site

S. W. Straus & Co. Underwrite Bond Issue on Eighteen-Story Structure at Broadway and Seventy-First Street, Designed by Maynicke & Franke

WRECKING contractors have demolished the Church of the Blessed Sacrament which for a number of years has been a Sherman Square landmark, to make way for the construction of an eighteen-story apartment hotel. This structure will be located at the southeast corner of Broadway and Seventy-first street and will occupy a plot with a Broadway frontage of 112 feet and a depth of 175 feet on Seventy-first street. This plot was purchased several months ago from the Church of the Blessed Sacrament by the George Dose Engineering Company, Inc., 43 West Twenty-seventh street, who are erecting this building as an investment.

The property was valued at approximately $1,000,000, and the building now under construction will involve an outlay of more than $2,000,000. This project is being financed by S. W. Straus & Co., who recently underwrote a first mortgage serial bond issue of $2,300,000 on the operation.

This structure is being erected according to plans and specifications prepared by Maynicke & Franke, architects, 25 East Twenty-sixth street, and will be eighteen stories in height, with basement and sub-basement. The building has been designed with setbacks as required by the provisions of the Zoning Law, and when completed will stand out as the dominating structure on Sherman Square.

According to the present plans the building will contain approximately six hundred guest rooms, with baths, but the suites will be so arranged that they may be utilized as larger units at the discretion of the tenant. The ground floor will be devoted to stores on the Broadway side. The main entrance will be on Seventy-first street, and a spacious entrance corridor will lead to a large lobby, from which entrance will be had to the restaurants, lounge, reception rooms, etc. The kitchens will be located in the basement and ground floor.

This project, which will be known as the St. Gerard Apartment Hotel, is being erected under the direction and supervision of the George Dose Engineering Company, who are awarding separate contracts for the various branches of work as the job proceeds. It is anticipated the building will be completed and ready for occupancy during the spring of 1923.

The new St. Gerard Apartments are located in a section in which are grouped a number of high-class hotels and apartments, among which are numbered the Ansonia, St. Andrew, Hamilton and Robert Fulton.

Union Refuses to Violate Agreement With Employers

CONSTRUCTION in New York is again threatened with a tie-up, because of the jurisdictional fight between the Independent Bricklayers' Helpers and Building Laborers' Union of America and the International Hod Carriers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which resulted last Wednesday in the Building Trades Council suspending the independent union and its 15,000 members from that body.

The drastic action by the Council leaves the building trades workers in the city with two alternatives: A war by the Council on the independent union involving a tie-up of building construction, or a surrender by the Council of its claim for collective agreement with the employers to cover all crafts in the industry.

C. G. Norman, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Building Trades Employers Association said that the employers did not believe that any attempt would be made by the Building Trades Council to call strikes against builders employing independent labor.

"The building employers will continue to hire the independent laborers. Dioguardi's union is the only one that has kept its agreements with our association year after year."

"The suspension of the 15,000 laborers of our union by the Building Trades Council is an effort by that body," said G. B. Dioguardi, General President of the independent union, "to compel us to violate our agreement with the New York Building Trades Employers' Association. There is no other issue involved."

"The independent union has demonstrated its willingness and competency to man all jobs in the city."

Fifth Avenue and Environs Led the Dealing, While Parcels in Harlem and Greenwich Village and Big Leases Were Other Features

CONSIDERING that this week contained the day that is deemed to be the beginning of the summer holiday season the real estate market was not at all languid. The high spots of it were the sale of a 10-story loft building in 46th street, near Fifth avenue; the purchase of two buildings in West 56th street, near Fifth avenue, by merchants in West 57th street; the leasing of an old dwelling at 20 East 33d street to an adjoining owner who will reimprove the site of both structures with a modern business building; the sale of the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 16th street, a 13-story business building, for $1,000,000; and the sale of several fine dwellings in streets north of 59th street and close to Fifth avenue; while an entire improved block front in Fifth avenue, in Harlem, was leased for a long term of years. Consequently Fifth avenue may be said to have led the market of the week.

A transaction as interesting as any was the leasing of the 6-story brick building, known as "Murray's," at 228-232 West 42d street, west of Seventh avenue, and in the theatre zone, for an aggregate term of 63 years, at $4,500,000, beside acquiring the balance of the Murray lease. The site is 75x98.9 feet, and is situated between the entrances of the Cohan & Harris Theatre and the Liberty Theatre, while the body of the Cohan & Harris Theatre abuts the property. Charles W Groll heads the new leasing corporation.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

THE total number of sales reported, but not recorded in Manhattan this week, was 79, as against 85 last week and 68 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th st was 25, as compared with 24 last week and 30 a year ago.

The number of sales north of 59th st was 54, as compared with 61 last week and 38 a year ago.

From the Bronx 16 sales at private contract were reported, as against 7 last week and 11 a year ago.

Statistical tables, including the number of recorded instruments, will be found on page 683.

Spring Golf Tournament

The spring golf tournament of the Real Estate Board of New York will be held next Wednesday, June 7, at the Woodway Country Club, Stamford, Conn. A solid silver vase presented by the New York Title and Mortgage Co., the Edward D. MacManus memorial cup, a "Guest's Prize" and special prizes will be played for. The golf committee is Burgoyne Hamilton, chairman; Henry Brady, Gerald R. Brown, Joseph L. Ennis, J. Irving Walsh, Charles G. Moses, B. M. Phillips and Elisha Sniffin.

Operators Buy in Two Boroughs

Genner, Simon & Asher, attorneys, announce the closing of a group of Manhattan and Bronx transactions. Representing the Shirensen Realty Corporation, they bought from the estate of William Henry Potter the vacant plot, 100x100, at northwest corner of Sherman av and Dyckman st for improvement with a 2-story taxpayer, to contain 13 stores and offices above. This is the first sale of the property in 75 years.

The Luck Realty Corporation, S. B. Fuchs, president, represented by them, purchased from Benjamin J. and Louis V. Weil 220 to 230 East 78th st, on a plot 40x102.2, and two 6-story brick tenement houses with stores, each on a plot 40x102.2, and containing 24 apartments and valued at $150,000.

Acting for the Royal Realty Corporation, Albert McDowell Taylor, president, the attorneys bought from the Tekane Realty Co. the 6-story brick tenement house with 3 stores, on a plot 40x99.11, at 259 and 261 West 144th st. It was held at $55,000 and shows a yearly rental of $10,500. The C. I. Weinstein Building Construction Co. sold to Jacob Wertheimer the 1-story taxpayer, 55x100, on the east side of Cauldwell av, 100 feet north of 154th st, which it just completed. The property contains 10 stores and was held at $50,000. The selling company was represented by the above attorneys.

Buy an Ancient Stronghold

George W. Mercer & Son, who recently sold for the estate of Edwin P. Smith the southeast corner of Eighth av and 23d st, have bought one of the pieces on that plot, the 5-story flat with store at 266 West 23d st, where their offices have been since erection of the building, more than 75 years ago.

Bleecker Street Resale

A. Q. Orza resold for a client the five 4-story brick buildings with stores at 174-182 Bleecker st to a buyer, who will make extensive improvements and alterations. This property is part of the Hearth & Home improvement. The plot is 109.4½x76.

Warehousemen Increase Holdings

Lawrence, Son & Gerrish, Inc., purchased from Frances B. Bridge the 4-story brick warehouse building, 45x105.11x irregular, at the northwest corner of Market slip and South st. It forms an L to the adjacent property, 419-423 Water st, running through to 214 and 216 South st.

Merchants Buy Abutting Property

Jay-Thorp, Inc., bought from Alice Hoffman 25-27 West 56th st, two 4-story and basement stone dwellings, each on a lot 25x100.5, abutting its store at 24-26 West 57th st. The asking price was $275,000. The buyer will erect on the site an addition to its building.

Larimore Building Bought

Larimore & Co. sold through Alfred C. Marks 15-17 West 46th st, a 10-story loft and store building, known as the Larimore, on a plot 33.11½x100.5. It is a new building and was held at $500,000.

Will Alter 77th Street House

The Quesmere Realty Corporation, Carlos L. Henriquez, president, purchased 336 West 77th st, a 5-story brick American basement dwelling, on a lot 23x84.2, which will be converted into non-housekeeping apartments. The purchaser was represented by M. Morgenthau, Jr., Co.

Two Deals in East Harlem

Chr. Volzing & Son, Inc., sold to Michele Marraffino the 5-story and basement brick tenement house, on a lot 26x95.8, at 455 East 117th st; also the two 5-story brick tenement houses with stores, on a plot 50x70, at 947 Third av for Ellen N. Cunningham. These parcels have been managed by the brokers for the past 56 years and this is the first sale of the property in that period.

Realty Companies in a Deal

The 13-story loft and office building at the northeast corner of Fifth av and 16th st, was sold by the Moton Realty Co. to the De Peyster Realty Co. The buyers gave in part payment "Castle Wall," a 25-acre estate at Elberon, N. J., formerly occupied by Myron H. Oppenheim. The Fifth av property was held at $1,000,000. It occupies a plot, 49.10 feet on Fifth av and 141.10 on 16th st. It has an "L," 25x92 in the rear. The total yearly income is said to be about $117,000.

The Elberon estate includes a large stone

Walk-up apartment houses in Harlem were in good demand, one deal alone involving eight of these buildings. Numerous dwellings in the same part of the city changed hands. The upper West Side was active in good dwellings and elevator apartment houses, as was also Washington Heights. In the Dyckman tract a good-sized plot was bought for improvement.

A diversity of trading was witnessed in Greenwich Village. Here and there a group of old buildings was bought as a site for a modern structure, while old dwellings and old tenement houses were bought both by operators and investors. There will long be interest in this ancient part of town as a result of the new influences under which it has come. The most striking sale farther downtown was that of a West street block front to a wholesale commission firm, for occupancy. An impressive sale in the Chelsea district was that of a 75-year-old building on West 23d street, near Eighth avenue, which was sold to a real estate firm of several generations who have occupied it almost since it was built.

There was some activity in tenement and store parcels in Second and Third avenues, and property in Madison and in Lexington avenues still figures actively. In the South street zone a firm of warehousemen who have been buying warehouses during the last few weeks added another one to their group.

residence and the furnishings are included in the deal. The place will be occupied by J. D. Wetmore, attorney for the Moton Realty Co. Irvin G. Herman of the Title Guarantee & Trust Co. represented the De Peyster Realty Corporation. L. C. Whiton is president of the Moton Realty Co.

Periman, of this city.

Park Hill Inn Sold

Park Hill Inn, Yonkers, owned for many years by American Real Estate Co., has been sold to a syndicate which is reported to be arranging plans for a development in the site. The property was originally the Getty home-stand, and about 20 years ago was purchased by the American Real Estate Co. and remodelled as a roadhouse and remained such until the war began. The sale was made by C. Irving Lattin.

To Increase Its Membership

Representing more than $100,000,000 of invested capital, the Forty-second Street Property Owners and Merchants Association late last week prepared for an intensive campaign for increase of membership. The association typifies the representative property owners and merchants of the Forty-second street business district, which embraces in its scope all streets, from river to river, from Thirty-eighth to Forty-sixth street, inclusive. Organized three years ago last month the association has a membership of 135 merchants, property owners and lessees. The steadily growing importance of the entire district has aroused the organization to renewed effort, with the result that it has two thousand good membership prospects in sight. The district has been thoroughly gone over recently and every prospect worth while has been listed. The association seeks membership among the substantial smaller merchants as well as the large ones, not only for the purpose of greater efficiency, but to destroy any idea that it is a silk stocking organization.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week were given over to luncheons and discussions at Murrays in West Forty-second street about plans of campaign. In the past there has been no concerted movement for increased membership. Co-operative activity is now desired. As a result, each member agrees to spend three days a week interviewing certain prospects and urging them to join the organization. It was organized originally by twenty-two men who foresaw the great status of the Forty-second street district. The association wants every business element there represented in its membership. Much of its work during the last three years has been keeping an undesirable class of tenancy from the neighborhood.

The membership drive will finish with a luncheon June 6 at the Biltmore, at 12:30 o'clock.

Hettrick Convicted Second Time

John T. Hettrick, "code of practice" lawyer; Charles G. Witherspoon, president of Baker, Smith & Co., Inc., contractors and steam-fitters; Martin McCue and John N. Imhoff, business agents of the Enterprise Association, Steamfitters' Union, Local No. 638, were convicted of conspiracy by a jury on May 26 before Justice Claude B. Alverson in the Supreme Court. Louis Gebhardt, who had been indicted on the same charge, was acquitted.

The five were indicted for violations of the Donnelly anti-trust law, January 30, as a result of revelations made before the Lockwood committee. Hettrick and the others were fined $500 each. This is Hettrick's second conviction. He was released from the penitentiary on February 24, after serving a year for conspiracy in the plumbing trade.

Jury in Cement Trial Discharged

The jury in the case of the Government against the nineteen corporations and forty-four individuals engaged in the manufacture of cement who were charged with violating the Sherman law, was discharged by Federal Judge Knox last week, unable to agree.

The indictments charged that the defendants operated under the "Eddy Plan of Open Competition" in the manufacture and sale of ninety per cent. of the cement used in the country, eliminating competition. Colonel Haywood, U. S. District Attorney, said the cases would be tried again.

RECENT LEASES.

Particulars of Important Lease

The lease recently recorded of 49-51-51½ East 33rd st, also includes the property 62-64 East 34th st, size 43 ft. 8¼ in. x 98 ft. 9 in., which together form a plot of some 9,400 square feet immediately adjoining the Vanderbilt Hotel. The lessees, Abraham Reich and Adolph Fortgang, now hold the 34th st end of the property under lease, subject to a cancellation clause, and by the transaction just consummated, they also retain possession of this property for a further term of 26 years.

Plans are being developed for a 9-sty commercial building to be erected on the 33rd st parcel, and will be designed to take advantage of the great difference between the level of 33rd and 34th sts, which will permit of continuing the 33rd st store floor to include the 34th st basement; the 2d floor of the proposed structure will be built on the same level and incorporated into the 34th st store, thereby providing practically 100 per cent additional store space. William Pierre Jockin Co. were the brokers and have been appointed renting agents of the building which will be ready for possession on December 1 next.

Insurance Company in Pershing Sq.

Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Co., whose principal American offices have been in Newark, N. J., has leased two floors in the new Pershing Square Building to be erected at the southeast corner of 42d st and Park av. The lease is for a term of 20 years and involves an aggregate rental of about $2,000,000. The total area of the space is 40,000 square feet. The Brown, Wheelock Co. was the broker. Thomas H. Anderson and Charles A. Nottingham, managers of the company in New York, represented the lessees.

Lease on 42d St. at Big Rental

Tier, Fallon & Kyle Co. leased, for Walter J. Salmon, the 12-foot store at 11 West 42nd st, to Jacob Landes, for a trunk and bag store, for a term of years, at a rental aggregating $300,000.

New Leasehold in East Side

Pease & Elliman leased for James L. McGovern to Nathan Wilson, for a term of 63 years, the site 153-157 East 49th st, 60x100.5, at present covered with old 4-sty stone flats, midway between Lexington and Third avs. The aggregate rental is $500,000. The lessee will reimprove the site with a 9-sty elevator apartment house.

On the southeast corner of Lexington av and 49th st, diagonally opposite the site leased, is the former site of the National Sporting Club headquarters, whereon a new hotel will be built by James T. Lee.

Another Pershing Square Lease

The International Paper Co., of 80 Broad st, has leased the 17th and 18th floors of the Pershing Square Building that is to be erected on the site of the old Grand Union Hotel at the southeast corner of 42d st and Park av, by Henry Mandel. The lease is for a 10-year term and according to Cushman & Wakefield, the brokers, it calls for a rental of about $1,000,000. Negotiations for this deal have been under way for more than two years.

Actual construction on the Pershing Square Building has not yet begun, but according to Cushman & Wakefield, already 41 per cent. of the entire office space has been leased. Other tenants which have taken one or more floors are the Royal Baking Powder Co., the Royal Indemnity Co. and the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Co. The building will be 24 stories high and will cover the Park av block front and will extend 124 feet along 41st st and 125 feet on 42d st. The steel contract has already been awarded to Post & McCord.

Long Lease on Fourth Ave.

Heil & Stern leased for the 303 Fourth Avenue Corporation to the Tomados Confectionery Co., Inc., a store in the building in course of construction at the northeast corner of Fourth av and 23d st, for a term of 10 years, at an aggregate rental of $75,000.

Leases Near Madison Ave.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co., as brokers, leased for a term of years the parlor floor store in the Koopman building, 26 East 55th st, to Virginia Fuller, who will occupy the premises on October 1 as a dressmaking and millinery establishment, and leased the 6th floor in the Elliman building, 15 East 49th st, to Arthur H. Hunter and Cary F. Simmons for executive offices of their steel business.

"Murray's" Changes Hands

A syndicate headed by Charles W. Groll, operator, has taken a 67-year lease from the Dunsmore Realty Co. of "Murray's," the restaurant, banquet hall and hotel apartment building at 228-232 West 42d st. The hotel and restaurant will be under the management of Joseph Susskind of Pelham Heath Inn and Blossom Heath Inn. Earle & Calhoun represented the Dunsmore Realty Co., and Judge Joseph represented the Groll syndicate.

Effect a 42-Year Lease

Louis Gold & Co. obtained from the Welling-ton estate a 42-year lease of the 50-foot plot on the east side of Broadway, 25 feet south of 151st st. The lessees intend to improve the site with a 3-sty business building.

Old Vanderbilt Stables Leased

A 6-sty building to cost at least $100,000 is to be erected alongside the Vanderbilt Hotel on Park av as the result of a leasing transaction affecting the 2 and 3-sty stables, 50x98.9, at 49 and 51½ East 33d st. The lease, which is for 26 years at an annual net rental of from $23,100 to $24,100, was made by Edward N. Dickerson to Abraham Reich. The lease starts when possession of the premises is secured by Mr. Reich.

When the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, of Fifth av and 58th st, resided in a house that was on the site of the Hotel Vanderbilt, the buildings in 33d st were his private stables.

A Key Corner Leased

The small 5-sty building at the southwest corner of Lexington av and 57th st, 25x22, has been leased by the Allerton 57th Street Corporation, which gives the company control of the immediate corner around which it is erecting a 19-sty bachelor apartment house on a first mortgage bond issue provided by S. W. Straus & Co. The lease is for a term of 21 years, from July 1, with a similar renewal privilege, at a net annual rent of at least $7,000 for the term, and was made with Morris Blum. The building will be annexed to the main structure, which is to contain approximately 470 rooms and will front 67.6 feet on 57th st, and 75 feet on Lexington av, utilizing a site of 8,462 square feet.

Lease of Big Bronx Corner

Demolition of the taxpayer at the southwest corner of Burnside and Jerome avs and its replacement with a modern 1-sty store and office building will result from the leasing of that property by the newly organized E. S. P. Realty Corporation, representing Joseph L. Ennis, Frank J. Sinnott and Albert D. Phelps. The property, which was leased from the Loftin Realty Corporation for 20 years, measures 125 feet on Burnside av and 75 feet on Jerome av. A store in the proposed building has been rented by the Schulte Cigar Stores Co. for 20 years. McLaughlin & Stern, attorneys, represented the lessees.

Secretary Hoover Advises Lumber Industry Reforms

Four-Day Conference at Washington Considers a System for Inspection and Guarantee of Quality, Quantity and Grades of Lumber

THE four-day preliminary conference of American lumbermen, called at the suggestion of the National Manufacturers' Association by Secretary Hoover to standardize trade nomenclature and grades, to eliminate unnecessary varieties and to guarantee and protect the quality and tally of lumber to the consumer, adjourned Saturday. With its numbers largely increased by representatives of wholesale and retail associations, of architects, engineers, contractors, and other consumers such as the railways, the manufacturers passed a number of resolutions strongly supporting a national program of simplification of practices in the industry. The conference, as a whole, also voted unanimously to accept the agency of the National Manufacturers' Association in securing properly appointed representatives of all groups interested in lumber production and conversion, with a view to the definite adoption of standardized nomenclature, grades, quality, markings and practices.

The hope of the department in calling this preliminary conference was provision of a system throughout the country for inspection and guarantee of the quality, quantity and grade of lumber, with a view to affording all possible protection to the consuming public; that ways would be found to simplify the dimensions of lumber and secure the right proportion of lumber to different types of consumers with a view to eliminating waste, decreasing cost of distribution, and to see that agencies for accomplishing these purposes should be set up by the lumber industry itself.

The Secretary of Commerce proposed that a national system of inspection and certification should be created by the industry to embrace all of the lumber trade; that descriptions of the different species of lumber as to grade and quality should be made as uniform as possible throughout the country; that the inspection service should be open to consumers in settlement of all disputes; and that, in order better to establish the reputation of American lumber products abroad, this system of inspection and certification should be extended to foreign countries. The Secretary emphasized the fact that all these ideas are being applied and are in limited operation in the lumber industry in different parts of the country, that other industries have been able themselves to establish for the use of their own members and the public such a system, and that the desire of the department is to aid in securing the consolidation of the various organized units in the industry to the extent of establishing a national inspection and certification system, to be maintained by the industry itself, for the protection of all consumers as well as to avoid unnecessary confusions in the trade itself. Such an organization, Mr. Hoover pointed out, would soon eliminate many current complaints by providing practical guarantees as to quality and quantity to the consumer, and the same plan would lend itself to the eventual establishment of research work by the industry for the development of better utilization of wood products, of large economies, and better adaptability in the manufacture of raw material. The plans embrace no element of control of distribution or price, but essentially service on behalf of the consumer in guarantees of quality and character of lumber sold and thereby the lifting of all ethical standards in the industry. The unanimous action of this preliminary conference and the organization set up to advance these ideas by the trade itself promise success. The summer months will be employed in the necessary technical investigation in discussions in the various branches of the trade and it is expected that a final conference may be held in the early fall for creation of the definite organization.

Laying before the delegates to the lumber conference the program embodying the three major problems, Secretary Hoover said they were the most difficult that lumber interests have to cope with, and the settling of all of them, or two, or one, will more than pay for the time and efforts spent in the conference.

"The purpose of the department," said Secretary Hoover, "is to assist by bringing the different trades together, so far as we are able; to give you such expert assistance as we may and by giving you the benefit and experience of other trade and industries in methods of solving difficulties.

"The problems in the lumber industry, which you are here to discuss, are of the most fundamental importance. With the lumber industry, as with practically all other industries, the main trouble is the cost of distribution. Practically all of your difficulties in the lumber industry are questions of distribution; the guarantees of qualities, the simplification of dimensions, the grading of lumber, all of them, are steps in advance toward reducing the cost and the waste of distribution.

"Whatever is arrived at must be arrived at by your initiative and upon your agreement. My understanding is that we are going to discuss three phases of this question. The first is the question of grading lumber. When we come to questions of grading, the first thing that one runs against is the nomenclature—of the actual names that are in use for different commodities, and different qualities or standards of that commodity. So that a primary necessity is to have some agreement on the terms that are going to be applied.

"Now, I realize that this is a trade that has an enormous variety of material, so that a designation of terms must start with some common acceptance of the designation of a particular type of wood; it is either pine or hemlock, or it is something else. And the primary custom of the trade is a definition of lumber on the basis of species, in which there is some variance that needs to be corrected by agreement, as to what species the lumber really is by way of trade name. We are not involved here in discussing trees and their origin; it is purely a question of terms in the trade—trade terms.

"And then we come to the quality of any particular species or any general variety that we have determined upon. And there is a wide variation there. Some lumbers are designed by clears and other qualities, whilst others have other nomenclatures, and we ought to have the same terms, if that is possible. So that those are questions of terms, of nomenclatures.

"Then we come to the question of guarantees. As to how, after lumber has been divided on any such basis as we may determine as to its nomenclature, how the public is to have any assurance as to what it gets. And there we have to enter into the problems of inspection, and certification, and markings, or other devices that might be developed to give assurances to the consumer. And I do believe it is infinitely in the interest of the industry as a whole that we should set up, if it is possible, some sort of a system that will result in a practical guarantee. Those guarantees are fundamentally one of the greatest eliminations of wastes that could be made in the industry; in the elimination of litigation and dispute, and in the better education of the public which can follow as to the best grade adapted to certain purposes, etc., etc. Indeed, one of the difficulties in this industry has been three or four per cent, or perhaps even less than that, of people trading directly in lumber who have definitely shifted the grades in transactions, and that has con-

Work Started On New Apartment in Park Avenue Section

Nine-Story Multi-Family Structure, Designed by Sugarman, Hess & A. G. Berger, Will Provide for Thirty-two Families in Four and Six Room Suites

EXCAVATION work has been completed for a new fireproof apartment house to occupy a plot 87 by 100 feet at 125 to 135 East Sixty-third street. This project, designed by Sugarman, Hess & A. G. Berger, will be nine stories in height, with basement, and will cost approximately $500,000. No general contract has been awarded for the construction of this apartment. The owners, The 125 East 63d Street Corporation, Louis Cowan, president and A. M. Daly, secretary, have entire charge of the work and are placing contracts for the various branches as construction proceeds.

The facades of this new multi-family building have been designed in the Renaissance style and will be constructed of varied colored brick in the dark red tones, with trimmings of Indiana limestone and terra cotta. The structure will provide living accommodations for thirty-two families, in suites completely equipped with the most modern labor-saving devices and conveniences. These suites will contain six rooms, foyer and three baths, and four rooms, foyer and two baths. In addition there will be several apartments on the ground floor especially designed for physicians. The latter will have separate entrances to the street.

The apartments designed for physicians will be wholly segregated from the remaining portion of the ground floor, the rear of which will be utilized as additional quarters for servants. Each apartment will contain a log-burning open fireplace in the living rooms, which are of unusual dimensions. The four-room suites are unique in that they contain two master chambers and baths in addition to a fully equipped kitchen and a combination living and dining room.

Rentals in this apartment will range from $2,600 to $4,300 per year and the owners have appointed Douglas L. Elliman & Co., as renting and managing agents. The present construction schedule calls for the completion of this operation by November 1, 1922.

Sixty-third street, between Park and Lexington avenues, which geographically is the center of the East Side high class apartment district, is rapidly being transformed into one of the choicest streets sequently led to a great deal of feeling that the trade lacks certain basic honesty that I know it does possess. In any event, if we could arrive at some method of guarantees as to grades and qualities, we would eliminate the crook who casts a general reflection over the whole trade; because if you find one crooked transaction in lumber, it will reflect over 100,000 honest transactions; it is the one thing that stands out.

"Now, the third branch of the discussion is that of simplification; simplification of dimensions and other items that make for economy in both production and transportation and distribution. The difficulties, of course, are very large, more especially as there are some forty thousand saw mills in the country, and hitherto, in our examination of these questions and in the actual processes of securing simplified practice, we have found that the first thing fundamental to it is some kind of a survey to know how many varieties of dimensions, and sizes, and so on, there are in the different breeds of the commodity; and we have made the most successful approach to that problem hitherto, not by setting up positive sizes so much as the elimination of a great number of sizes for which there is but comparatively little call, or of comparatively little importance.

"My own feeling is that if we can develop these things through the internal machinery of the trade itself, as a matter of self-government in the trade, that we will have secured infinitely better results, and we will have secured something even more fundamental than that, and that is the sense of self-preservation in the American people."

Commercial and Industrial Building Growing in Volume

Weekly Statistics of F. W. Dodge Company Indicate Steady Improvement in Amount of Construction Released for Immediate Start

CONSTRUCTION interests in the Metropolitan District have little complaint about the volume of business now on hand, but the difficulties of securing some materials and labor are impeding progress to some extent. Reports of new operations being planned or released under contract show a large amount of work still to be accomplished before the end of this season and all trades anticipate a capacity business for the remainder of the year.

Figures tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company, for the twenty-first week of the current year show plans reported in New York State and New Jersey, north of Trenton, for 663 building and engineering projects which will require a total expenditure of $25,113,000. During the same week contracts were awarded for 505 new operations which will involve an outlay of about $19,275,100.

The weekly figures for Greater New York show extremely active conditions in the local construction field. While residential construction is not quite as heavy as it was a few weeks ago this type of operation still remains as the dominating characteristic of the industry. There has been a very definite increase, however, in commercial and industrial work which is welcomed by both contractors and material manufacturers and dealers.

According to the figures for Greater New York plans were reported during the week of May 20 to 26 inclusive for 203 new construction projects at an estimated total valuation of $8,542,800, while the contracts actually awarded numbered 132 and represented a total cost of $10,508,000.

Among the 203 operations for which plans were reported were 43 business projects such as stores, offices, lofts, commercial garages, etc., $1,979,500; 6 educational projects, $463,400; 2 hospitals and institutions, $40,000; 8 factory and industrial buildings, $1,147,500; 1 public building, $5,000; 11 public works and public utilities, $874,900; 4 religious and memorial projects, $105,000; 126 residential operations, including apartments, flats and tenements and one and two-family dwellings, $3,822,500, and 2 social and recreational buildings, such as theatres, clubs, etc., $105,000.

The group of 132 operations for which contracts were awarded during the week included 23 business projects of various types, $2,788,000; 3 educational buildings, $1,225,000; 2 hospitals, $550,000; 1 industrial project, $865,000; 1 public building, $22,000; 4 public works and public utilities, $65,000; 1 church, $50,000; 94 residential operations, including multi-family dwellings, and one and two-family houses, $4,643,000, and 3 social and recreational buildings, $300,000.

Cement Output Is Steady

Statistics prepared by the United States Geological Survey show cement production for the first quarter of 1922, at 15,254,000 bbl. as against 15,240,000 bbl. for the same period in 1921. Shipments totaled 13,218,000 bbl. as compared with 12,091,000 bbl. for the first three months of 1921. Although the production rate, for the first three months of 1922, is practically the same as that for the first quarter of last year, increased shipments over last year indicate growing demand. Stocks on hand at the end of March, 1922, aggregated 13,824,000 bbl. as compared with 12,000,000 bbl. on March 31, 1921.

Department of Commerce reports show imports of hydraulic cement in March amounting to 1,597 bbl., valued at $4,308. The total for 1921 was 122,317 bbl., worth $388,828. March imports were from Mexico, 902 bbl.; France, 322 bbl.; Japan, 263 bbl.; other countries, 120 bbl. Total exports of hydraulic cement in 1921 were 1,181,014 bbl., valued at $4,276,986.

Members of the Congress are expected to be present and are cordially invited to bring guests who will be interested in this subject and the Congress movement.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

CONSIDERABLE improvement in the building material supply situation has created a more optimistic attitude among construction interests in the Metropolitan district and there is every likelihood that supplies of basic materials will now continue easily available throughout the remainder of the season. Although there is still some shortage in common brick the acute conditions of the past few weeks have been relieved by the arrival of several cargoes of new brick and manufacturers are confident that the supply will keep abreast of the demand for the remainder of the season.

One of the outstanding characteristics of the current local building situation is the very decided falling off in residential construction. This applies particularly to Greater New York where records of the Building Bureaus and Tenement House Department show relatively low figures for new plans filed for dwellings. The unusually high totals recorded during March were largely the result of the desire to anticipate unfavorable action by the Legislature on tax exemption. The recession in residential building which has now become quite marked is having a reassuring effect upon other types of proposed operations as it is making labor and materials more easily available for commercial and industrial buildings which are growing in number.

Local building material markets are exceedingly active and dealers are looking forward to a continuation of the strong demand for some months to come. Prices generally are firm and although no important price increases have been announced the trend of material prices is upward.

Common Brick—The demand for Hudson River common brick remains as keen as it has been for some weeks past but larger supplies are available so that the market has lost some of the intensity noticeable only a week or so ago. Manufacturers are shipping new brick as rapidly as they are able to remove it from the kilns and as a result dealers are now in a position to supply practically all of their jobs without much delay. Within the next week or so it is likely that sufficient brick will arrive at this city to permit the storage of some reserve stocks in dealers' yards. Although manufacturers are pushing production to the utmost they are not of the opinion that the output this year will be much greater than the average for the past few years, as they are still confronted with a scarcity of fuel and inadequate labor which is showing considerable unrest and likely to demand higher wages at almost any time.

Summary—Transactions in the North River brick market for the week ending Thursday, June 1, 1922. Condition of market: Demand heavy; prices, firm and unchanged. Quotations: Hudson Rivers, $20 a thousand to dealers in cargo lots alongside dock. Number of cargoes arrived, 32; sales, 32. Distribution: Manhattan, 10; the Bronx, 3; Brooklyn, 16; New Jersey points, 2; Astoria, 1.

Lumber—Business is excellent in both wholesale and retail departments of trade and orders continue heavily in excess of production in practically all of the softwood lines. The strength of the demand and the shortening supplies have to a marked degree reacted upon prices, and during the past week the trend has been sharply upward. Retailers report a steady gain of business from building sources and manufacturing consumers are now a more important factor than they have been for a long time past. Although there is as yet little delay in filling orders the local stocks are not always complete and dealers anticipate a growing difficulty if the demand continues its present strength.

Builders' Hardware—The demand is heavy and according to the amount of construction now under way business should be exceedingly active in this line for the next two or three months. Prices are very firm and the entire list of builders' hardware items has lately undergone a price revision advancing levels from 7½ to 10 per cent. Manufacturers all have their plants working at full capacity and ample stocks are available for all requirements.

Building and Roofing Papers—Little change has taken place in the market for these materials during the past week. Demand is good and prospects for the future are bright. Prices are firm and jobbers assure adequate stocks to cover all reasonable demands.

Structural Steel—During the past week there has been a decided stiffening in fabricated steel values with mill base prices on shapes and plates now generally $1.70. There has also been a corresponding advance in quotations on fabricated materials, erected in commercial projects. The quotations now range from $67 to $75 per ton, erected. The demand is keen and a large number of new operations are being planned which will add materially to the prospective business in this line. Deliveries are becoming slower and from ten to twelve weeks is now the best the majority of mills will promise.

Reinforcing Bars—Business is somewhat lighter than it has been during the past few weeks but manufacturers anticipate increased activity in this market within a short time as a considerable amount of new commercial and industrial construction is likely to be released within the next fortnight. Prices are strong and subject to slight advances according to current predictions.

Electrical Supplies—This line is particularly active at present and all signs point to a further increase in demand for wiring materials and sundries required in connection with electrical installations. The vast amount of housing construction in the Metropolitan district is reflecting itself strongly in the increasing demand for electrical materials and a recent gain in the volume of new industrial work is shown by more frequent inquiries for generators, motors and incidental power equipment. Prices in the electrical trade are very steady and there is little indication of higher levels for some time to come. Local stocks are said to be adequate for all requirements and dealers are generally optimistic.

Cast Iron Pipe—The market for cast iron pipe continues to be extremely active. Demand is increasing steadily and recent inquiries denote a large volume of business to be released during the next three or four weeks. Despite the recent advance, cast iron pipe prices are remarkably firm and there is little likelihood of a drop for some time to come. New York quotations are as follows: 6 in. and larger, $48.80 per net ton; 4 in. and 5 in., $53.80, and 3 in., $63.80, with Class A and gas pipe $4 extra per ton.

Nails—Increasing demand has characterized this market during the past few weeks, and as a consequence there is a slight upward trend to prices. The effect of the coal strike on the steel situation is already being reflected in the markets for iron and steel products, and as the demand is steadily growing the higher prices are but a natural result. Jobbers' stocks are adequate, but there is a likelihood that future supplies from the mills may be increasingly difficult. New York quotations are as follows: Wire nails, $3.35, base, per keg, and cut nails, $3.90, base, per keg.

National Building Boom Is On

Authentic statistics for May, 1922, showing newly contemplated building and engineering operations as well as projects for which contracts have been actually awarded, indicate the establishment of a new high record for national structural activity during the month recently ended. These statistics, tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company, graphically picture the present strength of the building situation in the twenty-seven Northeastern States and are evidence of the arrival of the long-predicted boom in the construction industry.

The May figures show that in this territory, which includes approximately 75 per cent. of the building activity in the United States, architects and engineers reported work on plans and specifications for new projects to the total value of $519,414,000. During the same period the actual contract commitments involved an estimated total of $362,590,000. In the final analysis contracts actually awarded become the real gauge of future progress in the building industry and, as the May commitments for the entire territory covered by the Dodge Reports show a gain of 3 per cent. as compared with the total for the preceding month, the strength of the situation is apparent. When the May total for the territory is compared with that for the corresponding month of last year the current figure shows an increase of about 50 per cent. and as a consequence the national outlook for the construction industry is extremely optimistic.

A national building revival of large proportions has been anticipated since the close of the World War, but various combinations of conditions have delayed the industry's progress until this year. The building boom of 1922 has come, however, at a time when the United States is economically in better position to support a revival such as that now gaining momentum than would have been the case had the movement started sooner. The delays were really fortunate, as now the way is clear for rapid progress and development.

The building revival could not have come sooner because of inflated material cost levels, various serious labor difficulties, a shortage of ready funds for building operations and other factors, all of which militated against the industry's progress. In addition, the economic situation of the country was lacking in stability to a degree which also re-acted against the exertion of the maximum effort on the part of the construction interests to regain their former prominent position as one of the nation's leading industries. Today the majority of these adverse factors either have been entirely eliminated or the improvement has been so great that they are no longer considered as retardants.

From a national viewpoint the construction industry is now fairly stabilized and the outlook is for continued progress toward a maximum of activity which will assure its former high place in national industry. The material markets show great improvement and supplies are available for all requirements. Money is easier and interest rates are gradually coming down. Labor is plentiful and far more efficient than it was during the early post-war years and building wages are lower throughout the country, with the exception of isolated sections, such as New York City, where the demand has been excessive and consequently responsible for holding wages at the inflated war-time levels.

Restoring Vital Basic Conditions

On July 1 next will become effective the reductions in wages, freight rates and interest allowances on capital ordered by the Railroad Labor Board and the Interstate Commerce Commission, and this marks the second great accomplishment of the nation as a whole in bringing about widespread conditions which inevitably will reduce the high cost of living and stimulate the revival of business. The first was the fall in quotations of farm products because the country refused to turn over government funds to the farmers for the purpose of artificially maintaining war prices, the result being that cereals and cotton reacted naturally to the unrestricted working of the law of supply and demand. When the coal strike is settled on a basis consistent with the needs of this period of re-adjustment, and the tariff laws are remodeled to encourage rather than to hamper business, which problem Congress has in hand, a long stride will have been taken towards prosperity.

Reduced cost of living could only become an accomplished fact when, and if, the expense of production of the items entering into the cost of living were put on a lower level. The first move in this direction had to be made in commodities of general use throughout the country and the most important of these, because entering into the budgets of every family in every state, are farm products, coal and the freight rates on these as well as on practically every other thing eaten or worn by the hundred and ten millions of our people. By cutting the cost of these articles, the cost of living must inevitably be lowered. The farmers of the country, who have been forced by general business conditions to sell two bushels of wheat for what they received for one two years ago will not be likely to sympathize with the railroad who are asked to accept a cut of only 10 or 15 per cent. in wages, which will still leave their earning power 40 to 50 per cent. above those of December, 1917. Nor will the farmers who must part with their corn-fed hogs at one-half their Armistice Day price, nor the cotton growers who are marketing this staple at a similar reduction in price, see the equity in the retention by coal miners and railroad laborers of the wages prevailing in war times.

What the country has been demanding for the last two years is a re-arrangement of the basic items entering into production costs, so as to assure a scaling down in the prices of everything of use to mankind generally. Freight rates on farm products were reduced 16 1/2 per cent. on January 1 last. Freight rates on all other merchandise will be cut 10 per cent. July 1 next. Investors in railroad securities are to receive 5 3/4 per cent. return on the valuation of the properties instead of 6 per cent.

The cumulative effect of these and other similar re-adjustments requisite to a resumption of business on a scale to provide every worker in the country with plenty of work at a rate of pay to insure him the American standard of living has been to start the wheels of commerce going and to increase their momentum with every revolution, although the orders are not yet effective. Refusing to accept the small wage reductions now applicable to two classes of railroad workers, if it ends in the tying up of the transportation systems of the country, will put a brake on industry which will retard the return to more normal conditions so greatly desired and so necessary to everyone in the country.

Mr. Davies Explains Why the Astor Estate Sells Its Holdings

WHY has the William Waldorf Astor Estate decided to dispose of another one of its holdings of real estate in this city is a question frequently asked, in view of the announcement that 1669 lots in the Bronx are to be sold at auction on June 14-17, inclusive, by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies. These lots are on 172d, 174th, 175th, 177th streets, East Tremont and Westchester avenues and several adjacent streets. The sale is to be held in the Hotel Astor. The property has been owned by the Astor family for many years. Mr. Davies believes this inquiry as to the reasons why this holding shall be sold is logical and pertinent. He declares there is a logical answer, although the Astors have heretofore refused many offers for the land made by investors, speculators, and home-seekers.

"The reason for the sale," said Mr. Davies, "is the combination of high taxes in England and the difference in the rate of exchange. The extraordinarily heavy war taxes in England have forced many British land owners to dispose of their estates to meet the national levy.

"Naturally, Englishmen who own land in America and who must pay heavy British taxes want, as business men, to sell their holdings in the United States. By realizing in American currency, which is worth a great deal more in England, they can meet their pressing obligations to the best advantage. Therefore, the difference in the rate of exchange, plus the heavy war taxes, much greater than those in this country, have forced the Astors into the market.

"With nine arteries of transit touching the property, it is looked upon as the very cream of the big vacant Bronx tracts. The conditions under which the tract is to be sold are sure to bring about attractive prices for the buyers.

"The properties are not protected in any way. We are to sell without reserve and get what we can for the lots."

The trustees of the William Astor Estate, the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, have ordered the sale.

Chairman McAneny Promises Removal of 42nd Street Spur

CONCLUDING a drive for a largely increased membership that has been under way for two weeks, the Forty-second Street Property Owners and Merchants' Association on Tuesday held a luncheon at the Biltmore that was largely attended. Inasmuch as it is interested in all transit improvements that will benefit Forty-second street and its neighborhood the Association invited as its principal speaker at the luncheon George McAneny, Chairman of the Transit Commission. A. E. Thorne presided.

The Association has been opposed to the proposed moving platform across Forty-second street. Mr. McAneny championed it and showed the advantages it would give to the thoroughfare. He also promised speedier action toward the removal of the old elevated railroad spur on East Forty-second street.

Continuing, Mr. McAneny said: "It seems to us that there is an advantage in carrying the people just as they come instead of carrying them by the trainload to be dumped out at one time. The Commission sees avoidance of congestion by the creation of a method to carry more people than are carried today. Transfers to the moving platform should be free in the sense that there should be transfers to every transportation line touching Forty-second street.

"If the moving platform is rebuilt, the shuttle service would be retained, certainly until the platform demonstrated its usefulness. This would offer a choice to persons traveling across Forty-second street. Those in a hurry or those whose athletic ability was up to the mark would undoubtedly prefer the platform.

"There would be three platforms, moving at the respective rates of three, six and nine miles an hour, with seats on the nine-mile an hour platform. If the shuttle is continued there should be no objection on the ground that some persons might find it difficult to use the platform.

"The prime objection to the platform is that it would interfere with vault privileges. It is true the vaults would have to go, but there would be created what would amount to a new street with show windows and a footpath to each window.

"It would be a new underground street with swift carriage on each side, which would permit the removal of the surface cars. If there is objection to that on the ground that some of the cars run north, that can be met by transfers to the surface cars.

"Objection to the difficulty of removing the surface cars and in providing transfers is met by the unified system plan of the Commission, which we think is getting along very well and which would permit the scrapping some parts of existing lines. I need not tell you what the effect would be on Forty-second street if it were as free from surface cars as Fifth avenue.

"We shall certainly move for the removal of that spur. It is ugly, unsightly and long past its usefulness, and there is no reason on earth for permitting it to remain. It stands as a demonstration of a waste."

New Bids on Court House $1,817,161 Less Than Two Years Ago

BIDS for work on the new Court House were opened last week by the Board of Estimate and they will be considered by the Committee of the Whole of the Board. The lowest bids for all the work of a granite superstructure were those of J. T. Brady & Co., the Harrison Granite Company, Inc.; the Fordham Cornice Works, Inc., and Milton, Schnaier & Co., Inc., totaling $4,029,629. The lowest bid on the same work two years ago was $5,846,790, a reduction of $1,817,161.

The superstructure of granite upon a granite base will cost $459,243 more than a limestone superstructure on a granite base. George A. Fuller & Co. bid $4,224,000 for a granite construction, and for a limestone superstructure with a granite foundation, $3,570,386. For an all-granite construction Thomas Dwyer & Son bid $4,280,000. The best combination bid was that of J. T. Brady & Co., which was as follows: Structural steel frame, $898,840; concrete flooring, fireproofing, &c.

The bid of Henry Hanlein & Son combined with the lowest bid of $298,542 for a granite base made his total $1,725,918 as against the bid two years ago of $2,372,000 for the same work, or a reduction of $646,000. This firm's bid of $1,427,376 for a limestone superstructure was not the lowest, but that of Edwin Shuttleworth and James Gillies, whose bid was $1,163,000.

The Fordham Cornice Works, Inc., was the lowest bidder on the construction of the roof. Two years ago the lowest bidder was the Herman & Grace Company at $218,300. The lowest bid for the rough plumbing work was that of the Milton Schnaier Construction Company of $82,786. The lowest bid two years ago for the same work was $142,522.

The Bethlehem Steel Bridge Corporation, which two years ago was the lowest bidder, at $1,280,000, for the steel construction, submitted a letter to the board in which is offered to reduce its bill to $850,000.

Tax Burdens and Relief Discussed at Mayors' Conference

Governor Miller and Senator Davenport Prominent Speakers, the Latter Suggesting the Slogan—"Equalize, Simplify and Reduce Taxes"

Poughkeepsie, June 7.

REAL ESTATE is practically the sole shock absorber against the blows of tax impact, declared Senator Frederick M. Davenport, Chairman of the Joint Legislative Investigating Committee on Taxation, before the State Conference of Mayors here today.

"Just now," he added, "real estate is in an especially exposed position. The high taxes on real estate bear too heavily on the income of the home owner as well as on the small business man and the rent payer. The real estate tax is a local tax mainly, and has increased greatly within the last decade as the result, partly of necessary improvements and betterments for the mass of people, partly as the result of higher prices of labor and commodities and partly through the mounting costs of local government as the result of wasteful systems and administration.

"It is vital to the welfare of the people of the State that this depressing tax burden upon real estate which is concealed in the rent payment and passed on to the tenant or which rests directly upon the small home owners and business man should be lessened."

Senator Davenport suggested that the slogan for the future in government within the State of New York should be:

"Equalize, simplify and reduce taxes."

Discussing taxation in its various phases, federal, state and local, Senator Davenport said:

"The heavy and unequal burden of taxation is becoming an issue of first importance in the state and in the country, and the only way to meet it is by intelligently confronting the issue in terms of things as they are, in fact and figure. The big burden is the federal burden and the burden of local government. State taxes amount to only about one-tenth of the whole. But the whole is heavy. The per capita weight of taxes, Federal, state and local, now is a little over one hundred dollars for every man, woman and child in the commonwealth of New York. About fifty per cent. of this is Federal tax; about forty per cent. is the local tax of villages, towns, counties and cities; and about ten per cent. is tax for purely state purposes. Counting five persons to the family, a tax burden that amounts in one form or another to five hundred dollars a family, is not a tax to be lightly regarded. If it is not already deadening in its effect upon economic welfare, it might very soon become so.

"The tax system of the State of New York just grew, like Topsy, and it is not half as well proportioned or good looking as Topsy turned out to be. Taken generally, it is a haphazard, hit-and-miss affair. Of recent years a real attempt has been made to broaden the shoulders for the burden and levy a tax according to ability to pay, upon the income of corporations as well as upon the income of individuals. Such classes of property as inheritances and motor vehicles, such transactions as stock transfers on Wall Street, have been brought under the tax yoke of government. But still great inequalities exist, much injustice, much evasion of a fair share of the burden, much costly and wasteful administration.

"The taxes on different forms of business in the state are not highly burdensome, but they are unequal. Under the present chaotic hodge-podge of tax imports, some kinds of corporate business pay proportionately far more than others. We should not allow any reasonable or unreasonable prejudice against any particular class of corporations to prevent us from dealing fairly with different forms of business as well as with different classes of individuals. For example, the unassailable figures of the engineering staff of the legislative committee upon taxation and retrenchment of which I am chairman, reveal disgraceful discrimination and scandalous inequality on the part of the state in dealing with the taxation of public utility corporations. It is true that this is mainly the result of unintelligent hodge-podge treatment rather than design. But it is a condition which ought to be rectified. The sins of public utility corporations, present or past, are no excuse for the state's unintelligent or unwitting injustice. Some kinds of business, both incorporated and unincorporated, ought to pay more; some less. Certain vast unincorporated business entities which prosper under the support and protection of the environment of a free and stable government, and which hitherto escaped taxation, should pay their fair share of the burden which the state finds it necessary to impose upon business.

"The local communities, the cities, the counties, the towns and the villages, should lose nothing of their present revenues as the result of important changes which it is only just to make in the state system of taxation. The distribution by the state of a reasonable proportion of its revenues back to the localities should continue, but careful economies should be worked out in the administration of local government in order that these apportioned state revenues may be used to the greatest advantage for the welfare of the people."

Governor Miller also discussed the question of taxation at tonight's session of the conference. His reference to this matter followed closely upon his remarks about the complexity of the municipal problem and the slow progress made in solving it.

Governor Miller said the problem was further complicated by the growth of human needs—social and economic—entirely out of proportion to the means of satisfying them. This, he said, led to necessary increases in the expenditure of local government and consequently in the tax burden. Real estate most bear the brunt of the burden. The state tax on real estate, however, was negligible.

"The state," the Governor remarked, "is only receiving $19,000,000, while last year the state put into the treasuries of localities to meet local governmental needs some $81,000,000, in addition to relieving the localities from many functions which formerly they had performed at considerable expense.

"It is my belief that the state should divide still further with localities the taxes that the state alone can receive, and, in addition, it must relieve localities of many more functions. Some years ago the state assumed the care of the insane. In the near future the state must in similar fashion assume the care of the feeble minded."

Governor Miller said that city charters really had not been charters of local government in this state, but a chaotic mass of legislation which had made it necessary for municipalities to go to Albany frequently for repeals or new legislative grants of power. He said he would express no opinion as to whether the constitutional home rule amendment, if adopted by the Leg-

Nearly Half a Million Commuters Every Business Day

Suburban Traffic on Trunk Railroads to New York City Exceeds Regular Fare Passenger Business by Two to One

COMMUTERS outnumber regular fare passengers entering and leaving the city on the trunk line railroads entering it from New York or approaching it through New Jersey, according to an investigation made by the Rapid Transit Commission for the purpose of deciding what is necessary in the handling of suburban traffic. The Flatbush Avenue Terminal handles more passengers than any other in this city or in the United States. The importance of the service to be rendered to those regularly doing business in the city who live in the commuting zone and those who travel from all parts of the country to shop, trade and find amusement here, or who have other reasons for visiting the metropolis, is shown in the figures compiled by the experts of the Commission, which show that the trunk line railroads carried a both-way passenger traffic of 220,847,049 in 1921. Of this number, 148,958,292 were commuting, zone, trip ticket or reduced fare passengers, while 71,808,757 were regular fare passengers.

Local passengers on the ferries entering New York, exclusive of interborough ferries, and also exclusive of railroad passengers, delivered to their destination in this manner, were 52,621,220, giving a grand total of traffic in and out of New York by railroads and ferries of 273,468,269 during 1921. The total increase in railroad traffic for the year was 978,333.

These figures do not include the passengers carried through the Hudson and Manhattan tubes, which in 1921 carried 94,559,352 passengers—59,221,354 to and from Hudson Terminal and 35,337,996 to and from uptown New York—an increase of 8,073,484 over 1920. These figures are not included for the reason that to do so would be to count many millions of passengers twice.

The Staten Island steam railroad traffic also is not included for similar reasons.

Baltimore & Ohio	330,000	551,880
Central of N. J.	18,136,928	16,718,099
D., L. & W.	21,553,040	21,594,743
Erie	31,248,990	30,026,406
Lehigh Valley	460,000	529,706
Long Island	59,133,876	60,386,698
New Haven	16,952,093	16,653,438
New York Central	28,717,270	28,434,974
Ontario & Western	634,132	619,658
Westchester & Boston	4,442,012	5,395,365
Pennsylvania	38,260,435	39,936,082
Totals	219,868,716	220,847,049

The Long Island Railroad's total of 60,386,698 was divided between several large stations within the city, but the Flatbush terminal cared for 32,898,995, the Pennsylvania station handling the next largest number. While the Flatbush Avenue Terminal is the largest on any one railroad, the Hudson Terminal, distributing passengers to several railroads on the New Jersey side, is used by more people than the Flatbush Avenue terminal.

Clinton W. Sweet Estate at Auction Today

OCCUPIED as private residence and grounds for thirty years by the late Clinton W. Sweet, founder of THE RECORD AND GUIDE, the tract comprising 275 city lots and the residence in the Dunwoodie section of Yonkers will be sold by the executors of the Sweet Estate at auction today on the premises, rain or shine. A large tent will cover those who attend. Situated in a picturesque part of Westchester county, this estate has long been considered a scenic beauty spot. From it there are sweeping views of the Palisades and adjacent country, while golf and country clubs are within walking distance.

As a country estate the property comprised more than 40 acres. The gradual improvements of the last five years along suburban residential lines close to the property has brought it practically into the residential part of Yonkers, with the result that it is more valuable for that purpose than for landed estate uses. Mr. Sweet loved the place and died there. When he established his country home in Dunwoodie there were other estates there beside his own. So swift has been suburban growth roundabout since his death, in 1917, that it strongly illustrates the pulling power of New York's suburban areas.

The tract is laid out in villa plots and there are 23 one-quarter and one-half acre plots and one 7-acre plot. Streets have been laid out and there are numerous homes adjacent that cost from $5,000 to $15,000 each. A few have been built on a part of the tract. The sale is absolute, so that one can buy at the highest bid.

Transit facilities serve the property. Passing it is the trolley road between Yonkers and Mount Vernon. The Jerome-avenue trolley line is only two blocks distant and it connects with the subway at Woodlawn station. The Dunwoodie station of the Putnam Division of the New York Central is two blocks from the tract. Fee values throughout the region are steadily increasing as a result of steady demand.

Yonkers is a well managed city. It has one of the best school systems in the state, it owns its water system and has well paid and efficient police and fire departments. The city has all kinds of trolley, railroad and boat connections. It is a port of entry of New York harbor and a terminus of the new barge canal system. The reports of the State Health Department show it to be the healthiest city in the state. There are six banks, six hospitals, 76 churches and six libraries. All that goes to the making of a fine home community is at hand for use by purchasers of lots at this sale.

The purchase terms are ten per cent. of the purchase money and the auctioneer's fee at the time and place of sale. Sixty per cent. of the purchase price may remain on bond and mortgage for from one to three years at 5 1/2 per cent. per annum. Seventy per cent. of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for a similar period at 6 per cent. per annum. The balance of the purchase money to be paid in 30 days on delivery of the deed. Five per cent. discount for all cash in 30 days.

"But, regardless of constitutional provisos," he added, "there is one way of securing home rule for cities. First, whether there be a constitutional amendment or not, the Legislature must give cities a grant of power. Second, having given this, the Legislature must keep its hands off and local authorities must exercise in a reasonable way their new powers. That's the only way I know of that will secure home rule—practicing it as well as preaching it."

Governor Miller defined the powers the state must continue to exercise, regardless of extended home rule powers for the municipalities.

"One of these powers," said the Governor, "is the regulation of public utilities. This is a state concern. It must be a state concern because it involves the exercise of the police power of the state which the Legislature hasn't the power to surrender if it would. It may delegate power to some agency of the state, whether of the municipality or not."

Work in Progress on World's Tallest Hotel for Bachelors

S. W. Straus & Co. Underwrote $4,000,000 Bond Issue for Thirty-Story Hotel Shelton on Lexington Avenue, Forty-Eighth to Forty-Ninth Streets

RAPID progress is being made in the construction of the large bachelor apartment hotel which will occupy a large plot on the east side of Lexington avenue, between Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth streets. This operation, which will be known as the Hotel Shelton, will be thirty stories in height, with basement and sub-basement. The plans and specifications were prepared by Arthur Loomis Harmon, H. G. Balcom is the structural engineer and R. D. Kimball is the electrical engineer. The project represents an outlay of approximately $5,000,000 including land and building.

The plot occupied by this structure is irregular, with dimensions of 160 x 145 x 40 x 100 feet, and contains approximately 23,000 square feet. The land being improved has a combined frontage of 160 feet 5 inches on Lexington avenue, which comprises the entire block front with the exception of 40 feet. The plot has a depth of 145 feet in Forty-ninth street.

The owner of the Hotel Shelton is the Shelton Holding Corporation, of which James T. Lee is the president and controlling stockholder. Mr. Lee is also the principal owner of the National Association and Berkely buildings. No general contract has been awarded for the construction of this building and the owner is placing separate contracts for the various sub-trades as the work proceeds.

The site of the new hotel for men had already been partly cleared and excavated by the International Sporting Club which, before it disbanded, planned to erect a large modern clubhouse. Further excavations have been made in order to provide for the sub-basement of the Hotel Shelton and foundation work is now about ready to start.

Necessary financing for this large operation was arranged through a first mortgage serial bond issue of $4,000,000 on the land and building which was recently underwritten by S. W. Straus & Co., investment bankers. It is anticipated that this structure, which will be the highest hotel building in New York City and the largest bachelor apartment hotel in the world, will be entirely completed and ready for occupancy by May 1, 1923.

The Hotel Shelton, which will be devoted exclusively to living apartments for men, will embody numerous features in plan and equipment. Every convenience and comfort for men will be provided and in many ways this project will be more like a perfectly appointed club than a hotel.

Among the special features planned will be included a large squash court on the roof where space has also been provided for a solarium and a large swimming pool with complete Turkish bath equipment. In accordance with the provisions of the Zoning Laws the building will have a setback at the height of the fourteenth floor and the roof at this level will be utilized as a garden restaurant. The building will contain bowling alleys, billiard room, several card rooms, library and lounge and in addition several private dining rooms.

The hotel will contain approximately 1,200 bedrooms and about 600 baths. Suites can be arranged according to the requirements of guests and all will be decorated and furnished in simple yet dignified style. The management plans to render a combination of hotel and club service which will make this project one of the city's most interesting and comfortable abodes.

Review of Real Estate Market for the Current Week

Large Properties in Strong Sections Led the Dealing, While All Kinds of Parcels Throughout Town Swelled the Total Volume

THE importance of the dealing in the real estate market and the volume of it this week shows that brokers and principals have not yet decided on their summer play spell. The activity for the time of the year was considerable and the character of it was diversified which shows keen public interest in real property. Leading the market were some sales of marked importance, among them the purchase by the Studebaker Corporation of the Winton Auto Company's building, at Broadway and 70th street, for a sum well over $1,250,000; the sale of Forrest Chambers apartment house at more than $2,000,000; the purchase of two business buildings at the southwest corner of Fifth avenue and 53d street from the Dreicer estate; the sale of a large automobile station at the northwest corner of Park avenue and 57th street, for about $1,000,000; the sale of the Lexington Avenue Opera House, built by Oscar Hammerstein, at a sum well over $500,000; a block front of land on Washington Heights to the Chelsea M. E. Church, as a site for a new edifice; several costly Lexington avenue corners for improvement with large and modern buildings; a number of costly private dwellings in choice neighborhoods; a square block in Long Island City, as the site for a huge storage and distributing building for a prominent chain grocer; numerous long and costly leases of well situated buildings in Manhattan at rentals aggregating more than $1,000,000 each and many running into the hundreds of thousands of dollars each. The University of Pennsylvania Club leased two fine dwellings near Fifth avenue for 21 years, for the purpose of merging them into a club house. A 21-year lease of a parcel on West 34th street, opposite Macy's, was negotiated.

Lexington avenue, this week, quite outdid its previous recent performances in real estate activity. It means that the avenue is in a state of structural transition that will make of it a greater thoroughfare than ever before. Frederick Brown, operator, bought a large corner in the thoroughfare for reimprovement. Harlem flats were in strong demand as were dwellings and all other kinds of property on the East side of the city generally.

On the West side of town the dealing was as heavy as elsewhere. Choice corners on Seventh, Eighth and Ninth avenues were both bought and leased for long terms. Many of the parcels will undergo extensive alterations. West End avenue contributed at least one good corner. Washington Heights dwellings as well as apartment houses were important features in a busy market. A lower Cortlandt street corner parcel was acquired. Upper West side dwellings sold well. The lower East side of the city was busy. In the old wholesale drygoods district, in Leonard street, a loft building was bought. All of the East side avenues throughout their length were especially active. It was the best warm weather week in a long time.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

THE total number of sales reported, but not recorded in Manhattan this week, was 124, as against 79 last week and 107 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th st was 38, as compared with 25 last week and 31 a year ago.

The number of sales north of 59th st was 86, as compared with 54 last week and 76 a year ago.

From the Bronx 41 sales at private contract were reported, as against 16 last week and 34 a year ago.

Statistical tables, including the number of recorded instruments, will be found on page 715.

Would Reduce Its Assessment

Justice Faber in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, signed an order on June 1 at the request of the Bush Terminal Company of Brooklyn, directing the City Tax Commission to show cause on June 22 why the assessment of $39,256,200 on the Terminal company's property in South Brooklyn should not be reduced by $12,992,400.

The company in the petition states that the true assessment of the property should be $26,263,800. One of the items of alleged overvaluation cited by the company was that of property between 43d and 51st sts, and from First av to the pier head, which was assessed at $12,855,000. This was alleged to be excessive by $2,865,000.

Noyes to Summer in Europe

Charles F. Noyes, his daughter Miss Lorna Noyes, his father and a friend of Miss Noyes' will sail for Europe on June 17, to be gone until August 1. The party will tour the continent.

Improvement Near Grand Central

What may be the forerunner of an important development or improvement of a large plot of unused land northwest of the Grand Central Terminal was the announcement of the formation of the 379 Madison Avenue Co. which is controlled by Webb & Knapp. This address affects the block on the west side of Madison av between 45th and 46th sts, and extending eastward to Vanderbilt av.

It was recently reported that overtures had been made to the New York Central Railroad to lease this site for a large hotel project. At one end of the block is the one time railroad Y. M. C. A. building.

Tenants Win on Appeal

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has affirmed an opinion of the Appellate Term favorable to more than one hundred tenants in two apartment houses of the Alabama Holding Corporation on Riverside Drive, between 141st and 142d sts. When rents were increased in the two buildings not long ago 104 of the 176 tenants refused to sign new leases. A Municipal Court test suit was decided in favor of the corporation.

On appeal the Appellate Term decided that the demands of the corporation were excessive, but a 35 per cent increase which the tenants were willing to pay was allowed.

The opinion of the Appellate Division, written by Justice Samuel Greenbaum, computed the buildings as worth $1,765,000 and the company entitled to a net return of $141,000. Expenses, including taxes, water rates and "an exaggerated sum for depreciation, amount to more, but the court estimated $145,000 for such charges. Rentals for the year ending September 30, 1920, was $197,863.07.

Butler Buys in Long Island City

James Butler, Inc., grocers, purchased as a site for a large warehouse, bakery, etc., the entire block, 200x600, bounded by Anable and Nott avs and Mount and School sts, Long Island City, from the Sawyer Biscuit Co., which owned the plot, 200x300, from School st to Mount st on Nott av, and from the Mount Anable Corporation of Rome, N. Y., which owned the other plot. The block just purchased has a direct railroad siding on the Degnon Terminal Railroad.

Plans are being prepared by William Higginson for the construction of a 5-story warehouse containing more than 1,500,000 square feet of space. All the various branches of the Butler, Inc., business, now scattered throughout the various boroughs, will be centralized in this structure. The land and buildings will represent an investment of about $2,000,000. Roman-Callman Co. was the broker.

Dreicer Estate Sells Corner

William A. White & Son sold for the Dreicer Realty Co. to an investor, 670 and 672 Fifth av, southwest corner of 53d st. The property is located opposite St. Thomas' Church, and consists of two 6-story business buildings of French Gothic style constructed by the late Michael Dreicer in 1913. They cover a plot 50.5x100, which was previously the site of the Gallatin residence and was sold by the Gallatins to Mr. Dreicer in 1913. The corner building is now occupied by Revillon Freres and No. 670 by The Core Hofstatter & Co., interior decorators.

The same brokers last week sold 605 Fifth av, across the street from this property, for Frederick Brunswick to the Phipps estate, for investment and negotiated a lease for the entire building for a long term to the Mirror Candy firm. Since March of this year William A. White & Sons have made sales and leases aggregating about $7,000,000 in the Fifth av and 42d st district.

Chelsea M. E. Church Again Buys

As a site for a church and community building, the Chelsea Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. Christian F. Reinsner pastor, bought from the J. Hood Wright estate the plot of more than ten city lots, comprising the block front on Broadway between 173d and 174th sts, a site containing approximately 26,000 square feet and valued at $250,000. The deal was arranged by Charles Griffith and Eugene Moses & Co., as brokers. A year ago the church trustees bought a site at the corner of Fort Washington av and 178th st for its new home, but this location was abandoned and the plot will be sold.

The new Chelsea Methodist Episcopal Church will be the only church on Broadway between 114th and 186th sts, except the Chapel of the Intercession at 155th st.

Sale in Penn Zone

The northeast corner of Eighth av and 33d st, a 4-story brick building with stores, 24.8x100, has been sold by Henry Young, Jr., as trustee, to George D. Zahm. The parcel, for which a recorded consideration of $125,000 was paid, is opposite the Pennsylvania Railroad station. The sale is recorded.

Takes Profit on Park Ave. Corner

Negotiations which began in November, 1920, have led to the purchase by an investor of the building and leasehold at the northwest corner of Park av and 57th st. The total consideration in the deal is said to have been in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. The seller was Harry Collins, head of the house of Collins, dressmakers, who bought the 5-story Indiana limestone building in 1919 from the White Automobile Co., which had put up the structure in 1916.

The builders of the structure had taken over the land on a 21-year lease with several renewals from the owners, Mary W. and Elaine C. White and Vanderbilt Webb. When Mr. Collins bought the property he also took over the unexpired lease and handed this on in turn to the investor, who has just bought the building. The latter, however, it is said, intends to exercise the option of purchase in the original lease. The land is divided into two separate ownerships. One involves 39 feet on 57th st and 80 feet on Park av, and is held by the White sisters. Mr. Webb's parcel measures 20x79 feet on Park av.

Harris, Vought & Co. were the brokers. They brought Mr. Collins and the investor together in 1920, but the former, who had bought the property as a home for his business, was reluctant to let it go. The investor kept raising his offer from time to time until Mr. Collins could no longer afford to reject the proposition. He is said to have made a profit of almost 100 per cent in the sale, and under the terms of the agreement will remain as a tenant. It is a significant fact in this connection that the option price for the property named in the lease was $315,000. Today the corner has a market value of close to $500,000.

Corner Apartments in a Trade

Nassott & Lanning sold for the Franwal Realty Corporation, Garnet Hall, a 6-story elevator apartment house with stores, at the northwest corner of Broadway and 141st st, on a plot 99.11x100. It returns a rental of $60,000 a year and was held at $375,000. John F. Cannavan, the buyer, gave in part payment the 5-story apartment house, 156 West 106th st, held at $60,000.

Interesting Fifth Avenue Transactions

William A. White & Sons sold for Frank A. Brunswick, president of Frederic's, Inc., jewelers, to the Henry Phipps Estate, Inc., the 6-story office and store building, 605 Fifth av. The property occupies a plot 25x100, and is on the block just to the south of the new site for the department store of Saks & Co., which is to occupy the block front on the east side of Fifth av, from 49th to 50th st.

As a sequel to the same deal the brokers leased the property for the Phipps estate to the Mirror Candy Co. for 21 years beginning October 1, after alterations have been made. The market value of the property is said to be about $500,000 and the aggregate rental is reported to be in the seven cipher realm. The sale is recorded.

Mr. Brunswick bought the property in 1919 from J. Frederick Kernochan.

Harris, Vought & Co. sold for Hiram R. Mallinson the 5-story stone dwelling, 1045 Fifth av, on a lot 22x100. The property was conveyed subject to a mortgage for $110,000. Mr. Mallinson purchased the property last August from Mrs. Vera L. S. Hopkins, whose husband practically rebuilt the house after its purchase by them in 1911.

$1,250,000 Broadway Deal

E. K. Van Winkle sold for the Winton Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, to the Studebaker Corporation of America, the building and lease at the northeast corner of Broadway and 70th st, covering a plot 112x101xirregular, containing 12,500 square feet.

The building was erected by the Winton Company in 1906 for their own use as a garage, service building and salesroom, and is a 4-story fireproof structure, designed by Charles A. Rich, architect, and erected by the Edward Corning Co., builders on land owned by Eugene Higgins, of Paris, France, under a lease for 21 years with renewals at an aggregate rental of $1,250,000.

The purchaser will occupy the entire building in addition to the building now occupied by them at Broadway and 54th st.

Brown Buys Opera House

The Lexington Opera House, built by the late Oscar Hammerstein at a cost of about $1,000,000, has been purchased by Frederick Brown, the operator. The property has a frontage of 50 feet on the east side of Lexington av between 50th and 51st sts, with a frontage of 220 feet on 51st st and an easterly line of about 100 feet. The southerly line measures 320 feet. It is one of the largest theaters in New York, having a seating capacity of 3,000, and is handsomely furnished.

In August, 1918, a syndicate made up of Mr. Edith Rockefeller McCormick and others interested in the Chicago Grand Opera Co. bought the property for the purpose of producing opera in this city. George Williams was the broker.

Cortlandt Street Corner Bought

Charles F. Noyes Co. sold to Norman S. Reisenfeld and Joseph F. A. O'Donnell, for all cash, 78-80 Cortlandt st, northwest corner of Washington st, a 5-story brick building, 51.9x55.2. The sellers were Henry P. Griffin, William L. Cartledge and David E. Grance, executive officers of the Marine Cooks and Stewards Association. The property was valued at $125,000; is assessed at $100,000.

As a part of the deal, Messrs. Reisenfeld and O'Donnell are to obtain possession of the entire building, so it can be offered for resale or occupancy. The Charles F. Noyes Co. was the broker which sold the property in 1920 for Donna del Drago to the sellers for $100,000, and subsequently the building was extensively improved.

Operator Takes Forrest Chambers

Forrest Chambers, a 12-story apartment house, and adjoining property, occupying the entire block front on the west side of Broadway between 113th and 114th sts, have been purchased by the Brensam Realty Corporation, Samuel Brenner president, from the Morewood Realty Holding Co. The apartment and the adjoining 5-story building cover a plot 201.10 feet on Broadway, 100 feet on 113th st and 125 feet on 114th st.

Forrest Chambers was built by George F. Johnson & Son and was regarded as the finest type of apartment house construction on the upper West Side. It was sold by the builders to the Morewood Co. The company later acquired the 5-story building adjoining at the southwest corner of 114th st to protect the light and air of the apartment property. The combined parcels were held at the time at $2,000,000.

Not long afterward the northwest corner of Broadway and 114th st was bought by the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church and the present handsome edifice was erected which further added to the advantages of light and air on the opposite corner. Forrest Chambers contains 76 suites of from 6 to 9 rooms each. There are 12 stores on the Broadway frontage. The site was purchased from the De Peyster and Eno estates.

Estate Sells West End Avenue Corner

Big Resale of Harlem Flats

Sharp & Co. resold for Louis Kramer to the Rapnow Realty Co. (M. Schachnow and F. & M. Rapaport), the eight 6-story walk-up apartment houses, 425 to 453 West 124th st, valued at $750,000. Six of the houses are on plots 42.2x100 and two 50x100, each structure being arranged for 24 families and laid out in suites of 3 to 6 rooms each. They return an annual rental of approximately $125,000. This is the first sale of the property since the sellers erected the houses 12 years ago. Sharp & Co. have been appointed agents of the houses.

Goodsell Heirs Sell Corner

The Mary Goodsell heirs sold the southwest corner of Amsterdam av and 76th st, a parcel that had been in the family for a number of years and was valued at about $225,000. It is known as 334 to 338 Amsterdam av and 200 to 206 West 76th st. It measures 75 feet on the avenue and 100 feet on the street, covered with 2-story brick garages, formerly stables. The Goodsell estate also owns the adjoining 75 foot garage on the street. This is not involved in the deal. Recently the heirs sold the homestead at 324 West 72d st with its abutting gardens at 319 and 321 West 71st st to Samuel Brenner.

Fifth Avenue Corner in a Deal

The United States Realty & Improvement Co. has taken over the 5-story stone dwelling, 989 Fifth av, south corner of 80th st, which is assessed by the city at $335,000. This is the unidentified dwelling that figured in the $4,250,000 deal reported on May 26, in which the United States Realty & Improvement Co. sold the 11-story mercantile building at the southwest corner of 23d st and Fourth av, and the former Adams-O'Neil Building, now known as the Partola Building, occupying the entire block front on the west side of Sixth av from 20th to 21st st, and took in exchange a number of improved and vacant properties throughout the greater city.

The purchaser of the Partola Building, a client of the law firm of Beardsley, Hemmens & Taylor, gave the Fifth av mansion in exchange. The house covers a plot 25.8x100, and is one of the best appointed homes in the section. The Charles F. Noyes Co., brokers in the $4,250,000 transaction, are negotiating for a resale of the Fifth av house.

Lynn Estate Sells Historic Parcel

Estate of the late Municipal Court Justice Wanhope Lynn sold 17 King st, adjoining the northwest corner of Congress st, Greenwich Village, a 2½-story and basement brick dwelling, on a lot 21.2x75. It was bought by Judge Lynn 32 years ago.

The premises are reputed to have been occupied by Aaron Burr, and by an odd chain of circumstances in 1825 the property was deeded to Alexander Hamilton, son of the Revolutionary statesman and Burr's antagonist.

Lexington Avenue Still Active

William A. Connell & Co. sold to a client for investment, the two buildings, 1101 and 1103, Lexington av, northeast corner of 77th st. No. 1101 is arranged for stores and apartments, and 1103 is a 3-story and basement stone dwelling which is to be altered into stores and apartments. The combined plot is 35x70.

The same brokers recently sold the property, 1109 Lexington av, a 3-story and basement stone dwelling, on a lot 16.8x70, which the new owner intends to alter into stores and apartments. It is the first sale of the property in 43 years.

Operators Buy Eighth Avenue Corner

Isaac Lowenfeld and William Prager purchased from a client of William C. Wolf, 2169 Eighth av, southwest corner of 117th st, a 5-story brick apartment house, 25.2x100, with 4 stores and housing 12 families. It has a rent roll of $9,000 and was held at $65,000. L. J. Greenberger and U. S. Tanco were the brokers.

Sells West Side Apartment House

The new 9-story and basement elevator apartment house, 246-250 West 75th st, has been sold by M. H. Rothchild to J. F. Benaim for investment. The structure, which contains suites of 3 to 5 rooms each, occupies a plot 60x102.2. It shows a gross annual rental of $85,000 and was held at $550,000. It was erected by Anthony Campagna and the present seller.

Big West Side Purchase

The newly formed Tellander Holding Corporation, composed of Meyer H. Auslander and Leon I. and Abraham Wachtel, purchased from the Tomkins, Condict and Penn estates 121-129 West 21st st, west of Sixth av, four 4½-story and one 3½-story business buildings, on a plot 96x98.9. The first and last named directors in the company have quarters in No. 127.

Brisbane Buys Again

Arthur Brisbane who has been turning his investment attention recently to Madison av, has purchased the 5-story semi-altered building at 516 on the west side of the avenue between 53d and 54th sts. The structure measures 20x95 and will be immediately altered by the buyer for business purposes. The sellers were Henry M. and Frank Brookfield. Pease & Elliman were the brokers. Mr. Brisbane owns the apartment house at 515 Madison av.

Russell House Not for Scientists

There has been a remarkable evolution of control in the former residence property of the late Judge Horace Russell at 47 Park av, southeast corner of 37th st.

Last December the property was placed on the market for disposal by the widow, Mrs. Josephine Hilton Russell. Fearing that it might fall into the hands of speculative builders and a tall apartment built, the Morgan and other families of Murray Hill interested in the preservation of the district for exclusive homes formed a syndicate and bought the property.

In May the 47 Park Avenue, Inc., as the syndicate styled itself, entered into a contract to sell the corner of the Cuidado Investing Co., Robert B. Bowler, president. The real estate profession will be interested to know that this contract was one of 20 pages, covering every possible phase to insure the reimprovement of the Russell property in a dignified manner. It was drawn by George N. Whittlesey, of the law firm of Osborn, Fleming & Whittlesey.

Subsequently, the purchasing syndicate, which bought the property through Cyrille Carreau, entered into an agreement of sale with a committee representing the Twelfth Church of Christ, Scientist, which was empowered to purchase the property for a church site.

According to Mr. Bowler a contract was entered into and a loan obtained for the church, but the board of trustees of the church failed to back up the action of the committee and Mr. Bowler added that in all probability the church would have a lawsuit on its hands as a result of this failure.

After the fiasco with the church trustees, Mr. Carreau, who acted as broker, turned about and became a principal on Saturday taking over as the head of a new syndicate of buyers, which includes Mr. Bowler and a prominent builder, the contract made originally by the 47 Park Avenue, Inc., with the Cuidado Investing Co.

Nothing definite has as yet been arranged, but there is a good prospect that an apartment house, 8 stories in height, will be built unless the church trustees reconsider their action and make a new contract of purchase.

The original contract prepared by Mr. Whittlesey does not preclude the erection of an apartment house on the Russell plot so long as it does not exceed 8 stories and a pent house and its exterior is dignified and in keeping with the residential character of Park av. Then again the corner may be resold.

Well-Known Operator to Move

Daniel H. Jackson, who has long been prominent as a real estate operator, will on June 15 remove his offices from 135 Broadway to the Strauss building, Fifth av and 46th st.

Stock Brokers Sell Building

The 6-sty and basement brick building at 42 and 44 New st, occupied for the last 3 years by E. D. Dier & Co., the stock brokers whose affairs are under investigation by District Attorney Banton, has been purchased by Frederick Brown, the operator. The deal was negotiated with Manfred W. Erich, trustee in bankruptcy for the Dier firm, through William A. White & Sons.

The property adjoins the home of the Wall Street Journal on the north and the building at 50 Broad st on the south. It is near both the New York and Consolidated Stock Exchanges.

E. D. Dier & Co. bought the building in 1919 and spent $150,000 in rebuilding and modernizing it. They have occupied the structure for their business since the alterations were completed. It covers a plot 49.9x53.

Freedman Buys Third Ave. Corner

Charles F. Noyes Co. sold to Daniel B. Freedman, in an all-cash transaction, for J. Allen Townsend and Edwin A. Townsend, 1881 Third av, southeast corner of 104th st, 22x70, a 4-sty apartment house with stores; also, 1927-29-31 Third av, three 4-sty stores and apartments between 106th and 107th sts, size approximately 75x100. This latest purchase is in close proximity to the large plot at the southeast corner of Third av and 106th st, 100x100, purchased by Mr. Freedman from the same brokers a few weeks ago. Possession of practically all the property is obtainable and Mr. Freedman offers the various units for resale with possession. With this latest purchase Mr. Freedman has bought through the Charles F. Noyes Co. 11 buildings within two blocks of Third av and 106th st within the last few months. The property is located close to the elevated station and at a point on Third av where retail store value is very great. The property has been held by the sellers at $125,000 and has been owned by them for more than 40 years, the Townsend estate having erected the buildings.

The Noyes Co-Operative Fund

The Charles F. Noyes Co. has made its 13th consecutive co-operative disbursement of profits and, as heretofore, every employee from the office boy to the manager participated. The business which is owned and under the active direction of Charles F. Noyes, the founder, will be continued along co-operative lines as heretofore. The number of office employees remains at 52, and over 600 are employed in the agency department to operate the various buildings under the control of the company.

Many additional properties have been placed with the company for management. This branch of the business has been largely developed since Frederick B. Lewis was made manager. On May 1, 1922, the gain in the agency department was .1744 per cent over the year before, and the gains in this department covering three-year periods were as follows: Percentage of gain May 1, 1922, over May 1, 1919, .5315 per cent; 1919 over 1916, gain .8846 per cent; gain May 1, 1916 over May 1, 1913, 3546 per cent. Since January 1 the company has developed a strong exchange department which is under the direction of Charles F. Noyes, Joseph D. Cronan and Thomas D. McBride. It was only about ten days ago that this department negotiated the $4,250,000 transaction involving 15 properties, and the change in ownership of the Mercantile Building at 23d st and Fourth av to William F. Kenny, the Partola Building on Sixth av, and the purchase by the U. S. Realty & Improvement Co. of 989 Fifth av.

The following executive committee has been appointed for the year 1922-1923: Charles F. Noyes, Frederick B. Lewis, William B. Falconer, Joseph D. Cronan, E. C. Benedict and Walter J. Cashel. The following Board of Control, which holds regular meetings has been appointed: Frederick B. Lewis, William B. Falconer, Walter J. Cashel, Joseph D. Cronan, Edwin C. Benedict, Francis W. Gridley, William J. O'Connor, Thomas D. McBride, Charles F. Heller, Albert B. Himmelman, Edward H.

Hesse, and Thomas Christie. All members of the Noyes Company organization are pleased with the business of the past year and the success of the company is attributed very largely to the esprit de corps among the members. The group insurance policy whereby all employees are insured by the company remains in vogue.

Lawyer Buys Fine Dwelling

Douglas Gibbons & Company sold for Mrs. R. Burnside Potter, 123 East 73d st, a 4-sty brick and stone American basement dwelling, on a lot 25.7½x102.2. This house has a colonial front and has been purchased by a prominent New York lawyer for his residence. It immediately adjoins the homes of George W. Wickersham and Charles Dana Gibson. In the same street is Alfred Jeretski and the new home of Mrs. Frederick B. Jennings. The house was held at $140,000.

Old Owner Sells to Investor

Harris Vought & Co. sold the 4-sty and basement stone store and business building, on a lot 20x75, at 734 Lexington av, for John Byrns to an investor, who will lease it for 21 years. Mr. Byrns occupied a portion of the building for his plumbing business for more than 25 years.

HEREAFTER

The Interest Rate on PRUDENCE-BONDS Will Be 5½% Because 6% Is No Longer Consistent With Safety

THE day of high interest rates, which was an aftermath of the War, has passed. Succeeding issues of railroad, industrial, utility and municipal bonds, all bear lower rates of interest, and even the latest issue of U. S. Treasury Certificates, the best barometer of all, is back to 3½%.

Obviously, the same condition now obtains in First-Mortgages. We are today faced with the alternative of readjusting our interest rate to changed conditions or maintaining it at the expense of safety.

In fact, it has for months past been increasingly difficult to secure First-Mortgages to yield 6% to Prudence Bondholders, without relaxing our extraordinary standards as to the stability and earning power of the properties concerned. Today it is no longer possible. 6% guaranteed is no longer safe. 5½% is. So on future issues it will be 5½%.

Special Notice to Prudence Bondholders

The change to 5½% does not affect Prudence-Bonds issued prior to June 6th, which will continue to pay the full 6% to maturity.

May Commitments Indicative of National Building Revival

Figures Tabulated by F. W. Dodge Company Show Gain of 50 Per Cent. in Active Construction as Compared with Total for Same Month Last Year

INCREASED construction activity throughout the United States resulted in another record-breaking total for building commitments in May. According to figures tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company all previous records were broken in April, and the May total was approximately 3 per cent. greater than that for the previous month. The May construction total for the twenty-seven northeastern states was $362,590,000, which was 50 per cent. greater than the figure for the corresponding month of last year.

The two record months of April and May have brought the volume of new construction, started from January 1 to June 1, up to $1,352,965,000, the highest recorded total for the first five months of any year since these statistics were first started. The year to date is 61 per cent. ahead of last year, and, according to the present momentum of the industry, the final percentage of increase is likely to be much greater.

The construction revival has now become general throughout the country. Very large increases in active building have been recorded in the central western states, which heretofore have lagged behind the East.

Contracts for residential building broke all previous records in May, amounting to $140,932,000, or 39 per cent. of the total for the month. During the first five months of this year the amount of residential construction started has been double that of the corresponding period of last year.

Other important items in the May total were: $63,817,000, or 10 per cent., for public works and public utilities; $57,515,000, or 16 per cent., for business projects of one type or another; $32,925,000, or 9 per cent., for educational buildings, and $23,893,000, or 7 per cent., for industrial plants. Contemplated new building and engineering operations reported during the month of May amounted to $519,414,000 in the twenty-seven northeastern states.

Contracts awarded during May in New York State and New Jersey, north of Trenton, amounted to $88,295,000. This is 13 per cent. under the April figure, which established a new high record for this particular district. The decline in commitments for the month was entirely in New York City, the remainder of the district showing a May total equal to that of the previous month. The May total, however, was 53 per cent. higher than that for May, 1921.

Construction work started from January 1 to June 1 in this territory has amounted to $405,803,000, which is greater than the amount for the corresponding period of any previous year of record, and more than double the total for the first five months of last year. Last month's total included $39,804,000, or 45 per cent., for residential buildings; $15,504,000, or 18 per cent., for business projects; $9,375,000, or 11 per cent., for social and recreational operations, and $7,420,000, or 8 per cent., for educational projects. The contemplated new construction reported in this territory during May amounted to $107,605,000.

Total construction contracts awarded in the five boroughs of New York City during May amounted to $51,639,300. This was an increase of 37 per cent. over the figure for May, 1921, although it represented a decline of 35 per cent. from the high figure established in April, 1922. For several months contract letting in New York City has been going ahead at such a rapid pace that a reaction has been expected. In the building revival New York has been practically a year in advance of the rest of the country.

During the first five months of this year the total of building commitments have amounted to $263,046,500 for the metropolis, nearly two and one-half times the amount for the corresponding five months of last year. Of this total $151,663,200, or 57 per cent., has been for residential buildings of one type or another.

May building commitments in New England amounted to $33,130,000, which is 76 per cent. above the total for May, 1921, although this territory shows a drop of about 25 per cent. from the April figure, which was a record for this district.

Construction placed under contract during the first five months of this year has amounted to $137,063,000 for the New England district, which is more than double the total for the corresponding period one year ago. Last month's total included $14,638,000, or 15 per cent., for business projects; $14,258,000, or 13 per cent., for public works and public utilities, and $14,125,000, or 12 per cent., for educational projects. Contemplated new work reported during May amounted to $44,925,000 in the New England territory.

May building contracts in the Middle Atlantic States (eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and the Carolinas) amounted to $54,652,000, an increase of 12 per cent. over the previous month and 25 per cent. over the total for May, 1921.

The total construction started in the first five months of this year has amounted to $199,471,000; a considerable increase this year over the corresponding period of last year. The May figures included the following items: $22,434,000, or 41 per cent., for residential buildings; $11,378,000, or 20 per cent., for public works and utilities; $8,247,000, or 15 per cent., for business projects, and $4,650,000, or 8 per cent., for industrial operations. Contemplated new construction in this territory for the past month amounted to $59,481,300.

Contracts placed during May in western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee amounted to $72,067,000, a 55 per cent. increase over May of last year. From January 1 to June 1 construction started in this district has amounted to $207,120,000, an increase of about 24 per cent. over the first five months of last year.

Last month's total included: $22,397,000, or 31 per cent., for residential buildings; $11,665,000, or 16 per cent., for public works and utilities, and $6,898,000, or 9 per cent., for educational projects of various types. Contemplated new construction reported in this district during May amounted to a total of $141,986,000.

Building contracts awarded during May in the Central West (comprising Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri and portions of eastern Kansas and Nebraska) amounted to $108,533,000, the largest monthly total since July, 1919. The increase over April was 15 per cent., and over May of last year, 42 per cent.

During the first five months of this year construction was started to the amount of $366,601,000, or 38 per cent. more than in the first five months of last year. Included in the May total were the following: $37,795,000, or 26 per cent., for residential construction; $25,462,000, or 25 per cent., for public works and utilities, and between 9 and 10 millions each for business, educational and industrial buildings. Contemplated construction reported in this district during the past month amounted to a total of $149,644,000.

May building commitments in Minnesota, the Dakotas and northern Michigan amounted to $10,913,000, the largest monthly total since April, 1920. The increase over April, 1922, was 37 per cent. and over May, 1921, about 45 per cent. During the first five months of this year construction has been started to the amount of $36,907,000, or 22 per cent. more than last year. Last month's figures include: $3,864,000, or 35 per cent., for residential operations; and $3,704,000, or 34 per cent., for public utilities.

Building Laborers Sign Wage Agreement With Employers

Contractors' Representatives and Independent Union Officials Fix Scale at $7 Per Day During Remainder of Current Year

INTEREST in the local building labor situation during the past week was centered in the agreement reached between the Building Trades Employers' Association and the Independent Bricklayers' Helpers and Building Laborers' Union of America, Inc. This agreement was the outcome of negotiations started some time ago but which were brought to a head by the action of the Building Trades' Council in suspending this union, which controls the labor of approximately 15,000 men, in an effort to force the union to violate its old agreement with the Building Trades Employers' Association.

Terms of the agreement provide for a continuation of the present wage scale of $7 per day for approximately 7,000 bricklayers' helpers and all other union conditions are also maintained. The agreement is to run until January 1, 1923 by which time it is hoped that all trades affiliated with the local construction industry will have adopted new agreements for the next year.

This agreement was signed in the offices of the Building Trades Employers' Association last Monday afternoon by members of the Board of Arbitration of the Mason Builders' Association and the business agents of the union but it does not become operative until it has been formally approved by the Board of Governors of the Employers' Association. This will not be possible until the next regular monthly meeting of the Board scheduled for June 20.

Signatories to the agreement were Messrs. Youngs, Conover, Woodruff, Whiting, Taylor and Lewis, representing the employers, and G. B. Dioguardi, general president of the union headed the list of labor representatives which included J. Postiglione, chairman of the Laborers' Council and the following business agents: Messrs. D'Ippolito, P. Dioguardi, Bonagure, Angelo, Billello, Abruzzio, Gardello, Otto, Nokelty, Panza, Stabile, Florio, Ciffone and Morselli.

The agreement between the mason builders and the laborers' union provided that only the working card of the independent union be recognized on the jobs. This union is not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor but in the past has been recognized by and had its delegates in the Building Trades' Council. It is the largest common laborers' union in the building trades, ranking in numerical strength with the International Hod Carriers' Union, which has a limited membership in New York City.

One of the most important facts in connection with the consummation of this agreement is that it denies the claim of the Building Trades' Council for a collective agreement for all crafts affiliated with the construction industry. It has been this claim that has for many months been the cause of the deadlock between the Council and the Employers' Association in their negotiations for a general revision of wage scales.

Immediately following the signing of the agreement last Monday, President Dioguardi of the independent union, announced that he would begin at once to enforce the wage scale on the jobs of the contractors who are not affiliated with the Employers' Association, as the union is pledged to equalize wages for laborers on all jobs in this city. Since the agreement was signed there has been practically no trouble on any important construction work and it is thought that the situation will gradually become settled without further difficulty.

In making this agreement with the Independent union the employers have followed out their avowed policy of negotiating separate agreements with the various trades rather than negotiate a collective agreement with the Building Trades' Council. The employers are unwilling to make terms with the council because this body has been repudiated by the American Federation of Labor and its charter revoked. For some time past representatives of the various trade groups comprising the Building Trades Employers' Association have been negotiating with their respective unions for a revision of wage scales and working agreements for the remainder of this year. Although no definite report is obtainable as yet of the results of these conferences there is a feeling current in the industry that the time is rapidly approaching when the union officials will recognize the wisdom of consummating these separate agreements at the earliest possible moment rather than wait for the employers to sanction a collective contract with the Council which is now without standing in the recognized national organization.

During the past week there have been persistent rumors to the effect that negotiations are now under way for similar agreements between the employers and the unions of concrete laborers and plasterers' helpers. These laborers are also affiliated with the independent union and it is anticipated that they will also secure the retention of the prevailing wage scales and working conditions, at least for the remainder of the current year. All of these agreements will recognize the independent union exclusively and may react against the international union which still remains affiliated with the Council.

C. G. Norman, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Building Trades Employers' Association, in discussing this situation, said that the employers were not inclined to believe that the Building Trades' Council would attempt to call strikes against the builders employing the independent laborers.

"We are not alarmed," said Mr. Norman, "the skilled workers will not strike because of matters affecting the unskilled laborers. That has been our experience in the past. I don't believe that any attempt will be made to call out other men working on the jobs with members of the independent union."

"The building employers will continue to hire independent laborers. The men of this union have kept their agreement with our association year after year."

Manhattan Building Report Shows Decline in Plans Filed During May

THE report of Manhattan building operations during the month of May as compiled by Superintendent Charles Brady shows that the plans were filed for seventy new buildings, costing a total of $8,529,550, as against eighty-five, costing a total of $15,058,635, the same month last year, this showing a drop of fifteen in number of buildings and $6,529,085 in moneys involved.

The report further shows that plans were filed for one dwelling, costing $120,000, as against seven costing $783,000 for the same month last year; six tenements costing $1,495,000, as against thirteen costing $2,725,000 for the same month last year; one hotel costing $750,000, as against none last year; four other residence buildings, such as clubs and lodging houses, etc., costing $4,110,000, as against none for the same month last year; ten store and loft buildings costing $267,100, as against two costing $115,000, for the same month last year; three office buildings costing $240,000, as against six costing $9,280,000 for the same month last year; six manufacturing and workshops costing $394,000, as against six costing $1,105,000, as against three costing $325,000, for the same month last year; four municipal buildings costing $100,000, as against four costing $455,000 for the same month last year; twenty-six garages and stables costing $181,725, as against forty costing $342,935 for the same month last year; five other structures costing $2,725, as against four costing $17,700 for the same month last year. There were no plans filed for schoolhouses or hospitals last month or the corresponding month last year.

The report shows that alteration operations have fallen off slightly, there having been applications filed for changes to 396 buildings at a total cost of $2,527,712.

Local Building Industry Now At Height of Season's Rush

Totals of Contemplated Work and Actual Construction Commitments, as Tabulated by F. W. Dodge Company, Indicative of Busy Summer Ahead

DESPITE a considerable decline in residential construction during the past month the totals for building and engineering operations in Greater New York for May represent a tremendously active local situation, and indicate a continued demand for commercial and industrial space, which will require some time to satisfy. According to figures tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company architects and engineers in this city reported work on plans for 1,051 construction projects during the past month, which will require an outlay of approximately $51,820,100. During the same period the actual commitments for projects scheduled for locations within the boundaries of New York City numbered 540 and represent a total estimated cost of $51,639,300.

Although residential construction continues to lead the local industry in both volume and value of activity, the total for this type of operation represents a slightly lower percentage than it did in previous months. The demand for residential space, while still excellent, is not nearly as keen as it was several months ago, and speculative builders are going somewhat slower than they were about starting new projects in the face of a declining demand and a slight, though perceptible, softening of rental values.

Commercial and industrial building activity in New York City shows considerable activity, and the figures for these two groups for May are considerably higher in percentage than they have been during the two or three months previous.

In the group of new projects for which plans were started during the past month were 181 business buildings, such as stores, offices, lofts, commercial garages, etc., $11,036,500; 28 educational buildings, $2,837,000; 2 hospitals and institutions, $40,000; 28 factory and industrial projects, $2,105,400; 1 military structure, $175,000; 8 public buildings, $385,500; 53 public works and public utilities, $3,739,900; 18 religious and memorial operations, $829,500; 718 residential projects, including apartments, flats and tenements and one- and two-family dwellings, $30,055,300, and 14 social and recreational buildings, $616,000.

Among the 540 projects for which contracts were awarded during the past month were 104 mercantile operations of various types, $10,493,000; 14 educational buildings, $3,467,000; 8 hospitals and institutions, $1,900,000; 10 factory and industrial buildings, $1,181,200; 1 military structure, $12,000; 2 public buildings, $97,000; 23 public works and public utilities, $2,847,000; 14 religious and memorial operations, $532,000; 351 residential projects, including multi-family dwellings and one- and two-family houses, $23,367,300, and 13 social and recreational buildings, $7,742,000.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

LOCAL building conditions are greatly improved when compared with situations which existed only a few weeks ago and as a consequence architects, contractors and material manufacturers and dealers are more inclined to look toward the future with optimism. Considerable new construction has been released during the past week or ten days and some very interesting and important projects are included in the operations now under construction. Despite the upward trend of material prices a large amount of proposed building has been in the hands of contractors for estimates and the majority of material dealers and sub-contractors say they are well pleased with prevailing conditions and the outlook for the remainder of the 1922 building season.

Material markets are extremely active and although demand from speculative building sources has slowed down to a considerable extent there has been a decided improvement in the orders emanating from commercial, industrial and community operations which are now becoming a real factor in the local situation. Prices are all holding firmly and in several instances a well defined trend toward higher levels is manifest.

Common Brick—Common brick from the Hudson River yards is coming into this city in good volume and dealers are now able to keep all of their jobs going without delays on account of a lack of this important material. Although the demand for brick is still exceedingly keen and arriving cargoes are disposed of immediately upon their arrival the general tone of the market is more settled than it was a few weeks ago when a shortage almost amounting to a famine existed. Brick manufacturers now feel that their plants will be in a position to supply all reasonable requirements for the remainder of the season and possibly permit the storage of reserve stocks against the coming winter season. Prices are very firm and there is now no indication of a softening of values. Manufacturing costs this season are considerably higher than they were a year ago and this factor will not permit important reductions at this time.

Lumber—The lumber business continues to be stimulated by the steady expansion of the building revival and generally better industrial conditions. Manufacturing consumers have again become an important factor in the lumber demand and requirements from construction sources are steadily gaining in volume. Lumber orders are unusually heavy and the majority of mills are accepting orders for considerably more lumber than they are producing at the present time. According to the American Lumberman in the first twenty weeks of this year the orders exceeded production by about 13 per cent., while for the past week or so the orders have been about 26 per cent. above the output. Stocks in the hands of manufacturers have been materially reduced and a number of producers are out of the market for the time being. These producers are concentrating their efforts upon making shipments so that they may re-enter the market as soon as possible. Retail demand is excellent and shows signs of steady improvement. Suburban construction is now at the season's height and although prices are somewhat higher than they were there is no perceptible decline in the volume of business offered.

Builders' Hardware—Business in this line is extremely satisfactory and all current signs indicate a steady demand throughout the remainder of the season. Retailers' stocks are not in the best of condition owing to the intensity of the demand but shipments from manufacturers are fairly prompt, although the producers have been considerably pushed to keep abreast of the demand and their plants are operating on full time. The recent price advance seems to have stimulated buying to some degree.

Linseed Oil—Although no change has taken place in this market there is a likelihood of improvement in the demand in the near future. The large volume of building now nearing the final stages must create a demand for this commodity and there is a possibility that manufacturing consumers will shortly re-enter the market. Prices are easier than they were.

Nails—A fairly active demand prevails and the outlook is encouraging. The market is spotty, however, and dealers in certain districts are extremely busy while others in different locations are complaining of a lack of the keen demand which existed only a relatively short time ago. Prices are subject to considerable fluctuation according to the demand. New York quotations are as follows: $3.35 base, per keg for wire nails and $3.90 base, per keg for cut nails.

Roofing and Building Papers—Demand for these materials is steadily increasing due to the growing amount of suburban construction. The outlook for a strong demand throughout the remainder of the season is bright. Prices are firm and stocks are adequate for all requirements. Quotations generally are 79c per roll, in 35-lb. roll to $1.70 for 58-lb. rolls.

Electrical Supplies—Business in the electrical trade is quite brisk and both manufacturers and jobbers report a satisfactory outlook for the future. Orders are growing more frequent than formerly and are for larger quantities indicating purchases for stock rather than for immediate requirements. The improvement in the general building situation has reacted favorably on the electrical supply industry and numerous orders have been placed for future deliveries of wiring materials. Prices are uniformly firm and several slight advances have been reported recently.

Cast Iron Pipe—Manufacturers practically all report splendid business with orders flowing in and plants operating at nearly full capacity. Several of the larger manufacturers report bookings up to three months ahead and there is no let-up to the demand in sight. Municipal business is not particularly active but private buyers are in the market with unusually heavy requirements. Prices continue very firm but as yet no advances have been announced.

Structural Steel—During the past week or ten days bookings have dropped off to some extent but as a number of new projects have been released for estimates within this period there is every likelihood that some important commitments will be announced in the near future. Local contractors are generally of the opinion that there will be considerable work in their line throughout the remainder of the year. They are, however, considerably concerned about prices and state freely that the keen competition now prevailing on all proposed operations is keeping prices far below what they should be in order to show a reasonable profit margin. Prices are very firm and are showing a tendency toward advances.

Building Stone—The large amount of high class commercial construction, coupled with the fact that several very important operations, such as the New York Court House, will shortly be started, has materially brightened the outlook for excellent business in building stone during the coming months. Prices are now extremely favorable and further reductions are anticipated as soon as freight rates are revised.

Pioneer Uptown Office Building Abandons Private Plant

When furnished statistics proving that a saving of $7,000 yearly could be effected and that the space released by the removal of its private plant equipment could be offered to a tenant, the owners of the Johnson Building, 1166-1172 Broadway, one of the pioneer uptown office structures, contracted for Edison Service. The part of the building formerly housing the private plant is now occupied by a bank under a very advantageous rental schedule

The estimate of operating costs that led to the close-down of the Johnson private plant, and the conversion of the hydraulic elevators to electric operation was prepared by our Engineers. If you have not already consulted with them, telephone and we shall be glad to study your problem. Perhaps you too can effect a similar saving. You will not be obligated in any way

One of the Nation's Greatest Assets

Now that the cornerstone of the New York Federal Reserve Bank's new building has been laid with appropriate ceremonies and the superstructure is under way, it is to be hoped that the campaign of misrepresentation directed mainly against this branch of the Federal Reserve System—largely by self-constituted friends of the Western farmers and the cotton growers of the South—will cease. The diatribes of these agitators have been supercharged with false statements as to the cost of the New York bank's new building and the necessity for it, as well as the salaries paid its officials and the use made of its money.

The reason for these attacks is to be found in the desire of so-called "friends" of wheat and corn and cotton growers to bolster up the falling prices of their products by borrowing government money at a low rate of interest with which to carry them until prices return to war levels. Misconception of the purposes of and restrictions upon the operations of the Regional Federal Reserve Banks, and the system itself, led to the assertions that the officials of the New York bank were discriminating against the farmers by withholding from them the money they wanted and of favoring Wall Street with it. Naturally the next step was to fulminate against the misuse of "Government funds" for the purpose of constructing an extravagant bank building on "Wall Street," and the payment of excessive salaries to officials.

"Wall Street" may have much to account for, but it certainly was not responsible for the creation of the Federal Reserve Bank System, which, while provided for by Congressional action, is not capitalized with government funds. As pointed out by Senator Glass in his recent defense of the Federal Reserve System, the regional banks are owned and capitalized by the stockholding member banks in each of the twelve regions and, instead of being financed by the government, they pay into the National Treasury each year $60,000,000 in franchise fees. They cannot loan a dollar to John D. Rockefeller nor to any other person. The latest practical illustration of the effectiveness of the working of the system is in the condition of the money market throughout the country on June 15, when the Government paid out and took in $1,300,000,000 without disturbance of business, a thing impossible before the Federal Reserve System began its operations.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank naturally is the most important one in the system. The plan of its managers to assemble its various activities under one roof reflects their good judgment. The New York branch, once it is permanently housed in the fine new structure now being built on Nassau Street, between Liberty Street and Maiden Lane, will be equipped for even greater service to the entire country than is possible under present conditions, with various bureaus scattered in downtown buildings. The New York branch has a staff of 36 officers and 2,715 clerks, who handle a tremendous volume of business every year. Its operations for the year 1920, as shown in a recent report, were on a scale not easy of comprehension. Discounts and advances involved 180,462 items, aggregating $50,539,428,847; acceptances purchased for New York and other Federal Reserve Banks involved 106,237 items, aggregating $2,428,000,000; Federal Reserve notes and other paper money handled and counted involved 558,397,400 pieces, aggregating $2,291,785,688; checks collected numbered 87,036,424 items, aggregating $55,325,112,827. More than $17,000,000,000 was involved in transfers of funds by telegraph, and $48,840,900,000 of balances were settled through the gold settlement fund. During the year the New York branch handled in custody for the United States Treasury and member banks securities of the value of $100,759,404,785.

These statistics emphasize the necessity of an adequate home for such a super-institution as the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Instead of finding fault, it would come with much better grace for critics in other parts of the country to give thanks that the New York branch of the Federal system is so capably managed as to be able to erect at its own expense the splendid new structure now under way,—a structure which not only will be a fine architectural addition to New York's financial district but one which will add so greatly to the facilities of the metropolis for continued helpfulness to the rest of the United States.

Proposed Center of Art and Progress

The announcement of preliminary plans for the creation of a great municipal art center, where the best in music, the drama and other cultural arts will be fostered and developed, has raised high hopes among those New Yorkers whose interest lies in aesthetic progress. Even those who have not been so fortunate as to have had the advantages of extensive training in the arts recognize the potential value of the idea as outlined, and desire to witness its fruition for the pleasure and culture of many thousands in this city.

An enterprise such as described by those responsible for its inception must become of inestimable value to the community. The leading city of the United States now has altogether too few such temples to art and progress. New York sadly needs additional facilities for the development of a community appreciation for the best in literature, art and civics. The Metropolis, in relation to its population, has far less to be proud of in the way of art museums and other great centers of culture than many smaller cities and towns. True, we have here the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, a variety of schools and some of the most noteworthy structures in the country when considered from an architectural viewpoint. But the rapid growth of our population requires that we constantly provide additional facilities for learning and culture, so that all who desire may enjoy their privileges.

No question has been raised about the value of this imposing structure to the community. The building alone will be an inspiration if it follows the preliminary plans as outlined, to say nothing of the opportunities which are scheduled for its various uses. Architecturally it should and undoubtedly would become the masterpiece of the architect selected for its design. If constructed the building is destined to become one of the leading attractions of the Metropolis.

In recognizing the aesthetic value of the project, however, many of its proponents have not considered the severely practical side of the enterprise. There is already a sharp controversy over its location, whether or not it should be erected because of an unstabilized economic situation and some doubt as to how it should be operated and managed. These matters are all subject to close scrutiny and investigation by the proper authorities before the building is actually started. The structure should not be erected unless the public will assume part of the responsibility for its cost and maintenance as a monument to the community's civic pride. Where or when it will be constructed is something to be decided after the most thorough investigations have been made.

Just now the idea is the thing. It is good. Its consummation into something tangible will add to the greatness of the Metropolis and make life here more enjoyable and more profitable to all who take advantage of its facilities.

Loose Talk About Hudson Brick Situation Refuted

STATEMENTS to the effect that Hudson River brick manufacturers have restricted production in order to create a shortage and higher prices in the New York market are resented and refuted by the Common Brick Manufacturing Association of America. This organization, which has its headquarters in Cleveland, discusses in its June Bulletin the statements of the Lockwood Committee's chief counsel, Samuel Untermeyer, and declares:

"The true situation is that the brick manufacturers of the Hudson River are putting forth their utmost effort to get brick into the New York market to meet the demand. Untermeyer has been most successful in keeping the public well stirred up regarding the building situation. He has done more to discourage and retard building, in our humble opinion, than all the trusts and combinations in the country.

"The Common Brick Manufacturers' Association of America holds no brief for the manufacturers of the Hudson River particularly. Very few of them, in fact, are members or ever have been members of this association. A good many of the Hudson River manufacturers are of the old school; they are making brick by antiquated methods, and they are not quick to accept any new ideas for the promotion of their product and the extending of their market.

"However, we know these men and they are as honest as the men in any line of business in America. They are much more conscientious in their dealing with other men than some political investigators are in making sensational statements calculated to tear down the fortunes of honest men in order to build up their political prestige.

"New York could not stock brick while the Hudson River was closed with ice, nor do brick plants run in the winter in northern climates. Building operations took on an abnormal volume even before the river opened. There has been a shortage which no man or group of men was responsible for.

"Talk about importing brick is as foolish as some of the other statements coming out of the New York situation, when the facts are known. Brick is selling at a lower price in the principal markets in America today than in any of the English markets. The average price of common brick in England today is $15 a thousand. The price of brick delivered on the job in Chicago is $12 a thousand. To the price of brick delivered in New York City always must be added the exorbitant transportation charge which now exists, plus a dealer's profit, and local delivery charge. New York is one of the very few markets in America which buys its common brick through a dealer. In every other large city, almost without exception, the brick are produced within a short haul of the city and sold directly by the manufacturer.

"The situation in New York is a perfectly natural one. The same condition exists in many cities today. Philadelphia, which, almost since the founding of the city, has been a brick producing centre, is today experiencing a shortage in brick. The great plants of Chicago, capable of producing a billion brick a year, are approaching full capacity to meet the demands in that city."

New Art and Music Centre Will Cost Millions

Editor of THE RECORD AND GUIDE:

The scheme of Messrs. Berolzheimer & Haag for the establishment of a new musical and art centre is impracticable for many reasons, one of which is that New York cannot afford it, and the point should be brought home to the tax payers and every rent payer, for the rent payers are the ones who ultimately bear the tax burden.

The assessed value of the parts of the blocks between 57th Street and 59th Street and Seventh and Sixth Avenues which it is proposed to condemn, is $10,000,000 and of the blocks between 57th and 59th Streets and Seventh Avenue and Broadway (practically all of which is included in the scheme) is over $18,400,000. Assuming that the city would have to pay only the assessed values, the cost therefore would be $28,400,000.

The income to the city this year from taxes on the property is $781,000, and that is an income not to be given up without some study as to how it may be replaced. The income at 5 per cent. on the money the city would have to provide for buying the land, assuming it could be bought for the assessed value, is $1,420,000. This, with the lost taxes, shows a cost to the city of $2,201,000, per annum, and it is easy to understand that the city would be called upon for hundreds of thousands each year for upkeep.

A proper entrance for an opera house could not be arranged on 59th Street without the putting underground of the present surface car tracks, and that, even if possible, on account of the existing subway would be another enormous expense.

There has been in the past years much talk of the need of another avenue between Sixth and Fifth Avenues to relieve the serious congestion in these streets, but that has always been considered impossible of fulfillment on account of the great cost of acquiring the land. The area of land required for the Berolzheimer scheme is equivalent to that of a 60-foot street running from 26th Street to 59th Street, and such a street would be worth much more to the City of New York than the proposed Berolzheimer music and art centre.

In starting this letter I had intended to mention but one of the many objections to this Berolzheimer scheme, the extravagance of the thing; but the subject of congestion having come up I can't help calling attention to the further trouble which would result in ending Seventh Avenue at 57th Street.

I think that this whole uneconomic and impractical idea should be squelched, and I hope that you and the readers of THE RECORD AND GUIDE will take steps toward that end.

JOHN CONSTABLE MOORE.

New York, June 8, 1922.

IN Greater New York only one family in eight is owner of its home, according to a statement issued by the Real Estate Board. Pennsylvania has the highest percentage of home owners of any State in the Union. The population of this State in 1920 was 8,700,000. As the average family in the United States consists of 4 3/10 persons, this would mean that there were 2,200,000 families in the State of Pennsylvania. Of these 1,730,000 own their own homes.

Ohio ranks second in the list of home owning States. With a population of 5,800,000 or 1,370,000 families, 1,216,542 own their own homes. Of the 25,000,000 families in the United States 11,400,000 are home owners.

Astor Holdings in East Bronx Bring Good Prices at Auction

Messrs. Day and Davies Conduct Disposal Sale of 1,669 Lots on Order of Trustees of Estate of the Late Viscount

SITUATED in the heart of a rapidly developing section of the city, with adequate transportation facilities, it was a foregone conclusion that the disposal sale of 1,669 lots of the estate of the late Viscount William Waldorf Astor, begun last Wednesday, would be characterized with rapid bidding and that satisfactory prices would be secured for residential and business plots in this well located tract in the Bronx. The sale, conducted by J. Clarence Davies and Joseph P. Day, drew a large and representative crowd at the Astor Hotel where, in the ball room, the auction was held. There were many women in the crowd, which was composed principally of builders, operators, investors and individuals intent on picking up homesite bargains.

That the latter class were not disappointed in their expectations was shown as the sale advanced, for they proved to be the most active bidders and buyers at the sale.

The Astors have owned this land for many years and held on to it notwithstanding many flattering offers made for all or part of it. It is located in the eastern section of the borough adjacent to the East 180th Street subway station, Westchester and surrounding avenues and is now surrounded by modern five and six story apartment houses.

The tract, which has been cut up into 1,669 building lots, has been for years a serious barrier to the development of the section.

About twenty-five years ago William Waldorf Astor, great grandfather of John Jacob Astor, became a British subject and settled permanently in England, where he died. He was raised to the peerage as Baron Astor. Later he was made a Viscount.

At his death his estate faced large inheritance and income tax levies, in both the United States and England. Disposal of some of the larger holdings was decided on in view of this fact and the sale was ordered by the trustees.

The Astor lots, generally speaking, are bounded by East 172d and East 180th streets, and Westchester, Tremont, Morris Park, Morris and St. Lawrence avenues.

In the last three years the Astors have been disposing of their properties in New York city. The returns, which have been large, have been invested in tax exempt securities.

The first lot sold is at the southwest corner of Metcalf and 172d street. The first bid for that parcel, 25x100 feet, was $200. In rapid succession the bids were raised until it was knocked down for $2,000 to Frank Grass, a leather dealer. In less than three minutes the same buyer took the southeast corner of 172d street and Harrod avenue for $1,600 and the six intervening inside lots, each 25x100, for $1,200 each. The crowd cheered Mr. Grass during the breathing spell at the conclusion of this first transaction.

D. J. Convisser, who conducts a clothing store in Brooklyn, paid the highest price obtained for a single lot at the sale. He paid $12,500 for the northeast corner of Westchester and Morrison avenues, a parcel directly across from a subway station. For the adjoining property on Westchester Avenue over to Harrod Avenue he paid $47,900.

Felix Isman stirred up the bidders by taking the entire block between 172d and 174th streets, Croes and Noble avenues, sixty lots, for which he paid $650 each. When he told the auctioneer he wanted the block bidders were heard to remark that Isman had something interesting up his sleeve. Those who had shown an inclination to hold back jumped into the bidding, particularly for nearby lots.

Lewis Cohen was another of the early buyers. He bought a plot of eight lots on Morrison and Harrod avenues for $9,600 and two lots adjoining for $1,800.

A corner lot at Morrison Avenue and 172d Street was purchased by H. Abend for $1,625, who gave $1,150 for an abutting inside lot.

F. N. Peroff bought a block of eight lots on Metcalf Avenue through to Harrod Avenue for $12,300, and later added the Metcalf Avenue corner at $2,425 and the Harrod Avenue corner at $2,225 to his purchases.

Among the buyers were two Philadelphia operators, Thomas Morch and Edward M. Solomon, who purchased 120 lots on Morris Park and East Tremont avenues for $150,000, or an average of $800 a lot. Ten lots on Westchester, St. Lawrence and Beach avenues, near the St. Lawrence avenue station of the Pelham Bay Parkway branch of the subway, were sold to Philip Goldberg for $55,000, or an average of $5,500 a lot.

The first day's sale reached 678 lots, which brought $860,000. The prices obtained were considered conservative in view of the location of the property and the great possibilities of its immediate development. William B. Cadoza, vice-president of the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, one of the trustees of the estate, said that he believed that the public had fared well at the opening day of the sale as lots, especially those close to subway and local transit lines, were sold for less than their market value.

Buyers at this sale were advised by Messrs. Day and Davies, the auctioneers, to consider the remarkable development of the Bronx, which has been marvellous. In 1890 the population was 60,000; in 1895, 100,000; in 1900, 200,000; in 1910, 400,000; in 1920, 800,000, and today it is close to a million. It is practically doubling every ten years.

Its building growth has been greatly retarded from 1913, over the war period, and this part of the Bronx is really, today, ten years underbuilt, and property in this vicinity is ten years behind its actual value. This fact will soon be recognized and within the next two, three or five years this property should make up for the past fifteen years' stagnation, so that as a matter of fact it has now a tremendous speculative possibility, to say nothing of the building that will probably be commenced at once on the opening of a tract of this kind, surrounded as it is by a populated district and served by a number of transit lines with stations at the property.

The main thoroughfares through this district are Westchester Avenue, running northeast and southwest, on which the Subway runs, with two stations on the property; East 177th Street, running east and west; East Tremont Avenue, also running northeast and southwest; and Morris Park Avenue, running in the same direction.

All these thoroughfares are great business arteries at the present time and run through or past this property, and when the district is built up, they are destined to be great business thoroughfares as they are to the South and West where they run through a populous section. They are all fully improved streets.

Under the Zoning system, a large part of the property is restricted for dwelling purposes, other portions for business, while on still other streets the property is unrestricted.

Marble Hill Enters on Era of Interesting Development

Manhattan's Most Northerly Section Losing Its Suburban Character with the Erection of Apartments and Attached Dwellings Along Subway

LYING dormant for a long time, property on Marble Hill, northerly extremity of Manhattan, has undergone within the last few months a real estate movement that presages a building movement of considerable proportions later on. Some large plots have been bought for improvement with 6-story apartment houses. None of these buildings will contain stores except those on and east of Broadway. Broadway is the business thoroughfare of Marble Hill, while the level part of the Hill east of Broadway to Harlem River is given over primarily to industrial plants of various kinds.

Marble Hill is unique in one respect. It is the only part of Manhattan where the building of small private houses is going on. Some 3-story brick dwellings were recently completed on Van Corlear Place and on West 227th Street, so when one again hears the oft-repeated remark that medium-priced dwellings are a thing of the past in Manhattan he need but think of Marble Hill. This part of Manhattan is a real estate anomaly. Modern apartments there are renting at $18 to $20 a room a month, and with modern transit facilities close by. There is a rapid-transit station at 225 Street and Broadway, on the Hill. Modern brick private dwellings there are selling at $14,000 and slightly upward.

There is no business section west of Broadway. Before the Harlem Ship Canal was cut through and divided Marble Hill from the Dyckman section the Hill formed a bold northern promontory of Manhattan. Subsequently, and before Spuyten Duyvil Creek was filled in and eliminated, Marble Hill was an island surrounded by the creek, the Harlem River and the Ship Canal. Now it is a detached hill belonging to Manhattan. Many have an erroneous idea that it is part of the Bronx.

Because of the lay of the land many of the lots on Marble Hill are terraced and high above the grade of the streets. The streets are built like steps, some lower than others. All municipal improvements, including sewers, have been made in most of the thoroughfares. There are about 115 private dwellings, mainly in the center and along the western slope. The highest-priced residential lots are on Adrian Avenue, along the western slope, and commanding an unobstructed scenic view of Spuyten Duyvil and Riverdale. Nothing will ever obstruct this outlook. Lots here are worth $3,600 and upward, according to the particular location. Values on this avenue will take a strong upward trend if a contemplated bridge across the Harlem Ship Canal from the south end of it, on Marble Hill, to Seaman Avenue in the Dyckman section is built. The proposition is now before the Local Board of Washington Heights. That body favors the structure and eventually it will come before the Board of Estimate. If the bridge is built it will make a direct vehicular thoroughfare from the region north of Marble Hill to the northern end of Riverside Drive at Dyckman Street.

Marble Hill Avenue penetrates the crest of Marble Hill. From it is an unobstructed view of Isham Park and Spuyten Duyvil to the south, the western ridge of the Bronx to the east and Westchester to the north. Lots here are worth about $3,500 each. On the peak of the crest are Van Corlear Place and Fort Charles Place, which form a horseshoe and join Jacobus Place on the south and West 227th Street on the north. Marble Hill Avenue is more directly accessible to the rapid-transit station than any other residential street on the Hill. Apartment houses will be built there more quickly than elsewhere on this knob of Manhattan, in all likelihood. Just across the Harlem Ship Canal and on the northern extremity of the Dyckman section is the immense site for the new stadium of Columbia University which was given by George F. Baker. Many residents of Marble Hill can look straight down on the stadium.

Some duplex houses were recently built on Fort Charles Place opposite the site of the Revolutionary fort of that name, thus showing Marble Hill as the only part of Manhattan where two-family houses also abound. Lots on Van Corlear Place and on Fort Charles Place range in value from $3,200 to $3,400 each, as they do also on West 227th Street, which overlooks the territory north of Marble Hill. Lots on Jacobus Place are held at from $2,800 to $3,000 each. On Fort Charles Place is an apartment house known as Alexander Court, named in honor of the late Richard Alexander, pioneer developer of Marble Hill and who had much to do with laying out its street system. There is a viaduct and bridge across the Harlem River connecting 225th Street, Marble Hill, with Kingsbridge Road in the West Bronx.

The penetration of Marble Hill by the rapid transit system will show redounding benefit to fee values there as time goes on. It brought that section within the five-cent-fare zone, whereas previously the Putnam Division of the New York & Harlem Railroad served it. The railroad lost a number of commuters and Manhattan lost its suburban part to urban growth. Rapid transit has added to Marble Hill numerous apartment houses with stores, whereas previous thereto residents had few stores to serve them. Broadway, there, is built almost solid with 5-story apartment houses, with store on the ground floors. The estate of George F. Johnson owns some large vacant plots in that vicinity.

There are apartment houses on Terrace View Avenue and a 6-story apartment house with stores, covering a large plot at Marble Hill Avenue and 225th Street. Five-story-and-basement apartment houses cover the large plot at Marble Hill Avenue and 228th Street. The tendency is to improve with apartment houses large plots on streets on the eastern slope of the Hill. This section of Manhattan is covered by one block number on the city map. There is a post-office station on Broadway.

Broadway is restricted against public garages on the theory that such structures impair the trade character of a good shopping street. A large service station for automobiles is being built at the southeast corner of 230th and Exterior Streets, close to Broadway. There are four blocks of Broadway on Marble Hill. The level area below the northern end of the Hill and which formerly skirted Spuyten Duyvil Creek will be gradually utilized for garages and industrial plants of various kinds. It is more suitable for such uses than for anything else.

The largest single vacant tract on Marble Hill is in the level area bounded by Exterior Street, Broadway, 225th and 227th Streets. Owned by Frank Farrell, it comprises 260 lots. There are no definite plans for its use. It was originally bought as the site for the American League Baseball Park, but that was established elsewhere. Henry Morgenthau sixteen years ago bought the vacant plot, 125-100, at the northeast corner of Broadway and 225th Street, right at the rapid-transit station. The most recent sales of Broadway lots were at $6,000 each. The Morgenthau holding, being a corner parcel and right at the subway station, may be worth considerably more. Just now Mr. Morgenthau is watching Marble Hill grow.

Recently the estate of Emil Roth sold to the Fort Charles Development Company, J. H. Brundage, president, the vacant plot 42 Fort Charles Place, 53x65 irregular. Plans have been prepared to improve the site with duplex houses. A 6-story apartment house was recently built on the eastern slope of Marble Hill and overlooking Broadway. It is amid detached private dwellings. The likelihood is that all of the adjacent dwellings will eventually give way to apartment houses.

Marble Hill is so named because it abounds in soft marble. Previous to the filling in of Spuyten Duyvil creek the New York Central circled the Hill. Now it runs along its south side close to the Harlem Ship Canal. As fee values advance on Marble Hill many of the old frame detached dwellings there are destined to make way for more fireproof buildings. The section is bound to pull stronger than the Bronx from the fact that it is part of Manhattan.

Rapid Progress on Large Office Building for Attorneys

Handsome Structure, Adjoining Bar Association Headquarters, Designed by Severance & Van Alen Especially for Use of Legal Profession

BUILDINGS devoted to the uses of special professions, trades or arts, have invariably proven a great success from the standpoint of tenant and landlord alike. The Architects' Building, at 101 Park Avenue, is a notable example of the buildings specially designed to house a profession or craft and there are several other well-known structures which have been equally successful in obtaining tenants who are representative of their respective lines.

For several years past there has been considerable agitation amongst members of the New York Bar for a modern office building devoted to the special use of attorneys. This demand is being met by the construction of the Bar Building, which is being erected on property controlled by the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, adjacent to and connected with its present house. The Bar Association will occupy two floors in the new structure for the extension of its library and additional consultation rooms.

The site selected for this building is ideal in every respect. It is in the heart of the rapidly growing mid-town business section, close to the theatres and clubs and convenient to the section which is steadily becoming recognized as an up-town banking center. The building will extend through the block from 37 West Forty-third Street to 36 West Forty-fourth Street. A grand concourse serves as a pedestrian passage throughout its length. Forty-fourth Street is recognized as the most important and highly developed crosstown thoroughfare between Forty-second and Forty-seventh Streets.

Within a radius of two blocks is a station for every rapid transit line which serves every part of New York City and its suburbs, six surface lines, an elevated railway and various bus lines. The site of the structure is only a few minutes' distant from the Pennsylvania Station and less than two minutes' walk from the Grand Central Terminal. Its convenience to these railroad terminals offers an especial advantage to those living in the suburbs.

The building has been designed by Severance & Van Alen, architects, along classical lines to harmonize with the stately character of the Bar Association Building proper. The structure will be fourteen stories in height. There are 9,330 square feet on each floor. A marble entrance hall extends from street to street. The architects have made an exhaustive study of the requirements of the members of the Bar and, as a result, have designed a building at once practical and highly artistic in effect.

In addition to the superior features already suggested and of peculiar significance to attorneys, is the fact that the Bar Building offices will enjoy unobstructed light and air on all four sides. There is no lost space, no dark corner and no poor ventilation.

The Bar Building will be completed and ready for occupancy on October 1, 1922, and will be under the personal management

Severance & Van Alen, Architects.

Estate of Clinton W. Sweet Sold at Auction for $112,000

THE old homestead of the late Clinton W. Sweet, comprising forty acres of land in the Dunwoodie section of Yonkers, was sold at auction last Saturday, together with 23 quarter- and half-acre plots and 251 lots into which the estate had been subdivided. All the pieces were disposed of readily, the total amount received for the 275 parcels aggregating $112,000.

Interest centered in the large house which had been unoccupied since the death of Mr. Sweet. This was sold to Fred Harling, who paid $8,300 for the homestead including three lots, and $750 for an additional lot, making a total of $9,050. Other successful bidders were the J. Diehl Construction Company and Jacob Harris. Prices of single lots ranged from $150 to $750.

The property at the corner of Jerome and Yonkers Avenues was sold for $1,100. Lots overlooking the valley, four hundred feet from Jerome Avenue, were sold for $100. The whole of Block G sold for $16,375; Block F, fifty-one lots, brought $17,765, not including the little one, an average of $350 a lot; Block H, solid rock 12 feet high, brought the sum of $1,400; the rest of Block H was sold for $14,165, while Block E, consisting of 53 lots, was sold for $12,750.

Prices brought for the various parcels in this plot indicate a very good demand for building sites in the outskirts of the city and prove to builders that there will continue to be a strong demand for construction work for the rest of the season, which may be a record one.

Review of Real Estate Market for the Current Week

Large Apartment Houses, a Site for New Garment Centre Building and a Purchase by Macy Loomed Among Many Interesting Deals

THE week was one of varied and interesting dealing in large properties, both in selling and leasing. Distinguished among them was the sale of the 13-story and basement apartment hotel 12-14 East 60th Street to a prominent hotel owner, at a figure in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. Some fine dwellings near the fine residential part of Fifth Avenue were sold. That co-operative apartment houses are still popular was evidenced by the sale of a large one on Park Avenue. A group of five old buildings on West 30th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, were sold to a fur firm who will reimprove the site with a large building for the manufacture of fur garments. The aggregate cost of this job will be close to $1,000,000. Third Avenue and Lexington Avenue are still good contributors to the market's business. A tenant on the lower East side bought an 8-story building. R. H. Macy & Company added another parcel to the site of their new building now being built at the rear of their main structure. A lower

Sixth Avenue corner was sold to an investor who will occupy it.

Washington Heights was the most active part of the city in large apartment house dealing. Leading the dealing there were two 5-story multi-family buildings covering a plot 250x140, the price of which was about $700,000. There was strong buying in Harlem, among the purchases being a Madison Avenue corner parcel. The Bronx seemed to renew its activity of last winter in the sale of numerous large vacant plots for improvement, among them several block fronts. A business building near the Bronx County Court House also changed hands. Max Natanson added interest to a busy week by selling the 12-story loft building 117-119 East 24th Street, near Fourth Avenue.

Numerous good corner buildings throughout town were leased for long terms. Conspicuous among the largest leases was that of a store in the National City building on East 42d Street and running through to East 43d Street, to a prominent chain candy firm.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

THE total number of sales reported, but not recorded in Manhattan this week, was 75, as against 124 last week and 105 a year ago. The number of sales south of 59th st was 18, as compared with 38 last week and 34 a year ago.

The number of sales north of 59th st was 57, as compared with 86 last week and 71 a year ago.

From the Bronx 33 sales at private contract were reported, as against 41 last week and 30 a year ago.

Statistical tables, including the number of recorded instruments, will be found on page 754.

$700,000 Deal On the Heights

The 615 West 164th Street Corporation, which includes Abraham Bricken, I. Freidman, Theodore Klein and Leo Schloss, sold to the Stadler Realty Co. two 5-story apartment houses, which are being completed on the north side of 164th st, between Broadway and Fort Washington av. The buildings are 125x140 each, and accommodate 120 families. They show a rental of about $125,000 and were held at $700,000. The broker was Joseph Levin.

Big Co-operative Deal

A syndicate of co-operative owners purchased the 13-story apartment house at 876 Park av, southwest corner of 78th st, from Edgar A. Levy and Samuel A. Herzog. Among the buyers are Clifton H. Crane, president of the St. Joseph's Lead Co.; Nelson C. Holland, Guy W. Renyx, Irving H. Cornell, Louis Berizzi and Miss Martha A. McDowell, each of whom will own and reside in his own apartment. Several of them are already living in the house. The balance of the building will be rented. The property was held at $1,000,000. Pease & Elliman were the brokers and they have been appointed managing agents.

The property is arranged for two apartments on a floor. It was erected in 1917 and has been fully rented since it was opened. This is the sixth large East Side apartment house which has been sold to co-operative syndicates by Pease & Elliman in the last two years.

Macy Enlarges' New Site

R. H. Macy & Co. have added another 35th st parcel to their large holdings lying to the west of their store. The purchase affects the 4-story building on lot 18x61.8 at 164, which was acquired from Mary Keuhne. The property is separated by three 18-foot houses from the westerly end of the large plot extending through to 34th st, where R. H. Macy & Co. are building an addition of 19 stories above ground and two below, estimated to cost $5,000,000. The combined Macy buildings will front 200 feet on Broadway, 531 feet on 34th st, and 505 feet on 35th st, providing an aggregate floor space of 1,500,000 square feet. The sale is recorded.

Bell Estate Sells Harlem Parcels

Horace S. Ely & Co. sold for James W. Bell 2089 to 2097 Fifth av and 2 to 8 East 129th st, 75 feet on Fifth av and 150 feet on 129th st. On the east end of the plot is a 3-story and basement frame dwelling with a 1-story frame stable at the rear. No. 6 East 129th st is a 3-story and basement dwelling. The property was purchased by Mr. Bell's father in 1865 and it has remained in the family since. The purchaser was represented by Samuel Cowen.

Tenant Buys 8-Story Building

David Blank, a tenant in the 8-story store and loft building, 21x127x irregular, at 25 East 4th st, purchased the property from the Lebertan Corporation. The sale is recorded.

Operator Buys Newman's Studio

Another old Lexington av landmark, known as Newman's Studio, at 1029 and 1031, two 4-story buildings, 34x98.9, has been purchased by Gustavus L. Lawrence, the operator and builder, from Samuel Newman, who has owned them since 1912. Mr. Lawrence will reimprove the site with a 14-story apartment house. The sale is recorded.

Natanson Resells Big Parcel

Max N. Natanson resold through C. E. Deppeler to J. Christopher G. Hupfel Co., Inc., 117 to 119 East 24th st, a 12-story loft building, 46x98.9. The building is rented at more than $60,000 a year. It was held at $400,000, and the transaction was on an all cash basis.

Resells Madison Avenue Corner

Samuel Brenner resold to a client of L. S. Altmyer the southwest corner of Madison av and 85th st, containing an area of about 5,700 square feet. The immediate corner is vacant, a 3-story building occupying the adjoining lot on the street. The combined site has a frontage of 122 feet on the avenue and 95 feet on the street, with a westerly line of 102.2 feet. Mr. Brenner bought the property 3 weeks ago from Mrs. Julia E. Cameron, who acquired the corner in 1871 and the adjoining piece in 1899.

The site is opposite the old car barn block, plans for the improvement of which with a

Garment Zone Extending South

The five old buildings, 5, 6 and 7 stories, at 224-232 West 30th st, covering a plot 117x98.9, between Seventh and Eighth avs, has been sold by Harry B. Cutner, broker, for Oscar Mayer, to Joseph Ullmann, Inc., fur importers. The purchaser contemplates the erection of a fire-proof fur storage warehouse within the near future for its own occupancy, the entire operation involving over $800,000.

Resells Seven Tenement Houses

M. R. Stang resold for a client of Stanley S. Isaacs, attorney, the seven 5-story and basement brick tenement houses with stores, each on a lot 25x103.3 at 407-411 ad 417-423 East 14th st, part of a row of nine houses at that point purchased by the seller from the William Waldorf Astor estate a few months ago. They stand on lots each 25x100. The purchasers are: No. 407, I. Hillis; 409, P. Wolfhardt 411, I. Buscher; 417, A. Jarowitz; 419 and 421, estate of B. Arman, and 423, Mrs. P. Kalise.

Dowling Acquires Astor Court

Title passed last Saturday to the block on Broadway from 89th to 90th sts and Broadway to Amsterdam av, on which the Astor Court apartment stands. This property, which has been held by the Astor family for more than 60 years, now becomes the property of the Wall and Nassau Streets Corporation, Robert E. Dowling, president. The sale was negotiated in the early part of April by Spear & Co. at a price of $3,000,000.

A mortgage of $2,500,000 has been taken on the property by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. for a long term of years.

Buys a Lower Sixth Avenue Corner

Crisis in Brick Supply for Metropolis Has Been Averted

Exhaustive Survey of Hudson Valley Plants Shows Manufacturers Are Producing at Record Rate with Danger of Shortage Now Passed

ARCHITECTS, contractors, prospective builders and others who have feared that the recent scarcity of common brick would continue indefinitely and result in delaying construction in the Metropolitan district—if not altogether preventing hundreds of projects from starting—would feel entirely assured if they could witness the present activity in the brick-making plants located in the Hudson River Valley. Several weeks ago when the shortage was most acute, the manufacturers assured the building industry, through the dealers in masons' materials, that they were exerting every effort to relieve the tension in the brick situation by operating their plants to the full capacity of machines, labor and fuel. The threatened famine was checked and practically all active jobs were kept moving on a day-to-day supply. There is now every reason to believe that common brick from the river plants will be available for all reasonable demands during the remainder of the current building season and that a reserve supply will be created to take care of winter work and allow for the requirements of the early spring of 1923.

In order that the building industry of the Metropolitan District might know the real truth of the common brick situation and to test recent assertions that brick manufacturers were deliberately holding back their product in order to maintain the prevailing high level of prices in the wholesale market, THE RECORD AND GUIDE has made an exhaustive investigation of the manufacturing situation. Prominent manufacturers were visited at their plants and a study made of the problems of manufacturing which have been directly responsible for the recent shortage, the reasons for the prevailing high price levels, the outlook for supplies during the remainder of this season, and the probable trend of common brick prices.

Of paramount importance to the industry, the investigation shows conclusively that the varied claims of the producers' responsibility for the current brick shortage through deliberately withholding shipments from the market so as to maintain high price levels were utterly groundless. From Haverstraw to Coeymans, the region in which the brick for the metropolis is made, is alive with activity, with all manufacturers operating their machines to the capacity of their drying yards and making all haste to get brick moulded, burned and shipped in an earnest effort to relieve the stringency in this city and its environs. Right now there is greater activity in these yards than there has been at any similar period of the season for several years past. The rate of production at present compares favorably with that of the pre-war boom years in the building industry—those seasons in which the producers established their high records for output.

It is unlikely that the total output of the Hudson River yards during 1922 will equal the previous maximum figures, as today there are only about one-half as many yards as were in operation then. But, according to the prevailing rate of progress, the total output for this season will be from 25 to 50 per cent. greater than it was last year, which will assure adequate supplies of brick for all active work as well as all projected operations. Furthermore, there is every indication that there will be sufficient brick made to provide a reserve supply for the coming winter and early spring of 1923.

The major portion of the Hudson River brick industry is located in three well-defined districts. More than a dozen plants are located on Haverstraw Bay, the district closest to New York City. Next comes the Newburgh Bay district, which includes the yards located at New Windsor and Roseton, on the west bank, and Beacon and Dutchess Junction, on the east. The third of the districts centers around Kingston. These districts are linked up by scattered plants on both sides of the Hudson from Montrose to Coeymans. From one to three plants are located at Catskill, Hudson, Stockport, Athens, Glasco, etc., which makes the industry extend in an almost unbroken line along the Hudson River for a distance of more than seventy-five miles.

Less than fifteen years ago there were 127 brick plants located on the Hudson which contributed their product to the upbuilding of modern New York and its suburbs. Antiquated production methods, decreasing demand in the face of increasing manufacturing costs, and other factors have reduced their present number to sixty-two, less than fifty per cent. These plants are being called upon to supply the most important of the basic building materials for the construction boom now in progress.

There is little doubt of their ability to accomplish this, however, as the surviving plants are today uniformly better equipped and managed than the average during the most active seasons of a decade or so ago, and because the majority of the existing plants have materially increased their capacity. The estimated total production in the Hudson River Valley this year will be somewhere near one billion bricks, almost equal to record years when the season's output was roughly 1,200,000,000.

Generalities are interesting at times but they cannot be depended upon to give clear picture of an actual condition. In order that local building interests might know more definitely what to expect in the way of a future supply of common brick a number of the most prominent manufacturers on the Hudson River were interviewed by a representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE and the facts and figures about their current season's production indicate that the construction fraternity has little need for continued anxiety as to an adequate supply of common brick.

In the Haverstraw district manufacturers are all operating at a higher production rate than a year ago. The plant of the Malley Brick Company is working six machines and will in all probability turn out approximately 15,000,000 bricks this season. The maximum possible output for this yard is about 18,000,000 bricks, but this figure has never quite been reached. At the yard of the DeNoyelles Brick Company, which is equipped with eleven machines, from seven to nine are in operation every day. This plant has never made more than about 20,000,000 bricks in any season and this year the output will be somewhere near that figure. The owners are taking clay out of their banks for a season's output of 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 brick, but whether this total is reached will be largely dependent upon the fuel supply and the efficiency of the yard labor. At any rate the owners anticipate they will finish this season with the largest output they have had during any of the past seven years.

The Fowler plant, with seven machines and a maximum capacity of 15,000,000 brick, is operating five machines and expect to turn out about 12,000,000 this season. The plant of the Excelsior Brick Company has seven machines and is running five, which will give an output of about 12,000,000, or seventy-five per cent. of its maximum. The yard of E. N. Renn will turn out about 10,000,000 brick this season with four machines operating. This plant is equipped with six machines and could possibly do more if pushed. In discussing the brick making situation Mr. Renn stated that in his estimation the Haverstraw district would finish the current season with a total output approximately fifty per cent. above the average for the post-war years.

Morrissey & Company expect to make about 12,000,000 brick this year, which will be equal to the best record this yard has ever made, and the plants of George Archer which combined are operating five machines, will manufacture close to the record output of former years. Reports from the Washburn, Shankey and other yards in this district all indicate that the 1922 season will show a production of approximately 80 per cent. of capacity or better, which is far higher than has been done during the past four or five years.

Conditions in the Newburgh Bay District are very similar to those prevailing at Haverstraw. At New Windsor, just south of Newburgh, the plant of Lahey & Geigenheimer, equipped with four machines, is operating three on full time and anticipates a total production this year of between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 of brick. This yard has a maximum capacity of 12,000,000 per year, but this total has never been reached, according to its superintendent. The largest plant in the Newburgh Bay District is that controlled by the Roseton Brick Corporation, of which C. C. Bourne is president. This plant is equipped with twenty-four machines and fifteen are in operation at present. The yard is now moulding on an average of 360,000 bricks per day, and will in all probability make approximately 40,000,000 this season, as compared with a total of 20,000,000 last year. Mr. Bourne was very confident that the Hudson River brick manufacturers would produce this commodity in sufficient volume to supply all demands and provide a surplus to tide over the non-manufacturing season.

"There are very decided reservations to this statement, however," said Mr. Bourne, "as at present we manufacturers cannot foretell what our fuel supplies will be nor how we will come out with our labor. Just at present we have what labor we require, but it is inefficient and undependable and there is considerable unrest as to wages. We have been forced to pay higher wages this season than we did last year. Labor costs all along the river are heavier than they were one year ago and we don't know exactly what to expect. Two-thirds of the labor in our yards is colored and we have to send South for the workers each season and pay their railroad expenses. Even then we do not know what we are getting or how long these workers will continue with us. Brick manufacturers have a great many difficulties the consumers know little or nothing about and it is therefore not surprising that we proceed as carefully as possible in order not to make this industry any more speculative than it is already."

The Roseton Brick Corporation is now installing a modern automatic brick-making machine with steam dryers and when this is completed and operating the production of the plant will be increased and considerable doubtful labor eliminated.

The plant of the Jova Brick Works, which adjoins that of the Roseton Company, is admitted to be the most modern of those located along the river. This yard is operating automatic machines and drying the newly-moulded brick in steam chambers. This modern equipment makes it possible for the yard to operate throughout the entire year if desirable, and there is every likelihood that the producing season will be extended to ten months at least this year. This plant turns out 83,000 bricks per day on one of its automatic machines and will probably manufacture a total of about 40,000,000 brick this year. This is considerably better than its record for last year, before the installation of the new automatic machines.

The yards at Beacon and Dutchess Junction, across the river from Newburgh, are generally a reflection of the intense activity which prevails elsewhere in the district. The plants of Martin & Shackel, Nicholson Bros., John Ziegler & Co., William K. Hammond, and others are all making brick which is being burned and shipped as fast as it can be turned out. All of the producers are handicapped by various labor troubles and the scarcity of fuel for burning, and their inability to obtain coal dust, which is essential to mix with the clay before it is moulded and burned.

"There was no justification for any charges that we brick-makers were deliberately holding back production in order to maintain high prices," said William K. Hammond, in discussing the outlook for the brick-making season. "In your investigation you have witnessed the extreme activity of the plants on the River. You know what the manufacturers have been forced to contend with in the way of labor troubles, strikes for higher wages, fuel shortage and other things which have delayed our season and added greatly to our production costs. How can brick be sold at a much lower figure than at present when our costs are steadily climbing to the war-time levels? What are we going to do for fuel when the little we have been able to obtain is used up? Is the demand for brick going to drop off and leave the manufacturers with millions of new bricks, made under staggering costs, which we will be obliged to hold over until next year and then sell at any price obtainable in order to resume manufacturing operations? The brickmakers could proceed with greater confidence and ability were they given some indication of the probable rate of demand. This seems impossible, but we have been in the past forced to operate our yards blindly, without knowledge of the industry's requirements, and many times we have been caught with large stocks on our hands and no demand. This has been one of the most discouraging features of the brick-making business and in a large measure has been responsible for the current stringency in the supply and the resultant high prices."

Plants in the Kingston district, as well as those north at Catskill, Glasco, Hudson, Stockport, Athens and Coeymans, all indicate the same activity to get brick made and marketed. Producers are speeding operations and are making every possible effort to get new brick into the city as fast as they can be taken from the kilns and loaded.

It is apparent manufacturers along the river realize that changes in the brick-making industry are rapidly coming about. Not much longer will the antiquated production methods suffice. The cost is too heavy and the hazard too great. At best brickmaking is a speculative industry, as producers are forced to go ahead blindly, guess at the requirements of the construction industry and its capacity to absorb the season's output, or make more than can be used and then witness a glutted market react upon prices to a degree that in many seasons has turned an estimated profit into a severe financial loss.

There is now quite a movement under way to make brick according to more up-to-date production methods. Automatic moulding machines have been perfected and several of the yards are now thus equipped and others about to install them. Another real move forward has been the introduction of steam dryers for the preliminary hardening of green brick, after they are moulded and before they are placed in the kiln for final burning. These machines reduce acreage required for the plant, materially increase production on a given acreage, and reduce labor costs.

One of the most important results of the trend toward installing modern machines and steam dryers is that brick making can proceed in almost any weather and practically throughout the year if desirable. In the old-fashioned type of open and pallet yards, which have been most common along the river, the brick-making season was limited to the period from May to October, according to weather. Operations usually started as soon as the frost was out of the ground in spring and continued until the autumn frosts put a stop to activity. Production in these open yards is also frequently halted during the season by severe storms or spells of rain and dampness, which prevent brick from drying. Open and pallet yards need sun as the newly-moulded brick require several days to dry sufficiently to be stacked in the kilns. On the other hand, in dryer yards the brick only requires about ten hours to run through the steam chambers and thus there is a decided saving both in time and yard area required.

The plant of the Jova Brick Works at Roseton, in the Newburgh Bay district, is generally recognized as the most modern of any along the river. This plant, although located on a relatively small acreage, considering the number of machines operating in the yard, is producing a large output of brick. The efficiency of this plant is entirely due to the fact that the owners have installed modern brick-making machines of the automatic type and furthermore have equipped their plants with steam chambers for drying the newly-moulded brick before it is placed in the kilns for the actual burning. This plant is equipped with fourteen brick-making machines, two of which are of the modern automatic type. In the past this yard had a maximum capacity, when running with the old-fashioned machines, of about 35,000,000 brick per season, but now, with the two automatic machines, this plant working about ten months a year will be easily capable of turning out at least 40,000,000 brick and possibly more.

One of these automatic brick-making machines is the regular stock design, moulding six bricks at a time. The other, newer in design, and improved by Mr. Jova, moulds nine bricks at a time at the rate of two hundred a minute. This machine has a capacity of 83,000 bricks per day, a gain of fifty per cent. over the old-style automatic machine. From the automatic moulding machines the brick are sent on gravity conveyors to steam chambers which accommodate about 27,500 bricks each. At the regular speed this machine will fill about three chambers per day. One of the important factors in connection with the use of the automatic moulding machines and steam dryers is the reduction in labor costs. Mr. Jova estimates that the system he employs effects a labor saving of 25 per cent. in the yard and in addition he is able to eliminate the labor turnover caused by seasonal conditions.

The major portion of the brick-yard labor is itinerant. Negroes predominate, although there are some Italians and a sprinkling of Poles and Slavs. One of the chief difficulties in operating brick plants is that of annually getting labor which can only work for a limited season and then is cast adrift for the remainder of the year. In the past it has been the experience of many brick manufacturers that only a relatively small percentage of their workers will be on hand for the opening of a new season, as they do not winter in the localities of the yards, since there is not work to be had during the months the plants are idle because of bad weather conditions.

Plants equipped with steam dryers can operate any part of or throughout the year, entirely independent of weather conditions, whereas the open yards must have clear weather. The old plan of putting thousands of dollars' worth of newly-moulded brick out in the yard to dry and then pray that a thunder shower would not come up to destroy or damage the day's output is both expensive and inefficient. The demand for washed brick has never been urgent.

Recently there has been much discussion about high brick prices. Manufacturers admit that prevailing prices are inflated to some extent, but ask what are they able to do about it? During the recent shortage in common brick, and even today when the supply is manifestly better than it was, prices are holding firmly to their levels of $20 a thousand alongside dock. It is the law of supply and demand, beyond the control of the producers, which is responsible for the current market stiffness. Then again, only a relatively small part of the brick now coming into the city is being sold at $20 a thousand. Many of the leading producers are still making brick for which they know they cannot get more than $15 a thousand, as they are committed on contracts which they made several months ago at this price. It is only the brick which is coming into an open market, with practically all dealers waiting its arrival and competing for its purchase, that is bringing the higher prices.

Although it is probable that common brick prices will decline to some extent after the present buying rush is over, it is extremely unlikely that they will suffer a real slump for a long time to come. The brick market will become stabilized after the new supplies are more regular and in greater volume and the most urgent demands of the industry are satisfied. The new level will probably be lower than that prevailing at present, but will not drop to the extent that many New York City builders are hoping for. The prices common brick will bring in the future must be consistent with 1922 manufacturing costs, which are considerably higher than they were one year ago. There is not a manufacturer along the Hudson River who is not burdened with heavier costs this season than last year and there will be no possibility for greatly lowered prices while present conditions continue.

At present the Hudson River yards are full of green brick. Manufacturers cannot burn them fast enough. In order to catch up with the demand from the Metropolitan District the producers have been forced to burn unusually small kilns and ship the brick before the newly-burned product has had sufficient time to cool properly. This is costly from a manufacturing standpoint, particularly when fuel is scarce. Usually a kiln of brick will consist of twenty arches of 50,000 brick to the arch, making a total of about 1,000,000 burned in each kiln fired. During the early weeks of the current season the demand was so great and the manufacturers so desirous of relieving the shortage which was causing construction delays in the city that they fired their brick practically as fast as they were able to mould it, in relatively small kilns, some of which contained not more than 350,000 to 500,000 bricks.

The writer was in one yard at Kingston where a kiln of brick, the fires of which were drawn on Sunday, June 4, was loaded on the barge the following Friday and scheduled to arrive at the New York dock the next Sunday. Speed to this extent in taking down a kiln, loading and shipping, is costly and inefficient. Under ordinary conditions a kiln of brick requires as much time to cool as it did to burn. This will average six days. There have been many instances during the past few weeks, however, when the newly-burned kilns have been taken down so soon after the burning process is completed that the brick-yard laborers, whose hands are thoroughly hardened and calloused, were unable to remove the brick from the kilns and load it on the barges even when protected by gloves. The men refused to work under these conditions, as there is a real hazard involved.

Removing brick from the kilns before it has had time to cool off properly is not only dangerous to the men but it is costly to the manufacturers. The hot brick, if exposed to the air too soon after it has been fired, is subject to checking which makes it unfit to be classified as a first grade product.

Since the opening of the current season brick manufacturers have been confronted with a series of serious problems, all of which have contributed to delays in production and increased manufacturing costs. Flooded yards early last spring held back manufacturing operations from four days to a week and, furthermore, prevented the shipment of brick held over from last year because it was impossible for the barges to come alongside the manufacturers' docks. The difficulties in obtaining fuel were also serious retardants. Brick makers require coal and wood for burning the brick, coal for steam in operating their machines and coal dust for mixing with the clay, which assists materially in the burning process. Labor problems have also been more than ordinarily acute, with the average yard laborer inefficient, independent and difficult to manage and furthermore demanding wages in excess of his actual worth. All along the river wages of yard laborers are at least fifty cents per day higher this season than a year ago and there is no assurance that the end of the demand for higher rates has been reached. At present one of the plants at Glasco is not in operation because the men have walked out on strike and all manufacturers complain of the unrest and inefficiency among their workers.

With all of these factors combining against them, the manufacturers still are willing to assure the industry that common brick will be available for all demands. The brick will be made and shipped as rapidly as is consistent with efficient production, and all the manufacturers ask is that the industry be patient until the producers have had time to work up their production to the maximum speed and then build with this product at a rate that will keep consumption in reasonable relation to production, so that those who make this important material may not suffer loss through over-production.

Weekly Building Figures Show Slight Drop in Local Activity

Architects and Engineers Slowing Down With Plans for New Operations
According to Statistics Tabulated by F. W. Dodge Company

CONSTRUCTION statistics for the twenty-third week of this year show a slight decline when compared with the two or three weeks immediately preceding, particularly as they apply to local building activity. The serious shortage in certain materials is no doubt responsible for the drop in recent commitments but as the situation is now greatly improved and supplies are available for all needs there will undoubtedly be an increase in commitments reported for the current week.

According to statistics compiled by the F. W. Dodge Company, for the territory including all of New York State and New Jersey, north of Trenton, architects and engineers reported work on plans for 612 new structural projects during the week of June 3 to 9, inclusive. This will require a total expenditure of $17,128,200. During the same period announcements were made of the award of 429 contracts which represented a total value of about $16,438,500.

During the week of June 3 to 9 building activity in New York City was confined to plans in progress for 159 new buildings and engineering operations which will involve an outlay of $7,885,-

The list of 124 projects reported as planning in New York City was composed of the following groups: 41 business projects such as stores, offices, lofts, commercial garages, etc., $2,352,000; 4 educational buildings, $205,500; 3 factory and industrial structures, $29,000; 1 public building, $5,000; 8 public works and public utilities, $194,600; 6 religious and memorial projects, $270,000; 194 residential operations including apartments, flats and tenements and one- and two-family dwellings, $4,659,500 and 2 social and recreational buildings, $170,000.

Among the New York City operations for which contracts were awarded during the twenty-third week of this year were 27 commercial projects of various types, $2,473,500; 1 educational building, $5,000; 1 hospital, $2,000; 4 industrial projects such as factories, warehouses, etc., $135,000; 1 public building, $5,000; 11 public works and public utilities, $515,200; 2 religious and memorial buildings, $130,000; 76 residential projects including multi-family dwellings and one- and two-family dwellings, $3,061,000 and 1 social and recreational project, $60,000.

Slag-Concrete Highway Mileage

According to a report issued in January, 1922, by the National Slag Association, there are in service in the United States 132 sections of slag-concrete highway, totaling 212.65 miles in length, with an area of 2,392,899 sq. yd. The largest amount of construction of this type has been performed in Ohio, where 44 sections of slag-concrete highway, with a length of 91.87 miles and an area of 760,312 sq. yd. are in service.

Fostering Better Construction

As a part of a nation-wide campaign designed to foster the use of more permanent materials in building, the Copper and Brass Research Association has announced a contest for school children and others, offering cash prizes for the best photographs showing the relative durability of materials which go into the construction of American homes.

Some idea of the cost to this country of the practice of building for speculative profit rather than for use is evidenced by the result of a statistical study just completed by the Copper and Brass Association. The fire loss on the 21,000,000 American homes, insured as they are for a total of $91,700,000,000, is about $35,000,000 a year, based on figures for 1918 to 1920, inclusive. The rust bill, covering the renewal of sheet metal work, principally leaders and gutters, plumbing pipe, hardware, etc., is annually twenty times that sum.

The effort to show the public the wastefulness of the use of materials which need early and frequent replacement, is a part of the present intensive campaign of the Copper and Brass Companies of the country to increase the use of those metals in domestic consumption. The photographic contest is a part of that campaign.

Fourteen prizes ranging from $150 to $10 will be awarded for photographs of copper and brass objects of utility or ornamentation which to qualify must have been in use more than 35 years. Included are copper roofs, brass door knockers, old copper cooking utensils, brass plumbing pipe. Fourteen additional prizes of similar amounts are offered for the best photographs showing the results of using substitutes for copper and brass.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

LOCAL building conditions are greatly improved as compared with those of a few weeks ago when the common brick shortage was holding back considerable construction and other difficulties clouded the outlook for an active season. At present the atmosphere is cleared, supplies are adequate for all demands and labor affairs are slowly straightening out.

According to all accounts the recent general advance in building material prices seems to have halted. During the past week prices have become stabilized to a great extent and although levels are somewhat higher than they were early this spring the impression is general that the peak of the raise has been reached. Although there is every likelihood that prevailing levels will continue for some time building interests anticipate a gradual drop as the demand slacks off toward autumn.

Common Brick—During the past week activity in the New York wholesale market for Hudson River common brick settled into the usual mid-season routine, with brick selling as fast as it comes in. The demand is still as keen as it has been for the past month or six weeks, but larger supplies are now available and practically no work is either halted or even delayed because of inability to secure common brick. All doubts as to the ability of the producers to supply this commodity to the fulfillment of all requirements in the Metropolitan district have now been dispelled as the builders now realize that the manufacturers are exerting their utmost effort to satisfy the demand. Prices are holding very firmly to the $20 a thousand level and there is little probability of a recession while keen competition continues for every cargo offered for sale in the market. Brick makers would feel far better about the future if they were able to get all of the fuel they require and not pay such excessively high prices for it. The speedy settlement of the coal strike would be of inestimable benefit to the brick-making industry at this time.

Summary—Transactions in the North River brick market for the week ending Thursday, June 15, 1922. Condition of market: Demand keen; prices firm and unchanged. Quotations: Hudson Rivers, $20 a thousand to dealers in cargo lots along-side dock. Number of cargoes arrived, 55; sales, 55. Distribution: Manhattan, 18; Bronx, 5; Brooklyn, 21; New Jersey points, 7; Astoria, 3; Flushing, 1.

Lumber—The demand for lumber products is steadily growing in intensity and according to reliable statistics the mills now have on their books the greatest accumulation of unfilled orders the industry has known during the past four years. Wholesale lumber prices have been advancing steadily for the past four or five weeks with the upward trend particularly noticeable in soft woods. During the past week, however, the market has become stabilized to some extent and prices have held firm, but there is no indication of lower levels for some time to come, at least not while the unfilled orders are as heavy as at present.

Structural Steel—Although actual bookings have been light since the first of June there are numerous interesting projects in sight which are likely to be released within a week or so. This work involves both commercial and residential building projects in New York City and the total tonnage will amount to an important figure. Local contractors are generally pleased with both the current business and the outlook for the remainder of the year. The heavy recent demand has slowed down mill shipments to some extent.

MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

Cast Iron Pipe—Manufacturers of cast iron pipe are well satisfied with the demand, although the current buying is largely confined to private interests rather than municipal orders. Several important public jobs are shortly to be released for bids and the bookings for this tonnage will add materially to the activity of the plants which are now practically all working on full time. As a rule the large Eastern plants are booked ahead for several months and the producers complain somewhat of their inability to obtain the right kind of skilled labor. Prices are firm and unchanged with New York quotations as follows: 6 in. and larger, $50.80 per net ton; 4 in. and 5 in., $55.50; 3 in., $65.80, with $4 per ton extra for Class A and gas pipe.

Electrical Supplies—Practically no change of conditions has been reported in the electrical trade during the past week. Demand is quite brisk and the majority of the jobbers in the city are inclined to feel that business will continue at its present rate for several months to come as the great volume of active construction will keep the industry hustling to keep abreast of the requirements. Prices are well sustained in the electrical trade and wire prices are somewhat stiffer than they were due to the increased cost of copper. Stocks are generally in good shape and deliveries from manufacturers are prompt.

Builders' Hardware—Business is excellent and retailers report splendid sales in suburban districts where a large amount of small house building is in progress. The general trade situation is very encouraging, with practically all of the local jobbers enjoying an active demand and manufacturers operating their plants at capacity production. Prices are very firm and slight increases are anticipated due to the growing anxiety about the fuel situation and the increasing prices of metals.

Nails—Demand for nails is fairly brisk and the outlook for the dealers is promising. Building activity is now at the season's height and daily reports show excellent progress on new work. The plans in progress indicate a large volume of new construction to be released in the near future and although there are marked signs of an abatement of speculative construction from its prevailing intensity there is every likelihood that other projects will soon be started to more than make up for any decline in the volume of speculative operations. Prices are steady and unchanged.

Roofing and Building Papers—During the past few weeks the demand for these materials have been steadily increasing due to the large amount of new suburban construction. Prospects for a continuation of activity in this line are excellent. Stocks are adequate and prices are very firm, but no advances are anticipated at the present time.

Window Glass—The tone of the market is quite satisfactory with demand showing signs of improving as a result of the rapid progress being made on local building operations which were started early this spring. Stocks are well assorted and jobbers are in a position to fill all orders promptly. Prices are firm and unchanged.

Linseed Oil—The market is rather slack at present and the recent increase in buying seems to have been only a temporary spurt. Prices are somewhat easier than they have been and the trade opinion is that a firmer tone will only come about through increased demand. Local stocks are fair and jobbers are in a position to handle all business in prospect without difficulty.

An Experiment That Will Be Tried Out

Officials of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company have become convinced that homes to rent for $9 per room per month can be built successfully here in New York City and have announced their intention to demonstrate it. From the moment it was first suggested that apartments at such low rentals were possible of construction under present conditions there has been much skepticism about it. Many legitimate builders have pointed to the high cost and inefficiency of labor and to the existing conditions in the materials market as reasons why housing for such low rentals could not be constructed successfully during the current year. Frankly, few of them have been willing to even consider such an undertaking themselves, and many of them have doubted all along that any well-managed lending institution, especially one so ably officered as the Metropolitan Life, would make the attempt and assume the risks involved.

When the plan to permit life insurance companies to invest ten per cent. of their assets in such cheap housing was before the Legislature last winter it was not taken seriously in most quarters, and Governor Miller, while permitting the measure to become law through his signature, indicated that he regarded the plan merely as experimental and had little hope that it would prove an important factor in the housing situation. The Governor's view has been widely shared,—so generally accepted in fact as to make the Metropolitan's announcement of definite action under the new law come as a genuine surprise to most students of the situation.

Is it possible to build apartments to rent at $9 per room? Where is accessible land cheap enough for such an undertaking? What sort of buildings can be erected to come within the circumscribed outlay? What modern conveniences can the $9-a-room tenants have? Can the buildings be made attractive? What about light and air and shrubbery and grass plots, steam heat, hot water, safety from fire, and other desirable features so sadly lacking in the low-priced housing accommodations New Yorkers have known heretofore?

These and other pertinent questions are answered in the statement which the Metropolitan's architects, Messrs. Andrew J. Thomas and D. Everett Waid, have prepared, and which THE RECORD AND GUIDE publishes on another page of this issue. These experienced architects have studied their problem exhaustively, and the Metropolitan officials have decided to spend upwards of seven million dollars on the initial projects. Land has been bought, the contract for construction has been awarded, and the stage is set for the experiment.

If this project proves successful it seems bound to have, as the architects predict, a revolutionary effect on city housing and even on city life. Not only will the tenants of the new apartments be the gainers financially and in comfort, health and happiness, but the "how" of doing it will be revealed to other builders and to other lending institutions whose co-operation is requisite.

It is a very interesting experiment which the Metropolitan officials have launched, and the progress of the enterprise is bound to be followed with keenest interest.

Doubts About Brick Supply Removed

Facts and figures relative to the brick-making industry in the Hudson River Valley, which were published in THE RECORD AND GUIDE last week, promise a steady and consistent supply of this important basic material through the remainder of the current building season. Brick producers, realizing that the prospects for the greatest building movement in the history of the industry in the Metropolitan District were endangered because of the grave scarcity of common brick, in the face of a series of discouraging obstacles have succeeded in speeding production in their plants to a degree that has brought new brick into the market much earlier in the season than the average for many years past. The efforts now being made by the manufacturers to make, burn and ship their product is an assurance that local construction operations will not be further retarded because of a lack of brick.

No doubt now exists as to the ability of the Hudson River brick manufacturers to adequately supply all current demands. The prevailing rate of activity along the river practically guarantees a reserve for an emergency, as well as for the non-producing winter season. The scarcity, so acute a few weeks ago, is now greatly relieved and each day witnesses the arrival of additional cargoes from production points which are immediately being distributed to centers where the demand is keenest. The crisis in the common brick supply is past. No active operations are now retarded because brick is not available, and during the past week or ten days a large amount of projected construction, which had been in temporary abeyance because of the shortage, has been started and its future progress, as far as the brick supply is concerned, is assured. Dealers in masons' materials now concede that they are in a position to supply immediate requirements without costly delays, and their attitude regarding future supplies is generally optimistic.

Manufacturers of common brick have not been able to relieve the shortage in this commodity, however, without cost to themselves both in extra energy and effort and mounting production costs. In order to speed up production so as to get common brick into the Metropolitan District earlier this season than ever before they have been forced to operate their plants at top speed and by so doing have had to pay premium prices for both labor and fuel.

Although there has been some adverse comment in the industry because of the prevailing high level of common brick prices, there is now little prospect that these levels can recede for some time to come. Labor all along the river is higher at present than it was at any time last season and fuel costs are now considerably greater than at their war-time peaks. Under these conditions the brick manufacturers are doing their utmost to meet the common brick requirements of the construction industry. The producers promise brick supplies and reserves to the limit of their manufacturing capacity, and, unless retarded by increasing labor difficulties and absolute inability to secure the necessary fuel, there is now no doubt as to the fulfillment of these promises.

Loophole in the Strike Vote

There is quite a difference between voting to strike or voting power to union officials to call a strike, and in this development of the situation now confronting the business world lies a considerable degree of safety for both the railroad workers and the general public. Leaders of the men affected by the recent cuts announced by the Railroad Labor Board are clamorously announcing that a strike is inevitable, but at the convention of the American Federation of Labor, being held in Cincinnati, several declarations of an impending strike received only half-hearted applause, indicating a realization of lack of public sympathy with the effort to retain war wages when the feeling is general that the good of the whole community, including the welfare of railroad workers and their families, depends largely on a cut in the railroad payrolls.

The truth is that the country can ill afford to have business, now happily on the point of recovery, upset and a new period of depression insured by the inauguration of a strike by certain unions which would seriously impede the railroads in handling shipments of freight now so necessary to the reconstruction of commerce throughout the country. Railroad men as a body, by reason of their vocation itself, are brought into contact with many people and are able to gauge public opinion more accurately than those tied down to one location. Undoubtedly they are cognizant of the impatience of the people generally with any suggestion for the tying-up of the main arteries of trade at this particular moment and of the widespread determination to thwart any body of men in any effort they may make to profit at the expense of the nation generally.

Giving the union officials power to call a strike under certain contingencies is a strategic move for trading purposes and may be justifiable as such. But certain defeat would follow the calling of a strike at this time, because the country is not in a mood to tolerate this reception of the decisions of the Railroad Labor Board as to wages, to which board the unions agreed to present their claims and by the arbitrament of which they promised to abide. The rejection by unions of the findings of arbitration because these are not wholly in their favor makes more urgent the demand for the open shop, a consideration the unions will do well to bear in mind before deciding upon walking out on July 1. The manoeuvre to empower their officials with the right to call a strike, instead of retaining the making of the decision by the rank and file of the workmen, has been employed before. Quite often when this course has been resorted to a strike has been averted because the union officials are averse to ordering a strike which they feel cannot be successful. There never has been a time more unpropitious than now for the use by unions of this weapon of warfare against employers especially and the people generally. By delegating the power to strike to their officials instead of exercising it themselves the men apparently recognize that public opinion does not support their stand and have opened the way to compromise or backdown.

President Edwards of Realty Board Describes San Francisco Convention

At the fifteenth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards held in San Francisco, Cal., during the week ending June 3, Charles G. Edwards, President of the Real Estate Board of New York, was elected a director of the Association for a term of three years. His address on "The Results of Zoning in New York City" was looked upon as a valuable contribution to a subject that is now engaging the attention of many municipalities throughout the country that have not yet adopted a zoning system. Real estate men from large cities throughout the country, who attended the convention, were much interested in it. Accompanying Mr. Edwards, from the New York Board, were J. Irving Walsh, treasurer, and Richard O. Chittick, executive secretary.

After his return last Saturday Mr. Edwards declared the convention had been most successful. He said:

"The Annual Convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards held in San Francisco, California, the first week in June was beyond doubt the most successful convention that has ever been held by the National Association. The business-like attitude which prevailed throughout the sessions impressed one with the importance of Real Estate as a profession and the necessity for acquiring all the knowledge obtainable to further promote the best interests of the real estate broker throughout the United States. Many persons of national and local prominence addressed the meetings, but the one outstanding feature seems to have been the sub-division of the various subjects of the utmost importance of Realtors into separate conferences, each one of which was in charge of a Regional Vice-President and addressed on these important topics by men from all parts of the country—specialists in their line of endeavor. Too much importance cannot be attached to the National Association if its attitude on co-ordination of not only real estate boards but all real estate men in general can only be effected. Little or no attention has been paid in the past to legislation of a Federal character enacted almost daily through the sessions of Congress and so vitally affecting the interests of property owners, and it is only through such an organization as the National Association that concerted effort can be made in times to come to secure remedial legislation and to combat such laws as may be suggested which tend to pull down the contractual rights of citizens or tend to destroy that basis of all wealth, real estate.

"The National Association has spent many years in perfecting an organization and in securing to its membership as many local boards as it was possible through its instrumentality to organize throughout the country. From now on, with the constitution as amended, the organization work completed, the National Association has begun to function in a manner befitting its position in the real estate world. The local board having membership in the National Association may well be proud of this connection, and it is certain that great good will result from a concerted effort on the part of Realtors throughout the Country to assist, insofar as their time will permit, in preaching the doctrine of co-operation among realtors and of adhering strictly to a code of ethics adopted by the National Association, in order that the real estate business may be lifted to the high place to which it is entitled and the public generally to respect it as a profession equal in importance to that of the lawyer, doctor and banker."

The officers of the National Association elected for 1923 are: President, L. F. Eppich, Denver, Col.; vice-presidents, J. H. Hannauer, St. Louis, Mo.; R. T. Cragin, Cleveland, O.; A. H. Schafft, Fort Wayne, Ind.; H. H. Garfield, Rochester, N. Y.; A. G. Bauder, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Leedy Mathews, Memphis, Tenn.; Coe A. McKenna, Portland, Ore.; E. S. Cary, Providence, R. I.; A. J. Simonson, Denver, Col.; W. E. Thompson, Hamilton, Ontario; secretary, W. H. Ball, Philadelphia, Pa., and treasurer, Hiram S. Cody, Chicago.

The Constitution as amended at the Washington meeting of the Executive Committee earlier in the year, was adopted with some minor amendments. Cleveland obtained the convention for next year.

Metropolitan Life Ready to Build $9-a-Room Apartments

Insurance Company Awards First Contracts in $7,000,000 Experiment, Acting Under Provisions of Law Passed by Legislature This Year

THE Metropolitan Life Insurance Company announces the completion of plans and the awarding of contracts for its first investment under the law passed by the Legislature of 1922 permitting life insurance companies to invest ten per cent. of their assets in the erection of apartment houses to rent for not exceeding an average of $9 per room per month.

Through the company's architects, Messrs. Andrew J. Thomas and D. Everett Waid, plans and specifications have been prepared which the Metropolitan officials believe will produce low priced homes superior to anything heretofore developed. From these plans, the insurance officials believe, apartment houses can be erected within the limits of New York City at a price low enough to realize, at the $9 a room rental, the operating expenses of the property, six per cent. interest on the company's investment and a reasonable amount in excess to amortize the cost of the buildings. These plans were submitted to six contractors and, when estimates were received by the company on June 12, it was found that Henry C. Irons & Sons, 101 Park Avenue, were the lowest bidders. The Real Estate Committee of the Metropolitan Company held a meeting on June 15 and authorized the making of a contract with Irons & Sons for the erection of fifty houses containing 39 apartments each, which will provide housing for 1950 families in 8,250 rooms. The apartments will consist of four, five and six rooms with bath, the houses will be steam-heated and have hot water supply and electricity. Every room will open either on the street, yard or the large interior gardens in the rear and at the sides of the building, so that there will be cross ventilation to every apartment, and in many apartments three exposures. There will be no dark rooms in any of the buildings.

The Metropolitan officials expect to make an investment of from $6,500,000 to $7,000,000 in this first enterprise under the new law.

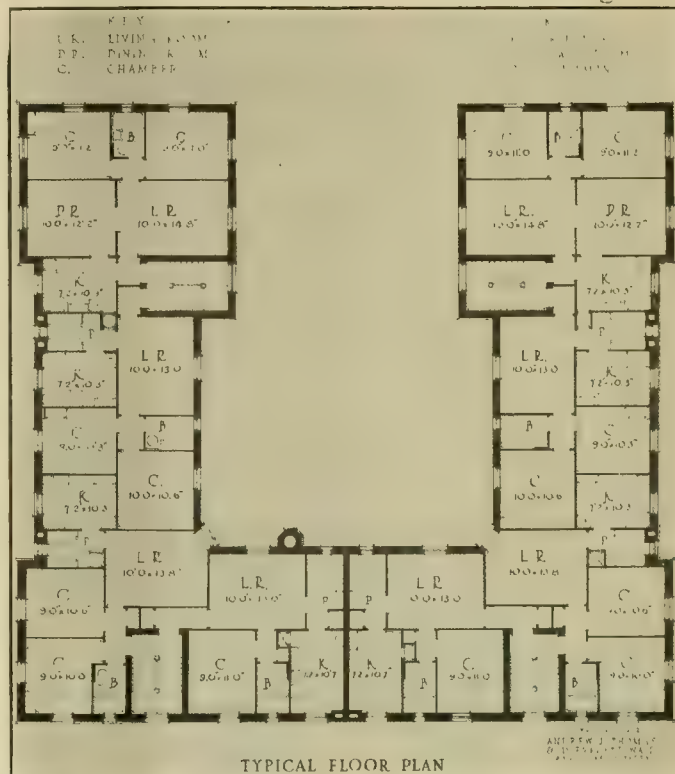

The location of the properties is in Queens, where land can be obtained at prices low enough to warrant the construction of these buildings. Grand Central Station of the Interborough Subway can be reached in about seven minutes from the Long Island City blocks and in less than twenty minutes from the Astoria block, and when the Brooklyn Rapid Transit is in operation to Astoria and Corona, Times Square can be reached in the same short time. Connection can also be made with the Second Avenue Elevated line for one fare. The Long Island City blocks are within a few minutes walk of the Bliss Street Station. The Astoria block is within a few minutes walk of the Ditmars Avenue Station, the terminus of the Astoria Subway.

The company has already received applications for practically enough tenants to entirely fill the buildings. It is not, however, the intention to offer any of them for rent until some of the buildings are completed and the tenants can inspect the apartments.

Interesting details of this new housing project are brought out in a statement issued by the architects, in which they predict that this will mark the beginning of a new era in the architecture of American housing. It creates an entirely new standard in multi-family housing, the statement declares, continuing:

There are necessarily many sides to such a vast project, with its countless technical ramifications, but the appeal for the public, as well as the professional housing experts, will lay in the practical sides.

The economies which have been worked out in the design are extraordinary, extending as they do from the main essentials down to the smallest details of architecture. More than anything else, it is the vast scale of the operation which creates the biggest savings. The benefits of large scale operation and organization are just as great in housing as in any other form of production. They extend to design and construction, the buying of materials, the systematizing of erection, and—equally important—to maintenance and operation of the houses after they are completed. The design of these apartment houses has been worked out to establish the maximum economy in all respects.

In these economics, the statement declares, the repetition of the one unit fifty times permits the design of that unit to be perfected with infinite pains, in a manner which would not be possible because too expensive if a single unit only were to be built. Every possible saving, large or small, has been made through intensive study of the design on the part of Mr. Thomas and Mr. Waid, with the help of expert building technicians and housing experts whom they have consulted, and will be repeated fifty times and its cost distributed over fifty buildings. Concentration of space, compactness of details, the splendid openness of the plan, the careful consideration of every brick and every piece of timber and trim, the use of stock details, and the careful working out of the mechanical features of heating, plumbing and electricity, where every foot of piping and each valve has been calculated as to cost and efficiency—these are only a few of the advantages created. As examples, the excavation work has been almost eliminated by placing the heating plant along the fronts of the building, requiring only one long trench on each street which is made by a steam shovel. Windows are generally of one size.

Great as these benefits are, however, they are not so important as these advantages gained by big scale planning of the city block as a whole—the highest point which housing economics can reach. Because of this concentration of space, with its absolute elimination of non-rent-paying space in the form of public corridors, in the apartments themselves, the plan of the buildings has been opened up to give the maximum of sunshine, of circulation of air and of cheerful outlook. Each unit stands free, dividing the usual solid street wall into twelve buildings, housing 39 families each. Together they occupy approximately only fifty per cent. of the area of the block. This type of design, together with the U-shaped plan of each unit, makes possible three great features. The first of these is the great interior garden, about 36 feet wide and 600 feet long, extending through the center of the block, affording a beautiful outlook over green lawns and planting. This garden is infinitely preferable to the hot, dirty and noisy street. Second, is the series of twelve U-shaped courts, opening into this great garden and thereby creating cross gardens, so to speak, each about 154 feet by 40 feet at the widest point. And thirdly, there are passageways between buildings at intervals of 100 feet into the interior garden. These passageways have several advantages. Together with the courts, they bring outside light into the buildings and they add a large number of corner bedrooms and create splendid cross ventilation in the individual apartments. They permit the fire escapes—those disfiguring features which encroach on the sidewalks and ruin the appearance of New York City streets—to be placed in them, almost out of sight. Furthermore, they are important from a fire risk standpoint, because they cut down the risk by breaking up the solid building mass along the street with open passages.

The remarkable openness of this arrangement of isolated buildings, with interior garden, rear courts and side passageways, develops to the full the great principle which Mr. Thomas calls "block circulation." He first brought this idea out in two blocks of buildings, designed one who lived in them were much dissatisfied with many of the living arrangements. Particularly they found much complaint over the combination of living room and kitchen into one room, as adding immensely to their work and interfering with their privacy.

In addition, Mr. Thomas and Mr. Waid submitted their plans for criticism to an audience of mothers at several large meetings, held in one of the East Side Settlements, where every detail of the plans was discussed. The arrangements in the Metropolitan plan were unanimously approved.

The typical arrangement, brought out in a little perspective of an apartment interior, shows a triple division of each apartment into living room, kitchen and dining facilities and bedroom portions—an aid both to operation and to privacy. There are only two apartments to a stair-hall, adding further to the privacy of the plan, and each living room is separated from the hall by a little foyer. The kitchen part is separated from the living room, and contains the latest improvements in domestic equipment. A gas cooking range with hood; a sink and two wash tubs with white enamelled metal cover, hinged to swing up against the wall when the tubs are in use, and serving as a drainboard for the sink at other times; a dresser, a refrigerator and a dumbwaiter are the principal features. All is arranged to save the housewife steps, and a little space is provided, screened off from the rest of the kitchen, for eating.

The chambers, together with the bathroom, are screened off from the living room. All the interior details are simple but in good architectural taste. The rooms are of good size for this type of work, well above the minimum sizes allowed by law.

Thus is provided, the architects point out, a remarkably efficient, ample and comfortable, human home. Although a few of the apartments are larger or smaller, the Metropolitan Company has adhered to the standards of the four-room apartment for the great majority. This is a most progressive decision, because it repudiates the two- and three-room standard which has been adopted for much housing since the war as being definitely below the American standard of living. Still another great advance in living standards is the mechanical features. Although steam and hot water are not usually provided at these rentals, they could be included in the plan because of the savings made in other ways.

All this complex design has resulted in what Messrs. Thomas and Waid pronounce an architectural exterior of fine dignified effect. By reason of the separate buildings, the monotonous effect of the long street wall, with its monotonous appearance, like an institution rather than a home, is done away with. The simple building masses, with their contrast of windows and wall spaces and the big center archways of the entrance passageway and the vistas into the courts—these features, the architects feel, will furnish a homelike appearance to the group.

The Metropolitan Life hopes, through this enterprise, to produce results that will make it interesting to other builders and constructors to undertake the same kind of operation. Its desire is to produce homes at the lowest possible rental, in order that the part of the city's population which has up to this time had no new buildings, produced at rents that they could pay, will thereby have available homes that have heretofore been beyond their means. The Metropolitan Company's interest in this matter is the same that it has in many other of its so-called welfare activities. The company insures about forty per cent. of the population in the cities—a very large majority being working people and persons of small incomes who have been especially hard hit and inconvenienced by the high rents and improper housing which has existed during the past five or six years. It has loaned large sums of money to assist in the building of new apartment houses and dwellings and hopes, by this movement, to further assist in alleviating this situation. The Metropolitan Life officials declare they will need the co-operation of supply houses and mechanics in the building trades, and have been assured they will receive the hearty co-operation of these interests.

Louis Gold & Company make the following announcement:

"Of the 1,100 lots which we have recently purchased from the American Real Estate Company in Astoria, L. I., the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has purchased 84 lots on Fourth avenue, Sixth avenue, Ditmars avenue and Wilcott avenue, where they expect to erect 39 apartment houses accommodating 624 families. They have also agreed to make 400 loans to builders who have purchased lots from us for the erection of 400 two-family houses. All buildings constructed will be semi-detached and will be of the most modern type, to sell for less than $15,000. The apartments in these houses will rent for less than $10 per room. It is our intention to make this place the garden spot of Astoria. We have named it 'Astoria Gardens.'

"The contract for the asphaltting, curbing, grading and sewers has been awarded and work will begin within a few days. The work of the construction of over 100 houses has already begun and others will follow within a few days."

GARDEN VIEW THROUGH ENTRANCE ARCADE

at Jackson Heights for the Queensboro Corporation and the other in a district of Brooklyn, for the City and Suburban Homes Co. Its value may be appreciated by visiting these properties, particularly the Jackson Heights group. There anyone, standing in the interior garden on a day without any wind, will be astonished at the steady current of air circulating through the passages between the buildings.

The value of this plan to the individual tenant is easily seen. To begin with, one apartment is as good as another. The rear apartments with their quiet, refreshing outlook over the gardens are more desirable, if possible, than those situated along the front. What this means may be realized by comparison with the stereotyped discredited "rear" apartment, with its situation on narrow, pocketed, dark and badly-ventilated side courts; or on a dingy rear yard, with outlook over back fences and alleys, the only ornament of which are clothes lines with their public display of private laundry.

The cheerfulness and homelike character and the outlook and outdoor air and sunshine, were, as explained above, paramount. Every apartment has perfect cross circulation and corner rooms are frequent on the plan. There are always two and sometimes three exposures to each apartment, like a country house. When it came to the domestic arrangements the architects realized that the one to consult was not alone the expert, but the housewife herself, who could count better than anyone else the steps saved in performing her housework and the time she economized. The plans were passed upon by ladies expert in this type of work, who had carefully investigated the actual working out of the arrangements of the model tenements and had discovered that the women

Trustees of Estate of the Late Viscount Pleased with Receipts from Sale Conducted by Messrs. Day and Davies, Auctioneers

WITH a keenly interested audience, in the ball room of the Hotel Astor, Joseph P. Day closed a two days' auction sale on Thursday of last week of 1,669 lots comprising the Viscount William Waldorf Astor tract in the Westchester section of the Bronx. The total sum realized for the property was $1,718,110. Many of the buyers during the first day of the sale, which was fully reported in THE RECORD AND GUIDE of last week, were also buyers on the second day. If there had been more lots to buy they would have bought them. The crowd held strong to the last minute of the auction when Mr. Day knocked down the last 81 lots to Jacob S. and Michael Friedman, operators, for the sum of $29,160. They are situated on Bronx River road, between East 173d and East 174th street.

The sale indicates that investors as well as operators and speculators are in the market, as many of the lots have since been resold privately to investors who will build dwellings and to builders who will erect two-family houses and multi-family walk-up houses. The easy accessibility to transit routes makes the entire tract an attractive proposition for improvement.

The auctioneer knocked down the last lot at less than $1,000. Thomas Morch and Edward Salomon, who bought heavily during the first day were busy buyers on the last day. They represented a Philadelphia syndicate and their aggregate purchase was $200,150. During the first day they bought 120 lots at $151,200.

D. J. Converser, a Brooklyn clothing merchant, who also was actively buying on the first day, bought during the two days $100,150 worth of lots. During the second day he bought lots on Westchester avenue and abutting lots.

Jacob Cohen, a Bronx builder, on the second day bought 73 lots on Feteley avenue and on Metcalf avenue, between East 173d and East 174th street at $875 each. He will improve them with 5-story walk-up apartment houses and with two-family houses, the latter type to be on Feteley avenue.

Felix Isman, of Philadelphia, who has for many years speculated in all kinds of New York real estate, followed up his purchase of $39,000 worth of lots on Wednesday with the purchase of sixty lots on Thursday at $450 each. They are situated on Morrison and Stratford avenues, between East 174th street and Bronx River road and aggregated $27,000. His first day's purchase was sixty lots at $650 each, or a total value for the day of $39,000, making his final aggregate $66,000.

Dr. J. Axelrod, a spirited bidder, bought sixty lots in the block bounded by Morrison and Stratford avenues, East 174th street and Bronx River road at an average price of $450 each, or an aggregate of $27,000.

Philip Goldberg was among the largest buyers, his aggregate purchase being $191,000. He bought a block front on Morris Park avenue, from 180th to 181st street, for $39,900; a corner plot, 100x100, for $18,300; a block front on Westchester avenue, between St. Lawrence and Beech avenue, for $51,250; a block front each on Commonwealth and Rosedale avenues, from 172d to 174th street, for $39,000; and other less important parcels that were scattered.

The Marlton Realty Company was another heavy buyer. It bought groups of lots, namely: 28 lots for $28,000; two lots for $2,800; six lots for $6,000; 16 lots for $33,000; 3 lots for $4,350; 24 lots for $72,600; 4 lots for $8,800; 25 lots for $25,000; 20 lots for $12,000; and some smaller purchases.

Pacini & Mancuso bought 16 lots for $22,400. Frank Grasso bought 22 lots for $14,300; lot 477 for $1,600; lots 478-483 for $7,200; lot 484 for $2,000; and lot 485 for $825. The G. & L. Holding Corporation bought lot 947 for $7,600; and lots 948-949 for $8,400. Joseph Avola bought lots 968-982 (15 lots) for $22,500. Thomas Healy bought lots 731 to 735 for $13,850. Park Avenue, Inc. bought five lots for $11,600. Edgar R. David bought lots 961-965 for $7,500. Michael Lichtman bought lots 449-452 for $4,000. Max G. Miller bought lots 758-761 for $6,800 and lots 803-806 for $7,400. Milton L'Ecluse, a prominent broker and developer of Nassau and Suffolk counties, Long Island, bought lots 1385-1390 for $8,850; lot 1391 for $2,400; lots 1392-1393 for $1,700; and lots 1445-1452 for $1,400.

Louis Cohen was a big buyer, among his purchases being 13 lots for $14,600; 5 lots for $4,500; and 2 lots for $2,000. Klapon & Geltman bought various parcels, among them lots 442-444, for $2,100; lots 682-684 for $7,200; lot 681, for $4,500; lots 315-316 for $2,200; lots 342-343 for $1,600. R. H. Isham bought numerous lots, among them being lot 317 for $3,550; lots 511-513 for $3,150; lots 848-849 for $1,975 and $3,250 respectively.

Kaplan & Cooper bought lots 850-853 for $4,000. F. DeFine bought 5 lots respectively for $1,000, $1,300, $1,500, $2,000 and $5,300. M. Del Balso bought 3 lots for $4,500 and 2 lots for $3,000. Edelson Bros. bought lots 163-164 for $1,000. F. E. Holywell bought lots 175, 176 to 181 for $3,150; lot 182 for $700; and lot 183 for $525. G. Castaldo bought lots 195-198 for $1,600. M. Birsan bought lots 199-200 for $1,050. For the same figure Milton Rosenbluh bought lots 201-202. Lots 844-845 were bought by H. Adelman for $3,600. Marcus Feldman bought a group of 4 lots for $6,150. Bokhara Realty Corporation bought the six lots 319-324 for $8,700. Samuel Naboishek bought the six lots 382-387 for $4,350.

William H. Callahan bought lots 1399-1403 for $5,000. Emile Belstein bought lots 1427-1444 for $4,500. Gustavus Willan bought lots 1546-1551 for $3,450; lot 1552 for $1,225; lot 1556 for $425; and lot 1545 for $675. Charles Starace bought lots 282-283 for $2,000 and $1,100 respectively. Jacob Purcell bought lots 284-285 for $1,900. Mime Reiss bought lots 288-289 for $1,025 and $1,650 respectively. Morris Epstein bought lots 746-755 for $9,250 and lots 905-913 for $9,675. L. Landsman bought lots 489-492 for $3,300.

The foregoing purchases give a comprehensive idea of the general trend of the sale. Comparatively few persons bought one lot each. The general public interest in the sale was shown by the cosmopolitan character of the buying.

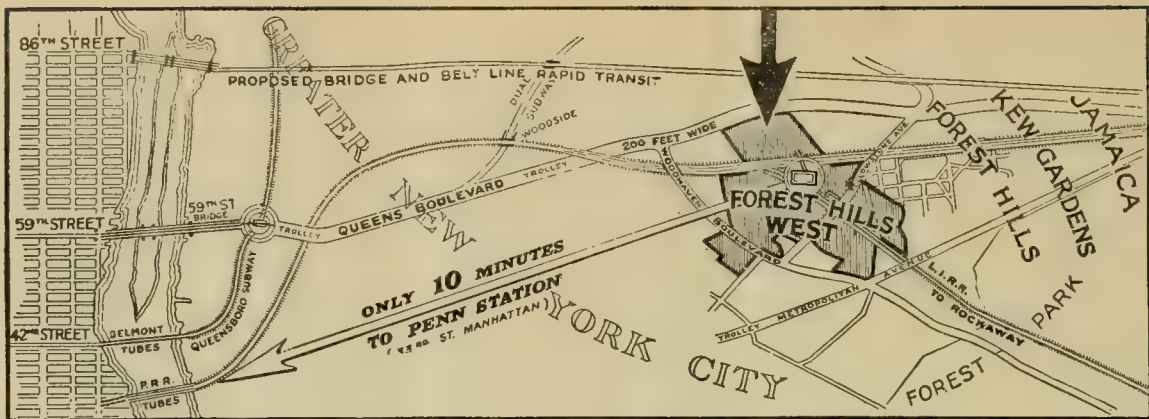

State Convention of Title Men Held at Geneva

THE annual convention of the New York State Title Association was held at Geneva yesterday, the program concluding with a dinner to the delegates and guests at the Geneva Country Club. The subjects discussed at the morning and afternoon sessions included those dealing with the needs of title men and abstractors throughout New York State. Mayor Robert A. Catchpole of Geneva made the opening address to the convention, which was held in Smith Hall, Hobart College. L. B. Bright, President of the Lawyers Title and Trust Company of New York City, responded. Following these addresses Cyril H. Burdett, Vice-President of the New York Title and Mortgage Company and President of the New York State Title Association, introduced Hon. Anson Getman, Deputy Attorney General in charge of titles and one of the foremost authorities in the country on his subject.

He spoke on "Sources of Title," laying stress upon water front property and the derivation of titles from the State.

In the afternoon session, William X. Weed, Esq., Counsel for the Westchester Title and Mortgage Company and the author of several well-known books, addressed the convention on "Tax Title, followed by Henry R. Chittick, Solicitor for the Lawyers Title and Trust Company of New York City.

At the dinner at the Geneva Club Lansing G. Haskins of Geneva acted as toastmaster and State Commissioner Knapp delivered the principal address. Other speakers were Hon. Loran L. Lewis, Jr., representative of the State Bar Association, and officials of the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards, State Banking Association, Farm Brokers Association and the Farmers Fund, Inc.

Review of Real Estate Market for the Current Week

Large Sales of Loft Buildings and Apartment Houses and Sites for New Ones Gave High Tone to Dealing.

THE market this week was distinguished by numerous large transactions instead of by a heavy volume of dealing. The diversity that is usually given to it by various operators in medium sized properties and by investors in medium sized parcels was lacking. Movements of large parcels, however, indicate strong interest in real estate in this town inasmuch as large parcels make up the properties on important thoroughfares and in the best apartment belts. Big leases were also a distinguishing feature of the week.

The sale of two Tenth avenue block fronts by the estate of William Waldorf Astor to Max Natanson is the first large West Side holding of this estate to change hands. The buyer has resold some of the parcels. The estate of "Al" Adams sold two tenement houses with stores in lower East 34th street, near the Long Island Railroad ferry. Not so many years ago these parcels were good rent producers. Traffic at that point is much less than in the past on account of railroad passengers taking trains in the Pennsylvania Station. The buildings in discussion will be altered into a garage. A large Broadway corner apartment house, at 135th street, figured in a trade for Bronx and Harlem parcels. The largest remaining vacant plot on Riverside Drive—a corner—changed hands for improvement with a large apartment house. That the region adjacent to the downtown ferries still has good retail trade strength is indicated by a prominent shoe dealer on Greenwich street buying the abutting building on Washington street for the purpose of enlarging his establishment. Evidently

Eighth avenue contributed numerous sales to the aggregate. This thoroughfare has attracted much attention recently by the frequent sales of real estate along it. The Pinkney estate sold a plot of 12 lots in West Harlem to builders. A 12-story loft building in West 30th street, worth $550,000 and another in West 27th street, worth $400,000, formed some of the big items of the dealing. A 12-story apartment house covering an uptown block front was resold for about $2,000,000. Only a few weeks ago the seller acquired it and he disposes of it at a good profit. Max Natanson took a profit on the Arena building in West 32d street running through to West 31st street. This was a $1,500,000 deal and embodied a trade to a degree for Central Park West properties. The Park avenue zone witnessed the sale of a large apartment house. Other large transactions will be found in the news columns of this issue. A parcel on Beaver street and one on Chambers street was sold.

Notable among the leases was that of Maillard, confectioner, of a Madison avenue corner at 47th street. Two dwellings in West 48th street, near Fifth avenue, were taken for 21 years for trade purposes. The Claridge and Wallick hotels, on Broadway, from 43d to 44th street, formed an outstanding lease. A fine Fifth avenue dwelling was leased to a fashionable school. The Columbia Club renewed its lease of its 7-story club house, in West 43d street for a long term with privilege of another renewal. As a site for a 12-story building the plot 156-158 West 34th street was leased for 21 years. There were many other interesting leases.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

THE total number of sales reported, but not recorded in Manhattan this week, was 57, as against 75 last week and 161 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th st was 23, as compared with 18 last week and 34 a year ago.

The number of sales north of 59th st was 34, as compared with 57 last week and 95 a year ago.

From the Bronx 35 sales at private contract were reported, as against 33 last week and 45 a year ago.

Statistical tables, including the number of recorded instruments, will be found on page 786.

Annual Convention of Realtors

The National Association of Building Owners and Managers is holding its annual convention at Bedford Springs, Pa. The membership of this association is composed of men in all parts of this country and Canada whose business is the management of improved real estate.

At the convention papers will be read by men who are prominent in their profession, among them Walter Stabler, A. E. Horne, Douglas Grant Scott, Stephen Frank Voorhis, Ira H. Woolson and Dr. Joseph J. Klein, all of New York; Frederick Swetland of Cleveland, J. A. Dickinson, Bureau of Standards, Washington, and W. J. Palmer of Omaha.

The subjects of some of the papers are "Office Building and Apartment House Building Mortgages," "The Chemistry of Building Management," "Determination of Profit in Building Rents," "Planning of Buildings for Economy of Operation," "Some of the Common Faults in Construction of Office and Apartment House Buildings as Regards Fire Hazards and Their Correction," "Depreciation and Obsolescence," "The Owner," "Elevator Codes," "Plan Construction and Operation of Small Apartment Houses."

The New York association, which has 276 members, sent 25 delegates. It represents most of the largest buildings there, including the Equitable, Woolworth, Singer and Metropolitan and large apartment houses.

Brooklyn Year Book for 1923

The Brooklyn Real Estate Board has announced its intention to publish a Year Book for 1923, which shall serve as a real estate manual as well as diary.

The initial publication of the board, the Year Book for 1922, met with such a favorable response, and the demand for it so far exceeded the expectations of the committee in charge, that it is planned to triple the 1923 edition.

The manual, in addition to containing a complete list of the board's membership, will also contain a directory of city and county offices, building statistics, synopsis of realty laws, tables for use in appraising, historical data of Brooklyn and Long Island, annotated calendar, directory of financial institutions in Brooklyn and Queens, and much other information of value to those interested in the real estate business.

The committee in charge, M. C. O'Brien, chairman; Charles L. Gilbert, George H. Gray, George S. Horton and William G. Morrissey, are busily at work gathering material for the book, which will be issued about December 1.

Henry M. Weill and J. J. Cohen represent the leasing concern. The properties were taken from the 1981 Broadway Corporation, Charles L. Bernheimer, president.

The plot comprises 1981 to 1987 Broadway and 101 to 107 West 67th st., having a frontage of 85 feet on Broadway and 135 feet on 67th st. The lease is for 63 years, divided into three periods, and calls for an annual rental of $40,000. The lessees, who control other large West Side properties, may improve the site with a business building and theatre.

Charles F. Noyes Co. leased store and basement, 411 Broadway, to Samuel Schein for cafeteria at aggregate rental of about $30,000; also the 2d and 3d floors of the same building to Andrew Aversano for 6 years, to be used as a billiard academy.

New Leasehold in West 34th Street

The property at 156 to 160 West 34th st, 65 feet wide, and 71 feet east of the southeast corner of Seventh av, considered one of the most valuable sites available for reimprovement in the Pennsylvania Station zone, is passing to new interests through a long term lease, and is to be improved with a 12-story commercial structure, according to report. The property had been in the possession of the heirs of Daniel A. Loring for a great many years.

The site is at present occupied by three 5-story buildings converted for business. The lease is for 21 years, with the privilege of a similar renewal, and carrying an option of purchase at about $600,000. The rental for the first 10 years is reported at $30,000 per annum and for the remaining 11 years at $35,000.

Broadway Hotel in New Hands

The Hotel Claridge, on the east side of Broadway, between 43d and 44th sts, is being leased to interests identified with hotel management in Cleveland, Ohio. The lease, it is said, is for a long term. The Claridge is at present owned and operated by L. M. Boomer, who is also a director in the Waldorf-Astoria and the McAlpin Hotel companies. It comprises the Claridge Hotel, at the southeast corner of Broadway and 44th st, and the old Hotel Wallick, at the northeast corner of Broadway and 43d st, and contains 600 rooms. The Broadway frontage is 203.10 feet.

The Claridge was formerly Rector's and is a 13-story building. The Wallick Hotel is an 8-story building. Mr. Boomer purchased control of the Claridge in 1916 from the Thompson-Starrett Construction Co. He took over the Wallick about two years ago.

Maillard in Madison Ave.

Henry Maillard, confectioner and restaurateur, for 14 years at the southwest corner of Fifth av and 35th st, has leased a large portion of store and basement in the building that is being erected by Webb & Knapp at the southeast corner of Madison av and 47th st, opposite the Ritz-Carlton. The lease is for a term of 20 years, and the aggregate rental is reported to be more than $1,000,000. Edgar A. Manning was the broker.

According to Buchman & Kahn, architects for the lessees, the Madison avenue frontage will be devoted to the store, which will be finished after the style of exclusive French shops. On the 47th st side will be two large dining rooms, one of which will be exclusively for men. The main dining room, 50x80, will be a free adaptation of the French Renaissance executed in marble and walnut. The men's dining room,

American Construction Council Organized at Washington

By-Laws Adopted and Constructive Plan Outlined for Correcting Evils in Building Industry Under Leadership of Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt

ABOUT two hundred representatives of the ten major groups which comprise the construction industry met at the Hotel Washington, Washington, D. C., Monday and Tuesday, June 19 and 20, to organize the American Construction Council. The preliminaries of this meeting were recently arranged at Cleveland at which time it was announced that the fundamental idea of the organization had the hearty endorsement of Secretary Hoover of the Department of Commerce and that Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt had consented to become its presiding officer as soon as the council had completed its organization.

Secretary Hoover delivered the address which formally opened the conference last Monday morning, and in his remarks congratulated the construction industry upon its effort to co-ordinate its various elements and readjust those things which for some time past have been responsible for bringing discredit upon one of the most important of the nation's industries. He explained that the Government is in hearty accord with the American Council and will lend its full support to rejuvenate construction in the United States.

"The initiative in the administration of the building industry must come from within the industry itself and not from bureaucratic regulation," declared Secretary Hoover. "If we would stem the tide tending to refer every little need and complaint to the government, there must be independent action among members of the industry."

Among the subjects suggested by Secretary Hoover for consideration of the Council were standardization of grades, inspection of, and simplification of dimensions of construction materials, the collection of statistics, the encouragement of home building, zoning, proper building codes, seasonal and intermittent employment, jurisdictional disputes, apprenticeship, vocational training and in general the elimination of unnecessary speculation and the better functioning of industry in regard to our national needs.

A warning against "an intense stratification of the various economic interests in our national life" which lead to selfish aims and purposes was voiced by Willis H. Booth, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York in following Secretary Hoover. If the public confidence is to be gained the aims and purposes of the Council must square and comport itself entirely with the best public judgment, he said. He denied proposing an impractical altruism which was not consistent with actual facts but declared such a basis was "an enlightened kind of selfishness which will take us further because it is more nearly right." Illustrating his point he went on to say "If we can surround the construction industry with a feeling of stability we immediately add to its ability to secure credit." This feeling of stability he stated was based on the confidence which the public gave to the industry.

Following the opening addresses a series of five-minute talks were given by representatives of the various elements which comprise the industry.

Henry H. Kendall, Past-President of the American Institute of Architects, stated that the architects were happy to be among those who are participating in the organization of the Council.

"We see in it potentialities far beyond its present capacity," he said, "and we hope soon to see them realized in actual achievements. We shall gladly give to it our best efforts and cooperation to achieve these so much desired results. We are to bring together a group of men, vitally interested in different phases of the building industry, an occupation, in which, directly or indirectly, almost every trade and industry is represented, and by our counsel and advice solve the many problems which have arisen and will continue to arise between groups and trades; to fix standards and formulate rules of conduct which shall govern our business relations and promote good will, efficiency and fair play in building and construction."

William McClellan of New York, representing public utilities construction said: "The extreme difficulties encountered in construction as compared with other industrial problems, makes an organization, such as this, an inevitable factor. When a manufacturer gets an order he puts it through a factory with an organized force and system well established. Construction on the other hand necessitates in the very nature of things that those engaging in it have even to clear the ground, create their plant and organize their forces before they can begin to build. And on the next contract, they must do it all over again. The ability to overcome such problems as these is the kind of ability which must be put into handling the problems before such a council as this. The great need is to translate the general ideals here expressed into specific accomplishments. If construction men can't do it, nobody else can."

A very significant stand was taken by labor engaged in building trades when the organized building trades endorsed the American Construction Council and voted unanimously to affiliate with the Council at their recent convention in Cincinnati.

"We believe that the Council can be a most potential factor in the stabilization of the industry we serve," said John Donlin, president of the Building Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, "and we hope that all the elements of the industry will affiliate."

He stated that the Council should be a fact finding agency to determine rights and wrongs, and serve to eliminate wrongs inflicted by a few in each element of the industry. It was his opinion that the Council should establish and maintain local conference committees in all cities, these being necessary for local guidance to hold the confidence of the public, to avoid strikes, lockouts and to protect the industry against uneconomic abuses.

"Some one of the many elements contributing to the industry," said Mr. Donlin, "is at one time or another responsible for some injury. If one member is working with detriment to his group, he should be called to task. Responsibility for any bad condition can be determined and a remedy applied. If the banker, the manufacturer, dealer, or worker is responsible, all others are concerned. We must all be guided by a determination for absolute justice."

In speaking for the engineers, Calvert Townley of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company said:

"The engineers believe in organization and in organization for public service. That was the motive which led them to organize their own organization. They do not feel that organization for public service means a sacrifice of private industry. It means the increased reward for private industry because not only does the organization have a feeling of satisfaction of good, well done, but they reap a large pecuniary reward in the important character of their reputation among their associates who come to believe in them, which of course results in time in a very great increase in business. A movement to coordinate with the object of performing better public service is distinctly a move in the right direction."

Owing to illness, Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt, president-elect of the American Construction Council, was unable to be present at the meeting. A letter from him was read which said in part:

"I much regret that I am unable to be present at the organization meeting of the American Construction Council, but I know that under the inspiring leadership of Mr. Hoover the conference will be, not merely an opportunity to get at facts, but will result in a definite move for the good of the nation."

"There is absolutely no doubt that the construction industry must do something constructive! I refer not to abuses of power in the past, by this, that or the other individual or local organization; I speak of the fact that an immense sum of money, energy and happiness on the part of the American people can be saved if the existing waste is eliminated."

"In my judgment the American Construction Council must be broad enough to include every element, and it must be strong enough to strike at any individual or association of individuals which fails to live up to certain simple standards of ethics in business dealings. It may be felt by some that there would be danger through the limitation of freedom of action of the individual, but it must be remembered that the public as a whole are concerned in the efficiency, honesty and honor of all the groups constituting the construction industry. It goes without saying that if the members of the construction industry are unable to keep their own house in order, an exasperated public will some day regulate their house for them."

The Monday afternoon and evening sessions were devoted to the presentation of the report of the Operating Committee on Organization by General R. C. Marshall, Jr., General Manager of the Associated General Contractors of America, a discussion of the proposed by-laws by the ten major groups representing all elements in the industry, into which the Council has been divided, and the election of the Executive Board composed of the following members:

The discussion on the proposed by-laws for the council was most interesting and the various trade group committees offered suggested changes which were referred to the committee on by-laws for further consideration. The preamble to the proposed by-laws outlines briefly the purposes of the organization and is largely a statement of intent. The preamble follows:

"With the desire to place the construction industry on a high plane of integrity and efficiency and to correlate the efforts towards betterment made by the existing organizations, all the component parts of the industry are joining in formation of the American construction council, a conference association representative of the whole industry and dedicated to the improvement of the service which the construction industry renders to the community, the state, and the nation."

Tuesday's sessions were devoted to the consideration of subjects to be taken up by the council and the adoption of an immediate program of action.

The morning session was opened with an address by Walter Gordon Merritt, counsel for the Silk Association, upon the subject of "Determining the Proper Relations Between the Several Elements in the Construction Industry."

"Builders must reform by abolishing combinations and monopolies in restraint of trade, purging their ranks of lawbreakers, prosecuting grafters and arbitrating industrial disputes," said Mr. Merritt. "The construction industry is guilty of economic waste and is the most inefficiently conducted of any. Distrust between employers and employees must give way to mutual understanding."

"We must have a permanent arbitration council to settle disputes, instead of periodic armistices between capital and labor," he said.

"By co-operation and closer contact with labor and placing of public interest above individual selfishness alone can evils of the industry find remedy. Architects, builders, supply men and all branches of the industry need correction."

Mr. Merritt further said the construction industry had been frightened by public condemnation into attempting corrective action. They had in the past been bargaining with corruption, because they feared it would hurt their business to combat it, he said, but must now, by joint effort, overcome it.

These statements of Mr. Merritt had the endorsement of the council. One of the members said his unexpected attack was exactly what they needed.

He said the construction industry was the most intimately associated with the welfare of the people and unless based on a platform of service, the council could not overcome public distrust and animosity.

Dr. John Gries, chief of the housing bureau of the Department of Labor, and chairman of the committee on building materials of the district housing committee, told the council one of its important problems was to encourage production of more and better houses throughout the country.

He said one of the difficulties confronting the industry was the lack of authentic information. He advocated a survey showing wage scales and other information affecting the industry, to be placed in the hands of a neutral and scientifically minded organization for mutual benefit.

"It is impossible to get at the statistics needed to guide the council," said Mr. Gries, "because those who compile them are interested in their own interpretations."

John B. Larner, a Washington banker and member of the finance committee of the housing committee, spoke on the necessity for building a standard of responsibility on the part of members of the industry.

Other speakers were Robert D. Kohn, architect; M. C. Rorty, New York; Walter Elie, Cleveland; D. K. Boyd, Philadelphia, and D. A. Garber, of New York.

The Tuesday afternoon session was opened with an address by F. M. Feiker, of the McGraw-Hill Company, who spoke on the imperative need for a code of ethics for the construction industry. He outlined briefly the outstanding reasons for such a code and pointed to the work already accomplished along this line by the New York Building Congress.

The concluding work of the meeting was the adoption of the report of the program committee of which Noble Foster Hoggson was the chairman. The proposals of the committee were as follows:

The first efforts of the council should be devoted to a solution of the more pressing of the many problems which await settlement. Among the most important of these are:

The formation of a code of ethics acceptable to the industry and to the public;

The gathering of adequate statistics so that the industry may operate intelligently. While there are partial statistics collected by many sources, they have not been brought together and interpreted in the light of all the facts;

To establish and strengthen local organization throughout the country, designed to attain the cooperation of the various elements in the construction industry in conformity with the principles of the American Construction Council.

A reduction of the national shortage of building mechanics and the establishment of the necessary apprenticeship system;

To promote legislation and vocational guidance through the educational systems of the country increasingly raising the standard of efficiency and workmanship.

To cooperate in the establishment of uniform building codes throughout the country.

To cooperate with the railroads in expediting the revision of existing freight rates on construction materials which the railroads are now undertaking.

To mitigate the evils of seasonal employment in the trade migration of labor;

The encouragement of local building shows and the adoption of a publicity program capable of giving the public an adequate conception of the magnitude and the work of the construction industry.

Simplification, standardization and elimination of waste.

Educating the public to the distribution of its construction and maintenance requirements more evenly throughout the year.

To promote health and safety of employees on construction work.

To reduce loss of life and waste of construction materials from preventable fires.

To study old buildings in order to make better new buildings, and particularly buildings being demolished in order to obtain practical knowledge of comparative depreciation of material and thus to establish superior methods of construction.

To inform the public as to the necessity and economy of properly maintaining existing structures.

The program committee recommended that only the president be elected by the executive board at their meeting immediately after this session, and that the executive board then declare a recess until Friday, 3 P. M., when they will meet president-elect, Mr. Roosevelt, at his home in New York City, and proceed with the election of other officers of the board and decide what problems should be undertaken at once by the Council.

Building Activity Gains Are Noted in Local Territory

Weekly Statistics of F. W. Dodge Company Show General Improvement in Volume of New Construction Planned and Placed Under Contract

A STATISTICAL report covering local construction activity for the twenty-fourth week of this year shows continued progress in practically all branches of the industry, with an increasing volume of new work being planned and commitments under contract indicative of exceptionally busy months ahead. These figures, which were tabulated by the F. W. Dodge Company, covering the territory including all of New York State and New Jersey, north of Trenton, show that in the week of June 10 to 16, inclusive, 701 new building and engineering operations, at an estimated total cost of $22,673,100, were reported as projected or being planned. During the same week the contract commitments numbered 430 and represented a total outlay of $18,427,200.

The figures for the five boroughs of New York City also show a steady and consistent improvement in the volume of active construction. Reports for the week show that in this city plans for 295 new construction projects, estimated to cost $9,493,100, were being prepared and the contracts actually awarded during that period numbered 113 and will require a total outlay of about $10,084,000.

New York City building projects planning were grouped as follows: 57 business structures, such as stores, offices, lofts, commercial garages, etc., $1,549,500; 8 educational buildings, $1,068,300; 2 hospitals and institutions, $110,000; 6 factory and industrial projects, $496,000; 7 public works and public utilities, $375,000; 5 religious and memorial edifices, $155,000; 208 residential operations, including apartments, flats and tenements and one- and two-family dwellings, $5,727,300 and 2 social and recreational buildings, $12,000.

Among the 113 projects for which contracts were awarded during the twenty-fourth week of this year were 25 business buildings of various types, $3,465,000; 1 educational project, $35,000; 1 hospital, $19,100; 3 factory and industrial buildings, $265,000; 4 public buildings, $735,000; 6 public works and public utilities, $116,600; 4 religious and memorial structures, $250,000; 67 residential buildings such as multi-family and one- and two-family houses, $5,181,300 and 2 social and recreational projects, $17,000.

May Structural Sales at 82 Per Cent.

Sales of fabricated structural steel during May amounted to 82 per cent of fabricating capacity, according to reports made to the Department of Commerce by firms comprising 70 per cent of the fabricating capacity of the United States. The May business reported by 82 firms, having a capacity of 130,600 tons, totaled 106,620 tons as against April sales of these same firms amounting to 121,211 tons, or at the rate of 93 per cent of capacity. Total sales throughout the United States, based on the reported percentage and a total capacity of 180,000 tons, amounted to 146,900 tons in May, while revised figures for April give a total of 165,900 tons. The April figures are based on reports from 87 firms, having a total capacity of 132,600 tons, whose sales amounted to 122,198 tons, or at the rate of 92 per cent of capacity.

Preservation of Timber

The increased demand for permanent timber structures is shown in a recent report of the Service Bureau of the American Wood Preservers' Association.

Over 2,400,000,000 board feet of timber for various purposes were pressure treated in 1921 by the 122 wood preserving plants in operation throughout the United States, thereby surpassing the 1920 record by nearly 17 per cent. Approximately equal amounts were treated with coal-tar creosote and with zinc chloride, the standard wood preservatives.

To treat this wood 51,375,360 pounds of zinc chloride, with an absorption of one-half pound per cubic foot, and 79,384,326 gallons of creosote, with an absorption of 5 to over 20 pounds per cubic foot, were required.

Ease of handling and the permanence of well-treated wood at low cost are given as the reason for the increased demand. The proper use of a wood preservative adds a new quality to timber which enhances its value as a construction material.

The material treated consisted mainly of construction timbers for wharf, bridge, highway, mining and building purposes, piling, telephone and power poles, ties, fence posts, wood blocks for street paving and for factory floors, and timber for miscellaneous uses.

Simplification of Materials

Simplification of building materials as a means of eliminating waste in industry was discussed at a recent conference held between officials of the Department of Commerce and representatives of architectural, engineering and building organizations. The meeting expressed itself as being in full accord with Secretary Hoover's program for elimination of waste as a major means to the stimulation of American business. In selecting the items of building materials to be given attention first, the following were designated: Mill work, plumbing, heating, interior wall construction, hardware, lighting fixtures, clay products, the latter including brick, tile and all kinds of terra cotta, sewer pipe, and so forth. In giving these items attention the department will form sub-committees to bring together the manufacturers and others having to do with each particular commodity or service.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

R EPORTS from local construction interests during the past week indicate the industry is now at the height of the season's activity and practically all of the elements and trades composing the industry are busy to the limit of men and materials. Considerable new work has been started during the past week and contracts recently awarded predict a continuation of activity at the present rate for a long time to come. Architects and engineers are exceptionally busy with plans which include several projects of more than ordinary importance and interest and recently there has been a decided increase in the volume of new work released to the trades for estimates.

There is practically no change in the building labor situation. In the majority of trades the supply of skilled mechanics is satisfactory, but speculative builders continue to pay bonus wages for bricklayers, plasterers, painters, etc., and there is no indication that building labor costs are to be greatly reduced during the remainder of the year.

Local building material markets are all active and the volume of business reported is generally satisfactory. Prices are somewhat more stable than they were a few weeks ago and the feeling is quite general that prevailing levels will continue for some time to come. The supply situation, however, is favorable and deliveries are being made in practically all lines without delay.

Common Brick—Although arrivals of new brick were lighter this week than they were a week ago the local wholesale market has been very active. This commodity is now coming into the market in sufficient quantity to supply all immediate requirements and as a result the recent shortage has been relieved. There is now every indication that all need for anxiety over the brick supply is past and manufacturers assure the building public that this material will be forthcoming as rapidly as it can be absorbed by the industry. Prices are holding very firm and there is little prospect of a lower price level for some time to come. The heavy rains of the past week have retarded manufacturing operations in the open yards along the Hudson River and in a number of instances have spoiled a large amount of newly-moulded brick. The heavy storm of last Saturday caused particular damage. There is little change in the fuel situation. Brick producers are getting their coal on a hand-to-mouth basis and are hoping for the early settlement of the strike of the miners.

Summary—Transactions in the North

River brick market for the week ending Thursday, June 22, 1922. Condition of market: Demand active; prices, firm and unchanged. Quotations: Hudson Rivers, $20 a thousand to dealers in cargo lots alongside dock. Number of cargoes arrived, 42; sales, 42. Distribution: Manhattan, 15; Bronx, 5; Brooklyn, 16; New Jersey points, 4; Tarrytown, 1; Yonkers, 1.

Lumber—Business continues extremely active in the local lumber market. Buying is keen in both wholesale and retail departments of trade and there is promise that the demand for lumber products will maintain its prevailing intensity for some time to come. Lumber requirements of the construction industry are the dominating factor in the lumber market at present, but there is a growing volume of business coming from manufacturing consumers. Prices are very firm in the wholesale market and there is a decided upward trend to levels. This situation is reflected in the retail trade where quotations are uniformly higher than they were several months ago. Shipments from production centers have been regular, but the mills are getting far behind on their orders which are piling up faster than they are able to fill.

Structural Steel—At present the local steel situation is duller than it has been for several months past, but there are prospects of increased business in the near future. Quite a large amount of new construction is being planned by architects and engineers and it is anticipated that a good percentage of this work will shortly be released for estimates and bookings for the required steel will naturally follow soon thereafter. Reports from production centers indicate a slowing down of activity in the mills because of the serious coal situation. Prices are firm and likely to hold to the prevailing levels as the majority of the mills have considerable forward business on their books and are not anxious to commit themselves much further ahead owing to the doubt as to fuel supplies.

Builders' Hardware—The demand for these items is steadily increasing due to the growing volume of suburban construction and the intense activity of the building industry in this city. Reports from the manufacturers are indicative of steady progress in production, but a number of the leading plants are getting behind on their orders. At present local stocks are fair and jobbers are in a position to fill orders promptly, but some doubt prevails as to the ability of the industry to keep up with the demand if it gains to any extent. Prices are steady and no important changes are anticipated.

Cast Iron Pipe—Demand for this material is very keen and manufacturers are generally operating their plants on full time. Although municipal buying is lighter than anticipated it would be during the spring months private purchasers are making heavy inroads on the available supply and pipe mills are booked several months ahead. Prices are very firm with New York quotations as follows: 6 in. and larger, $50.80 per net ton; 4 in. and 5 in., $55.50; 3 in., $65.80, and Class A and gas pipe $4 extra per ton.

Window Glass—Buying has increased to some extent during the past week or so with the greatest demand coming from speculative builders who have apartment house projects in nearing the final stages of construction. There is a developing difficulty in obtaining plate glass because of the demands of the automobile manufacturing industry, but ordinary window glass is plentiful and its supply adequate for all requirements. Prices are fairly steady and no changes have been reported.

Linseed Oil—The market has improved somewhat during the week with demand slightly heavier and the outlook more favorable for active business conditions during the summer and autumn months. Prices are slightly weaker.

Nails—The demand is fairly active at present and jobbers look for a continuation of the favorable market they have enjoyed for some months past. Supplies are adequate for all demands and dealers are experiencing no difficulty in keeping their assortments up to par. Prices are firm and without change although concessions are obtainable on large orders.

Electrical Supplies—No change of importance has occurred in the market for electrical supplies during the past week. Demand continues brisk and both manufacturers and jobbers anticipate steady business throughout the remainder of the summer. The local construction program is now well advanced and requirements from this source are steadily growing in volume. Considerable business is also coming from repair work. Prices on electrical materials are generally firm and there is no immediate prospect of a softening in values. Stocks are adequate for all demands and the tone of the industry is optimistic.
